G.O.P. FEARS WET SMITH WORST IN THE WET EAST

Work Told Atlantic States Waver.

Secretary Hoover's resignation from the cabinet was placed in President Coolidge's hands yesterday. Whether it will be accepted has not been made public. Details on page 4.

BULLETIN.

Washington, D. C., July 7.—(AP)—Chairman Work of the Republican national committee announced tonight that no separate eastern organization to conduct the presidential campaign would be established for the present, but that the eastern campaign would be under the supervision of an advisory board.

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., July 7.—[Special.]—The eastern states will be the principal battleground and the Republicans are up against a hard fight in that region.

This was the prevailing opinion at a conference held by Republican National Chairman Work with national committeemen for eastern states today, following the announcement of the appointment of James W. Good of Chicago as western manager of the Republican campaign.

The fight in the west is already won, according to the Republican managers, who belittle the plans of farm leaders to organize a bolt.

"The farm revolt seems to be a flash in the pan," said one of the Republican managers. "The farmers are not fools. They see how ludicrous it is to expect farm relief of Tammany."

Alarmed Over East.

But they admit there is no blinking the serious situation confronting the Republican campaign in the east. In the wet east the wet governor of New York, holding out hopes of the restoration of beer and light wines, is going to make a powerful appeal to wet Republicans. Unless means are devised to stem this tide of threatened defection Al Smith will carry New York, Massachusetts, New Jersey, Connecticut, Rhode Island, and Delaware, according to the reports laid before Chairman Work.

Disquieting hints of the defection of wet Republicans in Pennsylvania have caused speculation on the possibility of that rock ribbed Republican state going Democratic. Dr. Work, however, refuses to get excited over the Pennsylvania alarm.

Moses in Conference.

The leaders who conferred with Dr. Work were Senator Moses of New Hampshire, and National Committeeman Hilles of New York; Peck of Rhode Island, Kinsley of Vermont, Liggett of Massachusetts and Hislop of New Hampshire as well as D. O. Hastings of Delaware, James Francis Burke of Pennsylvania, and Franklin Fort of New Jersey.

The Massachusetts, New Jersey, New York, Rhode Island and Delaware leaders agreed that these states are shot through with reaction against the prohibition law and that it is going to be exceedingly difficult to hold the wet Republicans in line for the Hoover-Curtis ticket. They were confident that the Republicans would be able to carry these states in the end, but they asserted it would be a hard fight from the drop of the hat until election day.

Headquarters Main Question.

The principal question before the conference was whether to build up a large organization centered on New York City or make Washington the main headquarters for the east with a mere branch in the metropolis. The eastern leaders pleaded for a large organization in New York City with plenty of money, speakers, propaganda and other ammunition wherewith to operate against the redoutable Al of Albany.

The conference broke up without any decision, but Dr. Work said he would have an announcement to make tomorrow afternoon, at which time it is possible he will name the eastern manager. Senator Moses is under consideration for this position.

These organization arrangements are to be completed before Secretary Hoover leaves Washington. Mr. Hoover, whose resignation from the cabinet was announced today by President Coolidge at Superior, Wis., will leave the latter part of next week for California, stopping en route to say an official farewell to President Coolidge.

Mr. Hoover will take up his resi-

HOOVER AND AL EVEN IN POLL ON NORTH SIDE

Pre-Campaign Straw Here Is Started.

BY OSCAR HEWITT.

In an effort to ascertain, before the political campaign starts, what the residents of Chicago think of the presidential nominees, THE TRIBUNE will take a straw vote, covering all sections of the city.

The first returns, all from the north side, show Hoover and Smith running a dead heat. In a total of 2,934 straws collected yesterday, the Republican candidate leads by the nominal margin of three ballots.

The significance of the approximate tie lies in the fact that the north division of Chicago—wards 42 to 50 inclusive—is usually heavily Republican. A Democratic candidate who is able to break even in that area has a good chance ordinarily of gaining a plurality in the city.

Straws Show Early Trend.

However, the purpose of this poll is not to indicate what will happen next November. The nominees of Kansas City and Houston will not be officially notified for several weeks that they are running. The party managers have not selected the main cogs in the machinery to conduct their campaigns and probably have not decided upon the sort of campaigns they will make. But the public appears to be unusually interested in who will win in November; and this poll has for its objective an indication of the trend of sentiment for each candidate before the merits and demerits of each candidate are presented along with the attacks and counter attacks.

The straws collected yesterday were at selected movie theaters and along the sidewalks of the north side while the votetakers were waiting for the crowds to arrive at the theaters. Among the 2,124 theater-goers, Al Smith showed a lead of 27 straws.

Vote From Theater Goers.

The straws obtained for each candidate at each theater are shown in the following tabulation, together with the location of each theater by street number and ward:

Ward—Theater.	Hoover....	Smith....	Thomas....	Total....
43—Windsor, 1235 N. Clark	118	187	5	310
44—Diversey, 2830 N. Clark	89	101	1	191
45—Lincoln Hip'drome 3164 N. Clark	68	56	1	125
47—North Center, 4037 N. Lincoln	137	103	9	249
48—Uptown, 4814 Broadway	202	236	8	446
49—Granada, 6433 Sheridan	190	104	5	299
50—Pershing, 4614 Lincoln	123	91	4	218
Totals	1,031	1,058	35	2,124
Per Cent	48.54	49.81	1.64	99.99

The canvasses of the street showed an advantage of 30 votes for Herbert Hoover. The straws collected for each nominee at each street location are as follows:

Ward—Street corner.	Hoover....	Smith....	Thomas....	Total....
42—Clark and Chestnut	14	18	17	49
44—Clark and Diversey	22	24	2	48
45—Lincoln, 3100 blk.	3	4	0	7
46—Belmont, 900 blk.	128	102	17	247
47—Lincoln, 4100 blk.	1	2	0	3
48—Lawrence and Broadway	220	206	8	434
49—Sheridan, 6400 blk.	10	12	0	22
Totals	398	368	44	810
Per cent	49.14	45.43	5.43	100

Combining the straws at the theaters with those gained on the street corners, the first returns of the poll show the following results for the north side:

Candidate, Party.	Votes.	Pct.
Herbert C. Hoover, Rep.	1,429	48.70
Alfred E. Smith, Dem.	1,426	48.60
Norman M. Thomas, Soc.	79	2.70
Totals	2,934	100

If the presidential election had been yesterday, instead of next November, the sons of Jefferson would be highly elated, because the north side is much more consistently Republican than either of two large divisions of the city.

North Side and Rest of City.

Democratic National Committeeman George E. Brennan, as a candidate for United States senator, showed more strength on the north side than is indicated by THE TRIBUNE poll at present for Al Smith. Brennan won the north side wards by a total vote of 60,473 to 50,028 for Frank L. Smith. This margin of advantage for Brennan of 10,445 votes on the north side foreshadowed Brennan's victory in Chicago by a plurality of 73,581.

For those who desire to do their

THE MASTER OF THE WORLD

SYNOPSIS.

Paul Rayburn, a scientist employed by the Grannett company, discovers a method by which he thinks he can talk with Mars. He loses his job, but continues his experiments, and, after financial difficulties, in which he is aided by Theodora Downs, the rather plain cousin of his former employer's daughter, Eleanor Grannett, he gets into communication with Mars, learning, among other things, how to change gold into platinum and how to make women beautiful.

Rayburn is waited upon by a group of eminent financiers, who have arrived to offer him $1,000,000 for his inventions, while admitting among themselves that they are worth five billions, but, reading their minds, he laughs at them and leaves them astounded. For his next experiment Rayburn selects Fay Thornton, known on the stage as the world's homeliest woman, and announces that he will make her beautiful.

The success achieved by Rayburn in this experiment created more of a sensation than any of his other discoveries, but despite his announcement that he will conduct no more beautifying experiments, one persistent dowager connives with Grannett, his former employer, to meet the young man socially. Grannett turns to Fay Thornton and she persuades Rayburn to attend the party. When he arrives he is surrounded by women whose ambition it is to be made beautiful, and, being able to read their mind and seeing their greed and avarice, he makes a speech ridiculing them and then leaves them dumfounded.

Rayburn discovers that the Grannett company is using questionable methods to obtain use of his discoveries and decides to chastise Grannett, his former employer, some more. He gets from Mars the secret of how an aging man can trade his declining years for half as many years of vigorous youth and then makes arrangements with Uncle Jim, an elderly employé of the Grannett companies, and tries the experiment on him. While his experiments in rejuvenation are in progress some one tries to kill Rayburn, but he miraculously escapes.

The President of the United States sends for him and he learns that several nations are plotting to take his life. He assures the President and his cabinet that his discoveries are at the disposal of his country, but hopes that they will be used to prevent rather than carry on war.

CHAPTER XXXVI.

A dead silence followed Rayburn's last remark.

"Have you hopes of such a discovery?" asked the President.

Rayburn hesitated. His mysterious informant on Mars had often told him war had long ago been abolished as a savage and unsatisfactory means of settling differences. It was conceivable that he could also reveal a short cut to establishing that point of view here on the earth. Meanwhile Rayburn knew that Mars would disapprove his use of his amazing secrets selfishly and not in the interest of all mankind. Rayburn regarded himself as a steward who must give an account of his stewardship. All this, however, he was not yet ready to disclose.

"Certainly until some one does find a means of insuring peace," he said, evasively, "the use selfishly by one nation of such of my secrets as have military value would reduce all other nations to a state of resentful inferiority."

"But you must realize," interrupted the President, "that our nation would only use them unselfishly. The record of this country is proof of its peaceful intentions."

"I am proud to agree with you, Mr. President. It is only to assure myself that this record may continue that I hesitate." Here he shot a sudden penetrating glance at the Secretary of Aviation, who flushed with embarrassment. "Would there not be a temptation to use its overwhelming military mastery if a nation came into possession of such weapons?"

"I sympathize with your point of view, Mr. Rayburn," said the President earnestly, "but what do you suggest?"

"That is a matter for able statesmen to determine," answered Rayburn, "but I think other nations will now give this country a most respectful hearing in case there's another disarmament conference."

The President sadly shook his head. "Yes, they will listen as long as we have something they want, but not when they have something we want. If we went into a conference possessed of these tremendous military secrets they would unite in demanding a share of them, or else fight for an agreement outlawing the use of them." His face was grim. "When an idealist goes into conference with a group of realists, experience has proven that he has reason to be wary."

"Why talk of conferences," exclaimed the Secretary of War impatiently. "With Rayburn's discoveries we are invincible. No nation would dare attack us. Our mere threat to interfere would subdue any nation disturbing the peace of the world."

"Doubtless, but that would make us the policeman of the world, and I hardly believe this nation would care to assume that function."

"You may be certain any other nation holding the advantage Mr. Rayburn's discoveries have given us would not be thinking of humanity! They would be thinking and acting in terms of national advantage only." The Secretary of War spoke with heat and conviction. He was about to continue when the President's secretary entered and whispered to the President, who thereupon turned to the tense group around the table.

"It will interest you to hear," he said, "that the ambassadors of five world powers wish to make an appointment with me. There is no doubt as to their purpose. I shall see them at eleven tomorrow." The secretary withdrew. The President turned to Rayburn with a grave smile.

"You have started something, young man, that I wish you knew how to finish! I wish I could include you in that conference," he went on as if to himself, "with that uncanny gift of intuition, he could learn more of their real intentions than I shall after a two hours' talk. But official etiquette forbids including an unofficial outsider."

"Meanwhile," he turned to the Chief of the Secret Service, "everything possible must be done to insure Mr. Rayburn's safety. Even his presence in the city must not become public."

"I shall be glad to put Mr. Rayburn up," said the Secretary of the Treasury. "My family shall not know his identity." He smiled at Rayburn. "You will not mind posing as a book expert looking over my library?"

"It will be a pleasure."

When the meeting broke up, Rayburn was driven to the Secretary's beautiful residence, where he was introduced as Mr. Margate, a young librarian, accompanied by two "assistant librarians," husky, determined looking men who were anything but bookish in appearance.

The daughter of the Secretary found him browsing in the spacious library and was much puzzled by his reticence.

"For an expert," she thought, "this Mr. Margate is certainly successful in keeping his book knowledge a profound secret!"

SLOW TO RAISE HIS HANDS, HE IS SHOT TO DEATH

Police of the Marquette station last night were investigating the fatal shooting of Thomas Finnegan, 30 years old, 1438 North Lorel street, a conductor for the Surface Lines, by robbers who walked into a basement at 2645 West 17th street, where a dozen men were playing cards, and fired a shot at him when he was slow in raising his hands.

Finnegan was taken to St. Anthony's hospital where he died soon after police arrived with him. Seven of the men in the party, including William Stonack, were taken into custody and questioned. Early this morning Michael Sabie, 19, 1340 South Talman avenue, was arrested and identified by William Stonack Jr., son of the host, as one of the robbers. Sabie denied knowing anything about the holdup or shooting.

In another card game holdup John Badl, 1119 Altgeld street, was so severely wounded by a robber's bullet that his recovery was said to be doubtful. The game was at the home of Sol Joseph, 2244 North Halsted street. Joseph told the police three robbers entered by a rear door and ordered the five poker players to "stick 'em up." Badl resisted and was shot.

PLAN 80 MINUTE AIR TRIP, PHILA. TO WALL STREET

Philadelphia, Pa., July 7.—[Special.]—An 80 minute trip from the Philadelphia city hall to the New York financial district will be offered by a corporation which plans to establish an airport for sea and land planes on Petty's island in the Delaware river here, it was announced today by Edmund H. Poggi, architect, who is the agent for the backers.

Mr. Poggi said the fast trip to Wall street would be made available through the establishment of a landing field at an undisclosed site "near the Hudson tubes." Hitherto no air service has obtained a site which would "put the passenger down" at a convenient distance from downtown New York.

Air Daredevil Sued by Wife as Plane Flirt

Emory W. Westlake, young sportsman and realty operator, is planning a non-stop flight from Chicago to Paris, according to his wife's complaint in a suit for separate maintenance filed yesterday. She related the contemplated hop as evidence of her husband's neglect of his family.

"He was almost killed in a crash last Labor day," said the wife, Mrs. Marie Kramer Westlake, who resides at 5468 Cornell avenue. "He terrifies me with his talk of flying over the Atlantic. I'll get the courts to enjoin him, if necessary, to save him from the danger. He must be made to consider me and our baby."

Mr. Westlake was seriously injured on Sept. 1 in a nose dive at Rushville, Ill., that took the life of his business associate, A. Edward Frear.

Flirtations on High Plane.

Mrs. Westlake gives another reason for wanting to keep her husband on the ground. Her bill, drawn by Attorney Robert E. Cantwell Jr., charges that the defendant used his plane for flirtations. This charge is unique in a Cook county divorce court document.

"Girls from Chicago's better families would not think of going automobile riding with a young married man, unchaperoned," Mrs. Westlake said, "but they would fall for my husband's invitation for a spin in the air.

"He has picked up young women at a golf club, flying away with them from the links. He is a daredevil as a pilot and he thrills his girl companions by his exploits. They'd sail through clouds, overfields and towns, and Mr. Westlake would not fail to take advantage of such a romantic setting to promote his affairs of the heart."

An Elopement Romance.

Mr. and Mrs. Westlake were married on Jan. 31, 1919, when they eloped from the University of Chicago. She was 17 years old and the marriage was annulled. She returned to school and they again eloped and were remarried on May 12, 1921. Quarrels over his aviation activities and his alleged drinking habits brought about a separation on June 30, according to the bill. They have one child, Emory W. Westlake III, 2 years old.

The plaintiff is a daughter of the late Louis A. Kramer, wealthy manufacturer of packing house machinery, who resided for many years at 5332 Hyde Park boulevard. The defendant is the son and heir of the late Emory W. Westlake, packer.

Ship Sinks; 291 Die; Captain Kills Himself

SANTIAGO, Chile, July 7.—(AP)—Two hundred and ninety-one lives were lost when the army transport Angamos sank today in the bay of Arauco, according to information given out tonight by the ministry of marine.

Eighty of the victims were passengers. Only five members of the crew were saved, according to early reports of the accident.

(The Angamos was a steamer of 5,975 tons. She was built in Scotland in 1890 and was refitted by the Chilean government two years ago.)

German Pilots Set New World Flight Record

BY SIGRID SCHULTZ.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

DESSAU, Germany, July 7.—Germany recaptured the world duration flight record today. The Junkers single motor W-33, flown by the Hungarian pilot Johann Risticz, and the daredevil, A. H. Zimmermann, remained in the air 65 hours 31 minutes. They covered approximately 5,000 miles, but gave up measuring the distance because gales and thunderstorms drove them off their measured course between Dessau and Leipzig.

The record surpasses that made this week by Capt. Ferrarin and Maj. Del Prete, previous record holders, who flew from Rome to Brazil in 59 hours, bettering by 25 minutes their own world's record of 58 hours 34 minutes.

Hits Electrical Storm.

The first 36 hours of the flight was made in fair weather, but yesterday they hit heavy electrical and rainstorms. Today, having weathered the storms, the plane was throttled down and six hours added to the flight by fuel economy.

The plane, which is similar to the Bremen, started at 4:04 Thursday morning and landed at 9:35 this evening, when the fuel gave out. They carried 660 gallons of gas.

Held Record Last Year.

Risticz last year held the duration record, together with Cornelius Edsard, until America took it from him. He tried to fly to America at the same time Capt. Hermann Koehl made his attempt last year. His co pilot, Zimmermann, acquired fame when he flew former Emperor Karl of Hungary on his last effort to recapture the throne.

While they were cruising over Dessau Prof. Hugo Junkers, the constructor of the plane, returned from his trip to America. When interviewed he said he was most deeply impressed with the American manufacture of airplanes, which he will help to emulate in Germany.

PAINT DEALER SHOT BY YOUNG AUTO THIEVES

Ernest C. Reich, 46, wealthy head of the paint company bearing his name at 5802 South State street, was shot under the heart and seriously wounded last night by one of three 18 year old youths who entered his garage at the rear of his home at 7651 Cornell avenue and demanded his automobile as he was putting it away for the night. Neighbors took him to the Jackson Park hospital, where physicians said he is in serious condition.

RELIEF IS DUE THIS EVENING AFTER 93° JOLT

Farmers Rejoice in Help to Crops.

Yesterday was Chicago's hottest day thus far in 1928, the mercury reaching a maximum of 93 in the loop at 4 p. m., and of 92 at the weather bureau station at the University of Chicago. Today, according to the official forecast, will also be excessively warm until cooling showers arrive in the late afternoon or evening.

Crowds second only to those of the Fourth of July, flocked to the beaches and the parks, and the beach superintendents predicted that the bathers today would outnumber even the holiday throngs.

In the Chicago metropolitan area nine deaths were attributed, at least in part, to the extreme heat. There were two drownings.

Over 100 in Nebraska.

The hot wave was general in the middle west and the east. Points in Nebraska recorded temperatures beyond the century mark. At Tekamah it was 103, at Lincoln, North Loup and O'Neill, 101, at Broken Bow, 100. At Peru and Rockford, Ill., maximums of 94 were registered.

Farmers in the Mississippi valley, delayed by an unfavorable spring and by recent heavy rains, rejoiced at the heat. Growing corn was reported to be making rapid strides under the blazing sun.

C. A. Donnel, official weather forecaster, explained the reasons for the high temperatures and for the discomfort caused.

"A high pressure area in the east," he said, "is holding back a low pressure area in the northwest, where it has already grown much cooler. The rains will bring a change to more comfortable conditions and Monday should see the end of this period of heat for a time at least. The high humidity which accompanied the temperature in the 90s caused the discomfort."

Crowds Flock to Beaches.

The mercury stood at 74 at 6 a. m. Through most of Friday night it had been near 78. At 9 a. m. yesterday it was 82 and at 11 o'clock, 85. The 92 mark was reached at 1 p. m. and the trek to the beaches began. At Clarendon beach it was reported that the lake water was 70 degrees warm, while readings at the south park beaches showed it was but 62.

During the evening the mercury sank only a little. At 9 p. m. it still clung to 88, at 10 p. m. the mark was 86, and at midnight it was, unofficially, 83. The maximum yesterday was not near the record for July 7, however, 97 having been recorded on this date in 1874.

The city's warmest days usually come after July 15, according to Forecaster Donnel. The highest temperature ever recorded here was 103 on July 21, 1901.

Deaths from the Heat.

The nine persons whose deaths were attributed in part to the heat were:

Mrs. Kate Loftis, 44, of 7218 South Rockwell street, found dead in bed.

Mrs. Kate Jackson, 69, of 6651 Blackstone avenue, who collapsed in the Jackson Park theater, 67th street and Stony Island avenue.

Mrs. Alice Richardson, 50, of 332 East 39th street.

Edward Walsh, 5808 South Homan avenue, found dead in the basement of the Wabash avenue police station, where he had asked permission to sleep.

In all the deaths heart disease was apparently a contributory cause.

Two Persons Drowned.

The two drowning victims were Louis Pelican, 19, of 4427 West Haddon avenue and a colored youth believed to have been John Toler, 21, of 359 Alexander street. Toler was drowned in the lake off 18th street.

Pelican perished in the Des Plaines river near Elmwood Park. He had gone into the water with four companions. He is said to have pretended to be drowning several times and his friends went to him. When he called for help the last time they thought it another hoax and he sank.

The bodies of a boy and a youth who were drowned several days ago were recovered. County highway police took the body of Jesse Beal, 14, of Brookfield from Salt creek, in which he died on last Thursday.

The body of Lemuel Eddy, 20, of Anamoose, N. D., a Northwestern university student, who, with Miss Eloise Root, 19, a senior in Oak Park High school, was drowned in the Des Plaines river near North avenue, Maywood, on Tuesday night, when their canoe overturned, was also recovered. Miss Root's body was found on Friday.

Collapses When at Work.

Davricay Munirov, 35, of 9816 Commercial avenue, collapsed from the heat while at work at the Illinois Steel company works, 3426 East 89th street, late yesterday. He was given emergency treatment at the company hospital, and then was taken to the Jackson Park hospital, where his condition is said to be serious.

Capt. Thomas Canavan and his squad revived a heat victim last night after two hours' hard work. The victim, Sol Berents, 59 years old, fell out of a chair unconscious in his home at 709 West 64th street.

Brain Fever Laid to Sun.

Miss Viola Bess, 30, of 3040 Darwin terrace, suffered an attack of brain fever said to have been brought on by the heat and exposure to the sun. She was taken to the county hospital, where it was said her condition was serious.

George Miller, 66, of 125 South Halsted street, and John Smith, 40, of 1743 Warren avenue, were given treatment at the county hospital after they had collapsed on the street.

The number of bathers expected at the south park beaches today is 100,000, approximately the same number as appeared on July 4. The parks have 150 life guards and policewomen are present to enforce moral standards of the swimmers. The Lincoln park forces expect 125,000.

In both parks the old regulations concerning the length and general appearance of bathing suits technically are ineffect, but employés have orders to use common sense. For instance they are not expected to make absolutely sure that women's suits come to within four inches of the patella, or knee, or to see that the full skirt regulation is followed. The governing ordinance was passed in 1917 and is considered out of date.

Telegraph messages sent into and out of Chicago last night were seriously delayed by earth currents thrown out by the aurora borealis. The Western Union company had so much work piled up by the disturbance that some of its operators had to work twelve hour shifts, or longer.

The tie-up affected wires all over the country. At New York, San Francisco and Atlanta main trunk lines were only partly serviceable for several hours. Operators reported that the familiar "fading" or intermittent finding and loss of sound on the instruments held down their speed. The disturbance was said to be the worst in years.

Among those who experienced difficulty on account of the conditions was the weather bureau. Their messages from cities in many parts of the country were as much as an hour late. The aurora borealis, the phenomena of which are not well understood, clogs the telegraph circuits on an average about twice a year. The tieup of last night is said to have affected the European cables as well as the land wires.

SPANISH WAR VETS SELECT PONTIAC FOR 1929 MEETING

Mt. Vernon, Ill., July 7.—[Special.]—Pontiac was selected today as the 1929 meeting place of the United Spanish War Veterans at the close of their three day encampment and reunion here. Moline also sought the honor.

These officers were chosen for the ensuing year: Samuel M. Wright, commander; Michael F. Kelley of Chicago, senior vice commander; John A. Sutherland of Pontiac, junior vice commander; Ernest Ermel of Chicago, inspector; J. W. Clendenin of Monmouth, judge advocate; Maj. Andy Hall of Mt. Vernon, surgeon; Rev. H. W. Jameson of Cairo, chaplain; Dr. J. N. Goltra of Evanston, historian; C. W. Harkness of East St. Louis, patriotic instructor; Victor Sranek of Chicago, marshall.

The meeting endorsed Oscar E. Carlstrom for attorney general and Dean Charles M. Thompson of the state university to succeed Herbert Hoover as secretary of commerce. The attendance of 286 is said to have been exceeded but once in the 25 years' history of the organization.

LOEWENSTEIN ON YACHT, NOT DEAD, LATEST THEORY

Claim He Dropped from Slowed Up Plane.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]
[Copyright: 1928: By The Chicago Tribune.]

LONDON, July 7.—There is a dramatic story going around London financial circles today connected with the mystery of Capt. Alfred Loewenstein's supposed death three days ago, which, if true—and this is possible like any other theory if connected with a man having a character such as the Belgian financier—is the most daring move the financial world has known.

Since the moment of the banker's purported plunge from his palatial plane to death in the English channel, no actual facts have been obtained which would serve to clear up the question whether the strange disappearance of the man who was called the third richest in the world, was real or a gigantic hoax.

This newest story, which must be taken with every reservation, declares Capt. Loewenstein did, as reported, enter his airplane and leave Croydon airdrone. The pilot and other occupants of the machine are ready to sign a sworn statement to this effect.

Claim He Jumped to Yacht.

However, while over the channel, according to the story, midway between England and France, the plane flew a few feet above the sea and its owner jumped out, was picked up by a yacht which he had hired for the purpose, and is believed to be proceeding to America.

This theory would explain speculation as to why the collar and tie of the banker were taken off carefully and not torn, as in the case of a man in a frenzy of suffocating.

Again it was pointed out that if the pilot slowed down and circled the sea to permit Capt. Loewenstein to jump, the wind pressure on the door would have lessened considerably, and the door could have been opened easily.

Postpone Memorial Service.

The pilot, confronted by experts, admitted it would be almost out of the question for one man, especially a man having a heart attack, to open the door alone. He declared he was unable to say what had happened, other than the fact that anything might have happened.

It also was pointed out that a heavy body suddenly leaving the machine must have been felt in some way.

The mystery deepened as the memorial service in Belgium for the supposedly dead financier was postponed today. The pilot and other occupants of the plane were ordered to proceed to Brussels immediately to give the authorities a full account of the incident.

Financial experts declare that some one cleaned up a few millions when stocks in Capt. Lowenstein's companies crashed, following the report of his death, but it is not clear who, and it is hinted it may have been the financier's own agents. It is not believed that the mere announcement of the directors of the companies of which he was chairman that, as far as they knew, no large holdings were held by Capt. Loewenstein and in the main were unencumbered, made the interests suddenly leap up again. There must have been considerable buying as well.

The Loewenstein affair comes as a climax to the long struggle between the Belgian banker and Henri Dreyfus to get the British Celanese and Loewenstein interests linked up.

It is suggested that Capt. Loewenstein may be on his way to America to buy up Celanese stock in big quantities, or at least make some dramatic move in this direction, impossible in European markets.

The Evening Standard reports that a mysterious stranger disembarked Thursday morning from the steamer Flamande, operating between Dunkirk and Tillbury.

Air board officials today testified that Capt. Loewenstein was seen to leave Croydon, Mechanic Little declares that after starting the engines he entered the machine and closed the door after him, and saw the financier in his seat, he said that during the journey over he saw Capt. Loewenstein looking out of a window down at Goodwin Sands, and the next time he looked around, he had gone.

It was stated that Maj. Rogers, Imperial Airways pilot, who was flying 800 yards behind Capt. Loewenstein's plane at the time he was supposed to have fallen out, did not see anything fall from the machine, and it is certain he would have noticed had anything dropped.

237 ILLEGITIMATE INFANTS BORN IN PARIS IN 10 DAYS

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS, July 7.—Out of 1,145 babies born in Paris in the last ten days, 237 were illegitimate, a ratio of one to four, the regular fortnightly statement of the bureau of statistics reveals.

Only eight illegitimates were "recognized," which is what happens in French law when the father steps forward and shoulders the responsibility for the child's upbringing. Figures for the countryside are said to be even worse.

The illegitimacy rate has been climbing so fast that moralist societies, which have been busy warring on absinthe and promiscuous petting in parks and railroad stations, are clamoring for stricter enforcement of the few laws governing morality that have crept into the French statutes. Thus far, Mrs. Grundy's attempts always have been balked by militarists to which an illegitimate boy is just as useful as a legitimtae one.

NEW YORK-TO-ROME HOP BELIEVED NEAR; RUSH GAS TO FIELD

Roosevelt Field, N. Y., July 7.—(AP)—Hurried preparations today convinced the Long Island flying colony that the long awaited non-stop flight to Rome of Capt. Cesare Sabelli in the monoplane Roma was imminent.

A quantity of special high test gasoline was brought to the field today, and more, sufficient for a transoceanic flight, was ordered delivered this evening. Food was ordered prepared tonight, weather charts were rushed from New York, and strenuous efforts were made all day to obtain detailed reports from ships at sea. The long runway of the field was inspected and pronounced fit to bear a heavily loaded plane.

Observers pointed out that weather conditions generally favor an attempt at this time.

Girl Weds on Deathbed After Illness of Week

Miss Gertrude Sutfin, 21 years old, 6602 Lowe avenue, was married shortly before her death at the German Deaconess hospital last night to Charles Braidman, 22 years old. The marriage was witnessed by a nurse and was performed at the bedside of the dying girl. Miss Sutkin became ill at her home last Sunday and was taken to the hospital.

ROBBERS AMBUSH YOUTHS IN HOME AND SHOOT ONE

Seymour Dexter, 22, son of a Galesburg, Ill., business man and a graduate last June of Northwestern university college of commerce, was shot in the right shoulder last night by one of two young gunmen who ambushed him in his home at the Rosemore apartment hotel, 4324 Kenmore avenue.

With Dexter when he entered the apartment was his roommate, Lyman Moore of Tulsa, Okla., also a Northwestern university graduate. As the two trespassers confronted the young men Dexter grappled with one, who broke away and shot him. Moore wrested a pistol from the other, and both the intruders fled.

Dexter was taken to the American hospital, where it was said he would recover. Town Hall police took Moore into custody and said they would hold him for questioning.

Moore told the police that he and Dexter had been betting heavily on horse races and had won more than $3,000 from a bookmaker in the vicinity of Commonwealth and Diversey avenues. He said they had collected nearly $600 on a bet made yesterday and that their two assailants evidently had heard of it.

KAISER, RESIGNED TO FATE, LEADS HUMDRUM LIFE

DOORN, Holland, July 7.—(AP)—William II., last of German emperors, has become a movie fan. One of his principal diversions now in the evening is watching motion pictures. One of the salons of the Hohenzollern castle here has been rigged up as a projection room and German motion picture concerns see to it that their former emperor is well supplied with films. The former kaiser delights especially in travel pictures. His next preference is scientific films.

Globe trotter that he was formerly, the ex-kaiser now seldom leaves Doorn. He owns four automobiles, among them a large gray open touring car which he prefers for his own rides, but in recent months, Doorn villagers say, they have seldom seen him go on a drive.

"The claim of two French newspapers that he has been across the German border three times is too absurd for words," Admiral H. Von Rebeur-Paschwitz, chief of the ex-kasier's household, said.

Ex-Kaiser Well Guarded.

When the former emperor does leave Doorn to visit some Dutch aristocratic family, Maj. Van Houten, a Dutch officer designated by Queen Wilhelmina to exercise a certain control on his majesty's movements, takes a seat in the auto.

From time to time. Also, the Dutch minister of Agriculture, J. B. Kan, who is a personal friend of William II., comes to Doorn to inquire into the health and well-being of the former ruler. The visit often ends in a game of tennis between the ex-kaiser and the minister. A tennis court was laid out on the Doorn estate about a year ago.

Besides Maj. Van Houten, four members of the national rural constabulary and one secret service man are the only evidence that the former ruler is a virtual prisoner—unless the high fence surmounted by barbed wire, which surrounds the Hohenzollern estate of some thirty acres, be considered as added evidence.

Resigned to His Fate.

During the first years after his banishment, the Dutch government had a far larger staff to watch events at Doorn. It is now quite apparent, however, that William II. is resigned to his fate and looks upon Doorn as his permanent abode. The laying out of the flower garden, which was opened to the public on May 15, but is still Hohenzollern property, points in that direction. So does the erection of a large garage, which is about to be completed. So, also, does William II.'s evident effort to identify himself actively with the community.

Every child in Doorn knows the former emperor by sight, and it seems to be an unwritten law that everybody should remove his hat respectfully as he passes the former ruler. William II. always returns the greeting, but when somebody of "high birth" passes him his hat comes off with an added flourish.

Not Hard to See Him.

To get a glimpse of the former emperor or even a close-up is not difficult if one "knows the ropes." The best way is to keep an eye on Mynheer Bolthuis, the secret service man. About half an hour before William II. is likely to emerge from his estate for a stroll along the village street or into the woods, Bolthuis may be seen leaning nonchalantly against a tree opposite the little gate leading to the flower garden and pretending hard not to be on duty. He is deeply engrossed in whittling a piece of wood, and the bicycle standing by his side seems to be there by accident.

The daily stroll usually takes place around 7 p. m. The former emperor then retires to dress for 8 o'clock dinner, which is as formal and ceremonious an affair as though it took place in the palace at Potsdam. William II. dons one of his numerous uniforms, his consort and other guests appear in evening dress, and the servants in formal livery. The menu is rather simple.

Refuses to have Radio.

After dinner, the movies. There is no radio entertainment, because neither William nor his wife, Hermine, believe in it. No radio set has been installed. As Hermine is reported to have put it, "better a good grammophone plate than that everlasting jazz out of the ether."

At times a concert is given by some German string quartet or soloist of note, but these occasions are rare, and the villagers say they seldom hear music issuing from Doorn castle.

Nor are there balls, dances and similar entertainments, except occasionally a festival arranged for the personnel of about thirty, and their families.

The former emperor still wears a mourning band on his arm, which some say is retained out of respect for his first wife, Empress Auguste Victoria, while others maintain it indicates the ex-kaiser's mourning for the "lost fatherland."

An Early Riser.

William II. is an early riser. Seven o'clock finds him up and around. Every day he carries a rose into the room in which his first wife died. At 8:30 he conducts morning devotion exercises, which everybody on the estate, from maid to honored guest, is expected to attend. Often the ex-Kaiser merely reads from a religious book. At times, however, he takes some Biblical text and expounds it as he used to do when he conducted services on the high seas as commander of the imperial fleet.

About once a month, on a Sunday, regular church is held. Pastor Herbst of the German church at the Hague, or some visiting parson from Germany conducts services.

After devotions, the ex-Kaiser retires to his study, where he attends to the correspondence that is placed in his hands in red leather folders emblazoned with gilded letters, "His Majesty's Emperor William II's correspondence." These letters are mostly from monarchists in the fatherland, but also from men of science.

Still Likes to Saw Wood.

The correspondence attended to, his majesty—nobody in Doorn thinks of speaking of William II. as an "ex"—often strolls into the rosarium with Kaiserin Hermine, or walks among the centuries-old oak trees of his estate, or, if he can find a tree that needs cutting down, resorts to his old favorite occupation of tree felling.

Lunch is served between 1 and 2 p. m. From 2 to 4 silence is preserved throughout the estate, as the former emperor and his family always take an afternoon nap. There follows afternoon coffee, whereupon the emperor usually returns to his study and later goes on a walk through the village. Often, too, he has guests to entertain. Or, he is invited by some Dutch aristocrat in the neighborhood, in which case the daily routine is somewhat upset. On the whole, however, life at Doorn is marked by regularity and peaceful repose.

SUE FOR RECOUNT ON $15,500,000 PARK BOND ISSUE

Taxpayers Charge Fraud in South Side Voting.

The passage of $15,500,000 South Park bonds is disputed in three taxpayers' suits filed in the Circuit court yesterday asking for a recount of the ballots cast on the propositions June 4.

The returns on the bonds, as tabulated after the closing of the polls, were as follows:

	For.	Against.
$5,000,000 [parks]	45,606	37,680
$3,000,000 [Soldiers' field]	49,237	36,584

The petitioners alleged that errors in tallying and fraud in voting as well as counting were responsible for the returns approving the bonds. A recount would reverse the results, it is contended.

Ten Join as Plaintiffs.

The suits are brought by Frederick J. MacGuidwin, 6138 University avenue, and nine other taxpayers in behalf of themselves and all other taxpayers. They are represented by Attorney Joseph M. Larimer.

The improvements financed by these bonds are part of the plans for the 1933 world's fair. The largest of the three issues jeopardized by the litigation is for the construction of three islands off Grant park. These islands were projected as sites for the main exhibition buildings of the centennial.

Work Already Under Way.

The $3,000,000 issue is for the completion of the Grant park stadium. The south park commissioners have already awarded the contract for this work and construction is under way, the contractor anticipating that he will be paid from the bond issue.

The $5,000,000 issue is for miscellaneous improvements in the south park district.

Commissioner Louis J. Behan, when told of the suits, said the park board was preparing ordinances to be passed in the near future authorizing sale of the $15,500,000 bonds as required.

MIAMI OFFICIAL TO QUIZ CAPONE ON UALE SLAYING

Miami, Fla., July 7.—[Special.]—Al Capone will appear before R. R. Taylor, county solicitor, Monday for questioning regarding Capone's alleged connection with the murder in Brooklyn last Sunday of Frank Uale, wealthy gangster. Taylor has issued a subpœna for the Chicago gangland chieftain.

The county solicitor will ask Capone the names of three men whom New York authorities believe left Capone's home here the Friday night preceding the shooting for New York, where they joined a fourth man, and then killed Uale.

Reprisal for the death just a year ago of Deamato, a Brooklyn lieutenant of Capone's, may have been responsible for the death of Uale, according to the police theory.

VERDICT AGAINST BETTY BORDEN IN AUTO CASE

Miss Betty Borden, debutante daughter of John Borden, millionaire sportsman, was found guilty yesterday of negligent driving. A jury before Superior Judge Harry Stuttle ordered her to pay $2,750 to Mrs. Gertrude Hakanson, 1402 Sherwood avenue, for injuries suffered when struck by Miss Borden's automobile in April of last year.

Mrs. Hakanson sued for $40,000. Her attorney said he will ask for a new trial. Counsel for Miss Borden was also dissatisfied with the verdict and said he will join in the defendant's motion, to be heard July 16.

Miss Borden was arrested on a charge of "assault with a deadly weapon" after her roadster bumped into Mrs. Hakanson at Clark and Schiller streets. The criminal case was dismissed.

GERMANS RESENT FLYERS' VISIT TO FORMER KAISER

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BERLIN, July 7.—The old Rhine town of Cologne had prepared a huge reception for tonight in honor of Capt. Hermann Koehl, Baron Ehrenfried Gunther von Huenefeld and Maj. James Fitzmaurice, the German-Irish trans-Atlantic flyers, but when it was learned that they had stopped at Doorn to visit the former kaiser the official festivities were canceled. Cologne considers the visit to Doorn an affront against republican Germany, and Capt. Koehl and Baron von Huenefeld have lost a good deal of their popularity, becoming, in the eyes of the republicans, party politicians rather than national heroes. The comrades of the two flyers, however, say they will support them in this new struggle, because the vist was an act of human politeness of officers to their former war lord in exile and loneliness.

Funeral Services Tuesday for Dr. R. W. Bartholomew

Funeral services for Dr. Roy W. Bartholomew, for more than 20 years a practicing physician in Evanston, were tentatively set yesterday for 2 p. m. Tuesday from his late residence at 2109 Sherman avenue to Memorial Park cemetery. Dr. Bartholomew died suddenly Friday of heart disease. He was 51 years old and is survived by his widow, Mathilda, two daughters, Lois and Jeanette, and his mother, Mrs. Julia Bartholomew, of California.

$500,000 GRAIN ELEVATOR FIRE AT MILWAUKEE

Milwaukee, Wis., July 7.—(AP)—Fire breaking out tonight in the grain elevator of J. M. Riebs Jr. of Milwaukee has caused a probable loss of $500,000. One hundred thousand bushels of grain were reported to have been stored in the elevator, which was 100 feet high and 100 feet long. The company's malt house was in imminent danger.

WET AL FEARED WORST IN WET EAST BY G. O. P.

Atlantic States Waver, Work Informed.

dence for the summer at Palo Alto, his California home, where he will be notified officially of his nomination, probably on Aug. 10, his fifty-fourth birthday. About Sept. 1 he will return to Washington for two months of intensive campaigning which will include a number of formal addresses in the east and the middle west, numerous radio speeches, and "front porch" talks to visiting delegations.

Dr. Work and the eastern leaders were the guests of Mr. Hoover at dinner tonight, after which the discussion of the eastern situation was continued, with the candidate participating.

Mr. Hoover was the guest of honor today at a luncheon given by J. D. Barnum, editor of the Syracuse (N. Y.) Post-Standard and president of the New York Publishers' association, to 25 New York newspaper owners at the Carlton hotel. After the luncheon Mr. Hoover answered questions confidentially regarding his views on public questions.

Predicting that the Hoover-Curtis ticket will sweep the country, including the corn belt, Mr. Good departed for Chicago at 3 p. m. He said he will obtain headquarters and begin campaign operations within the next week.

Mr. Good's forecast of victory was made in the department of commerce building at the conclusion of a long conference with Mr. Hoover on conditions in the midwest. The protective tariff and farm relief were named by Mr. Good as the issues which will be of outstanding importance in the central west during the campaign.

Leaders to Meet Here.

A meeting of national committeemen from all the states west of the Pennsylvania border will be held at Chicago soon to lay plans for the campaign and set up the Republican organization.

Announcement that Mr. Good would be the western manager came from the office of Chairman Work following a series of conferences between Mr. Work and the nominee. From Republicans close to Mr. Hoover it was learned that he had virtually drafted the Chicago man for the place.

It was also apparent that Mr. Good has won the terms for which he has been fighting since the western post was offered him two weeks ago. At that time Mr. Good insisted that he must have a comparatively free hand to manage the western campaign as he pleased. It is understood that Chairman Work did not take very kindly to the stipulations of Mr. Good, but the announcement today that the Chicago lawyer had accepted the post was taken to mean that all differences had been adjusted.

Mr. Good was jubilant and smiling when he emerged from the Hoover private offices after his prolonged conference.

"It certainly looks like a Republican victory," he told the newspapermen. "We are going to get to work in the west right away. We will carry the whole western country. There is very little question but that every state will be found in the Republican ranks."

"What issues will be stressed?"

"The protective tariff will be one of the big issues. The farmers know the principle of protection must be applied to their farms and they want it applied by the party that believes in it. They will not trust the Democrats to administer a tariff they do not believe in.

"Aligned with the protective tariff must be legislation that will help the farmer."

Youth Steals an Airplane and Crashes Into a Cell

Indianapolis, Ind., July 7.—[Special.]—Neveldo Moreano, a bronzed youth, who refused to divulge details of his past life, was arrested on the street here this afternoon for the theft of an airplane at Muncie. After stealing the ship he crashed in the take-off and then fled.

HOOVER RESIGNS, BUT PRESIDENT MAY KEEP HIM ON

Will Visit Chief and Decide Course.

Superior, Wis., July 7.—[Special.]—Whether Secretary Hoover will continue as a member of the Coolidge cabinet while running at the same time for the presidency, or whether Mr. Coolidge will soon accept the secretary's resignation, received in the mail today, formed the basis of speculation here this afternoon.

In the absence of definite statements from the summer White House there prevailed an impression that the matter would not be decided until a personal conference was held between the President and Mr. Hoover within the next ten days.

In the same mail in which his formal resignation was dispatched, Mr. Hoover, in an informal letter, expressed his desire to call at Cedar Island lodge. Mr. Coolidge immediately sent a cordial telegram inviting the secretary, and Mrs. Hoover also, to visit Brule.

To Quit, or Not to Quit?

Some of the Hoover campaign directors, it was ascertained, are anxious for the Republican candidate to continue in office, in order that he may be presented to the country as a man intent on carrying on the governmental task assigned him instead of dropping it to devote all his time to politics. On the other hand, there are those who fear this course might turn out to be a boomerang; that Democrats would at once accuse Mr. Hoover of trying to capitalize his connection with the administration and with fearing to cut the ropes and sail his own ship.

It is known that the resignation is not effective until accepted at the pleasure of Mr. Coolidge. Only a short time ago it was authoritatively learned that he anticipated relieving the secretary of his post, so Mr. Hoover could go into the campaign unhampered by official duties.

Now, however, there are some doubts that Mr. Hoover will step out at once.

It is believed here that Mr. Hoover will be quite willing to leave the decision entirely to Mr. Coolidge, but that he will present the whole case to the executive when he visits Cedar Island Lodge. It is also conceded that when Mr. Hoover comes, Mr. Coolidge will be given for the first time a complete picture of the Republican campaign strategy, and that the President then will be able to decide what position he can take.

Possibility that Mr. Coolidge might wish to have a successor ready to step into Mr. Hoover's shoes, before accepting the resignation, also entered the situation this afternoon.

Coolidges Take Drive.

Mr. Coolidge drove with Mrs. Coolidge and their son John this morning to a point near Solon Springs, where the waters divide on one side into the Mississippi river, on the other into the great lakes.

Heavy rains last night had swollen the Brule too much for the President to fish this morning, but this afternoon the stream had subsided, and he had a chance to engage in his favorite sport.

HELD ON GIRL'S CHARGE.

Walter Mikalanski, 41, of 1518 South 49th avenue, Cicero, was held to the grand jury yesterday by Police Magistrate Sandusky on a charge of attempting to attack a 15 year old girl.

CHURCH DRYS ABANDON IDEA OF THIRD PARTY

Asheville, N. C., July 7.—(AP)—Preservation of the ideals and unity of southern Democracy and not the creation of a third party, will be the aim of the conference of dry Democrats to be held in Asheville July 18 and 19, an official statement issued here today by Bishop James Cannon Jr., of the Methodist Episcopal church, south, and Dr. Arthur J. Barton of Atlanta, a Baptist, said. The two men were here making preparations for the meeting.

"The goal fixed will be reached by election of dry Democratic senatorial, congressional, and state nominees and by the defeat of the wet Tammany candidate for President, Alfred E. Smith," the statement said. "No third party move is contemplated, nor are southern Democrats to be asked to become Republicans."

The conference will be one of "invited persons," the statement said, in order to obtain "greater freedom and efficiency in laying plans." A mass meeting will be held on the evening of July 18.

PARTIES TO START CAMPAIGNING IN HEAT OF SUMMER

G.O.P. to Open Headquarters Here Soon.

BY ARTHUR EVANS.

The campaign in the west gave token yesterday of getting away to an early start. Republicans and Democrats are tossing on the scrap heap the old dictum: "You can't do politics in a straw hat." Announcement that James W. Good has been appointed western manager of the Republicans was followed by word that Chicago headquarters will be opened soon, perhaps within a week.

The Republican state central committee is to meet tomorrow to plan its activities for the state ticket, and it looks as if the dog days will see a season of shirtsleeve politics. The Democrats are already at it. Justice Floyd E. Thompson, Democratic nominee for governor, was at Rockford yesterday addressing an organization meeting embracing seven counties.

See Runaway Campaign.

Democratic leaders, in fact, say there are signs at present of a runaway campaign. In some corn belt sections, they report, voters are hopping to it of their own accord in advance of the organization activities. State headquarters said yesterday that daily reports are coming in of towns in which Republicans have organized Al Smith clubs.

Fishermen returning from the Wisconsin northern lakes brought reports that the populace is already whooping it up on politics. James C. Denvir, Democratic leader, declared that in the muskie and bass regions there was great talk of Al Smith, likewise in the upper peninsula of Michigan.

Some of the Republicans said Hoover is showing strength in some of the towns of the Michigan iron ranges from Ironwood to Ishpeming and Negaunee, where old timers still talk of the soup kitchens and bread lines of the last Cleveland administration. Others said Smith, too, is going strong in these regions on the Volstead issue.

All Eyes on Farmers.

Both parties have their eyes on the farmer and his trend of political thought. The meeting of the corn belt conference which was to have been held in Des Moines tomorrow has been postponed for a week to July 16, it was announced. The delay is due to the illness of William Hirth of Columbia, Mo., its chairman. In Iowa, what is accounted the most significant political item since the Kansas City and Houston conventions, is Senator Smith W. Brookhart's championship of Hoover, and his onslaught upon some of the leaders of the corn belt revolt.

Also, the national convention of the Prohibition party, which opens Tuesday morning at the La Salle hotel, is eliciting attention this time from the major party politicians. Dr. Leigh Colvin, its national chairman, who will be the keynoter, said yesterday three possible courses of action will be discussed by the Prohibitionists. They are:

1. Indorse Hoover with a view of lining up the dry party against Smith.

2. Nominate a southern dry Democrat, with an idea of cutting into some of the southern states, if possible, against Smith.

3. Nominate a member of the Prohibition party. Since 1872 the party has always put up its own ticket.

See Wet and Dry Issue.

Democratic comment on the word from Washington that Dr. Hubert Work, Republican national chairman, in his instruction to party workers has told them prohibition will not be a major issue in the campaign unless injected by the Democrats, was that the wet and dry question cannot be kept out. Party workers remarked that the voters will be likely to decide what they regard the paramount issues. "The wet and dry question is the thing everybody is talking about," they said.

Taking time by the forelock, so to say, Howard W. Elmore, Republican candidate for sanitary district trustee, burst out yesterday with an argument on the Republican protective tariff and its benefits, following Dr. Work's announcement that this will be the leading issue. His statement follows the line of thought the Illinois leaders have been talking of as the best campaign ammunition.

"No city in the United States contains so many homes owned by the people who live in them than does Chicago," said Elmore, "but they were not bought under a Democratic free trade system."

Ownership in City and U. S.

"Of the 10,866,960 owned homes in the United States in 1920, there were 658,260 in Illinois and 165,866 in Chicago. Since then there has been a tremendous increase locally. One in every 65 homes owned by the occupants in the United States is a Chicago home. One out of every sixteen in the United States is an Illinois home.

"I know how they were bought and where the pay envelopes came from that bought them, for I have sold thousands of them myself. I know that most of the incomes which made Chicago the greatest home-owning city in the country came from industries and commercial enterprises that could not exist, could not afford to fill pay envelopes if they did not have the protection the Republican party gives them.

"Let any wage earner, any shopkeeper, any salaried worker, any banker in Chicago explain to me under what Democratic administration they earned more money than under Republican rule at Washington."

Democrats Find an Answer.

Democrats say they have the answer to Dr. Work's "protect the pay roll" issue, in the industrial state of New York itself where Al Smith has shown his strength. They say the tariff has passed out as a real political issue, and that in fact the Houston platform openly espouses the old "Iowa Idea" of a quarter century ago of tariff rates to cover the difference between production at home and abroad.

At Evanston, the W. C. T. U. yesterday announced that all of its state organizations will be urged to support Hoover, to defeat Smith, and to elect dry members of congress and state legislatures, regardless of party.

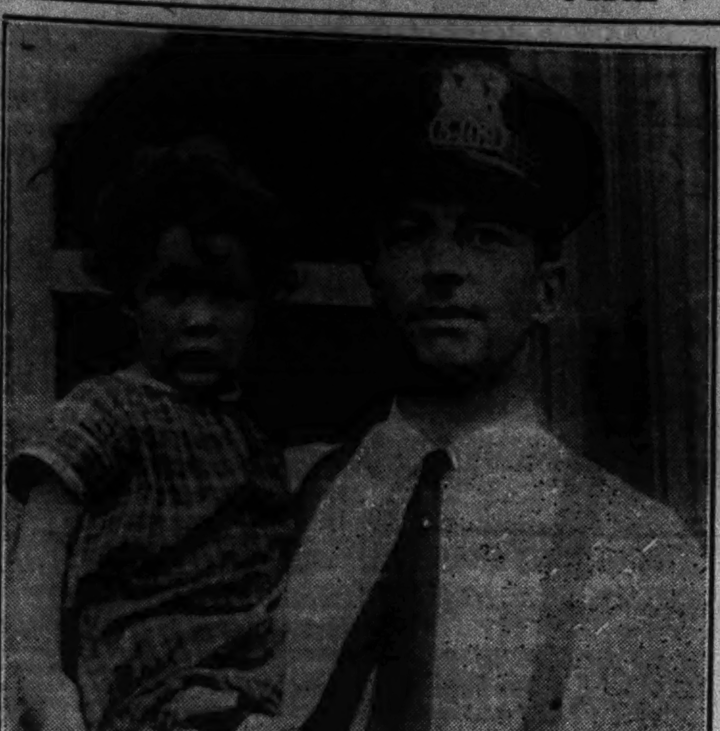
"The W. C. T. U.," it said, "will promote a campaign to mobilize the dry vote in support of dry candidates."

"We urge the support of Herbert Hoover, who, in his reply to Senator Borah, said: 'I do not favor the repeal of the eighteenth amendment. I stand, of course, for the efficient, vigorous, and sincere enforcement of the laws thereunder.'

"We urge the defeat of Alfred E. Smith, who, in his telegram of acceptance, said: 'It is well known that I believe there should be fundamental changes in the present provisions for national prohibition.'"

The Farmer-Labor group will hold a convention here Tuesday, called by Charles Shirley of Chicago, chairman of its northwest committee. The Jefferson-Lincoln league is to meet here tomorrow. Its president, James A. Edgerton of Washington, says its purpose is "enforcement of prohibition."

POLICE "ADOPT" LOST GIRL



Policeman Gustave J. Noe of the Des Plaines street station with girl found crying in park. The police cared for the child until they found her parents.

[TRIBUNE Photo.]

Likes the Sergeant

Sergt. Thomas Lee was standing in the Des Plaines street station yesterday when Sergt. Kenneth Ebey came in with a 3 year old lost girl, whom he had picked up at Monroe and Laflin streets. The child was barefooted and dirty, but so soon as she saw Sergt. Lee she ran to him.

Sergt. Lee took her in his arms and she stopped crying. He took her into the squad room and performed ablutions, just as he'd often done it for one of his own nine children. And she chortled.

Then, "Well," said the sergeant, "guess I'll be going," and he put the little girl down on a bench to await the inevitable arrival of her parents. The child screamed and demanded Sergt. Lee pick her up again. He did and tried a dozen times afterward to put her down, but she would not have it.

Early this morning she was identified by her parents as Dorothy Erb, 1121 West Adams street, and taken home.

LA FOLLETTE RAPS PLATFORM; HAS NO HOOVER BOOST

Progressives Can't Fall in Line, He Says.

Madison, Wis., July 7.—[Special.]—There were no words of approval for Herbert Hoover, Republican candidate for President, in a signed statement issued by Senator Robert M. La Follette Jr. here today. Instead, there was sharp criticism of the Kansas City platform.

"The reactionary platform adopted in Kansas City cannot arouse the enthusiasm of Progressives," declared Mr. La Follette. He added Mr. Hoover will have an opportunity to qualify or expand the platform, when he makes formal acceptance. He did not mention Al Smith or the Democratic party.

"The great opportunity for Progressives in this campaign," he stated, "presents itself in the fight to nominate and elect Progressives to the house and senate, and for state offices and the state legislatures."

Raps Zimmerman Régime.

The state administration of Gov. Fred R. Zimmerman is condemned. He said:

"Two years ago the reactionaries of the state nominated and elected the present governor of Wisconsin. He has served them faithfully."

"The Republican national convention was a cut and dried affair," says Mr. La Follette. "From the moment Vare of Pennsylvania, recently denied a seat in the United States senate, because of corrupt and excessive campaign expenditures, announced the Pennsylvania delegation would support Herbert Hoover, his nomination was a foregone conclusion. The platform adopted is a frank indorsement of the reactionary Coolidge policies.

"The Republican platform fails to meet the issue of injunctions in labor disputes which threaten the very existence of labor organizations. The convention was controlled by the great bankers and industrialists of the east. They wrote the platform."

"Mellonizing State" Beck Says.

Westby, Wis., July 7.—[Special.]—Joseph D. Beck, Progressive Republican candidate for governor, opened his campaign at an organization meeting of Progressives here today, with the charge that the income tax law, passed by the last legislature, was a deliberate attempt to "lift the burdens off the rich and place them upon the backs of the poor."

"If the stalwarts can put over that kind of a program by controlling the executive and one branch of the legislature, what will they do when they control the entire state government?" asked Mr. Beck. "This tax law is the first successful attempt toward Mellonizing Wisconsin."

Here is exactly what you get for this seemingly impossible low price—

You get the famous all-electric Freshman Equaphase which, with ordinary built-in speaker, is alone more than $175. This one has a built-in power speaker.

Then the all-electric new type phonograph, with radio amplification; playing records through the power speaker with volume, naturalness and superb quality similar to that which characterizes the latest instruments put out by the largest phonograph companies at hundreds of dollars more.

Both these super entertainers are contained in this one compact, beautifully designed and finished cabinet. The radio to get all that's going on; the new type reproducing instrument to provide sparkling diversion when the static is bad, or you wish to choose your own program.

When has there been an offering like it! $175, no extras to buy, all ready to go.

You might well hesitate to credit such value, and discount the quality, were not Lyon & Healy behind it. A sale at Lyon & Healy's IS a sale!

HOOVER AND AL EVEN IN POLL ON NORTH SIDE

Chicago Pre-Campaign Straw Vote Begun.

own forecasting, another view of the straws, by comparison, may be obtained by glancing over the 1923 mayoralty results. Arthur C. Lueder, Republican candidate, won on the north side, but William E. Dever, Democrat, was elected mayor by 105,000 plurality. That illustration shows that it is possible for a Democrat to win in Chicago without the north division in his pocket.

As a general rule the Democrat who wins the north side wins in Chicago. County Judge Jarecki, Democrat, carried Chicago by 57,826 in his reëlection in 1926. He won the north side by only 2,610. The late Patrick J Carr, another Democrat, was elected sheriff that year with a Chicago plurality of 115,124. He, too, carried the north side by a margin of 18,575 votes. Still another Democrat, Robert M. Sweitzer, was reëlected county clerk in that same year with a plurality in Chicago of 51,934. He carried the north side by 2,828 votes.

Democracy Victory Twice.

All of these above figures relate to local elections, or to contests where a local issue was a dominating factor. It has been so long since a Democratic candidate for the presidency carried the north side, or came close to accomplishing that feat, that it is hazardous to present figures because of the change in the ward boundaries. A Democratic presidential candidate has carried Chicago twice in the last 44 years. That candidate was Grover Cleveland. He failed to gain Chicago's support in his first election to the presidency; but Chicago gave him the advantage in both 1888, when he was defeated and in 1892 when he was elected the second time.

No Democratic presidential contender has received a plurality of Chicago's vote since 1892. Woodrow Wilson was second in 1912 when both Taft and Roosevelt were in the field. The Bull Moose candidate was the high man that year. Although Wilson was reëlected in 1916, he was unable to beat out Hughes in Chicago.

Hughes carried the north side by 18,000 and the city by nearly 27,000. Harding in 1920 carried the north side over Cox by a ratio of nearly 4 to 1. In this same area Coolidge won over Davis by more than 4 to 1.

Bride Wears Gown Century Old

Frances McKee, daughter of Mrs. Frederick H. Brooke of Washington, who was married yesterday to Charles Parker Stone, also of Washington, at Nonquitt, Mass., in bridal gown a century old. It was worn by her grandmother when married and has been on display in the Smithsonian institution, from where it was taken for Miss McKee to wear.

KILLS FARMER, IS SLAIN BY HIS VICTIM'S BROTHER

Urbana, O., July 7.—[U. P.]—A few hours after he had shot and killed M. H. Keeran, farmer, near here, Fava Oiler, 37, was surrounded in a nearby field and shot fatally by a brother of Keeran. The first shooting occurred at the Keeran farm while Keeran was harnessing his horses. His wife stood with him when Oiler, a boarder, approached with a revolver and said: "Now I have you both." Mrs. Keeran fled and Oiler shot her husband through the heart. Oiler was said to have been treated for a mental ailment.

Wed in Chapel

New Bedford, Mass., July 7.—(AP)—Munasca, the Nonquitt summer home of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick R. Brooke, Washington, D. C., and the grounds about St. Aidan's chapel, on the estate of Alanson B. Houghton, United States ambassador to the court of St. James, South Dartmouth, were thronged today for the wedding of Mrs. Brooke's daughter, Miss Frances Dunn McKee, and Charles Parker Stone, Washington, which took place in the chapel. Diplomatic and official Washington, New York and Newport society were represented among the guests.

WOMEN RUSHING ORGANIZATION TO PUT HOOVER OVER

Washington, July 7.—(AP)—Full coöperation with the men, on a fifty-fifty basis, is the keynote of the Republican women's campaign for Hoover, now being organized here.

Half the national committee, which will operate as a campaign committee, are women, and of the 32 rooms already filled with national visitors, an even 16 are allotted to women.

There, under the generalship of Mrs. Alvin T. Hert, national vice chairman, assisted by relays of national committeewomen throughout the summer, Republican women are planning to make good their Kansas City predictions that "if you nominate Hoover the women of the country will elect him."

Although workers already here say that women's Hoover clubs "have sprung up like mushrooms in every state," a movement for joint action with the men is now underway everywhere."

FIRES TOY CANNON; FINED.

Max Zemaw, 39, of 5024 Woodlawn avenue, was sent to the Bridewell to work out a $200 fine yesterday for firing a toy cannon within the city limits on July 4.

CALLES CONFERS WITH MORROW, BACK FROM U. S.

MEXICO CITY, July 7.—(AP)—President Calles and United States Ambassador Dwight W. Morrow conferred privately for more than an hour today at their first meeting since the ambassador's return from his vacation in the United States.

Nothing was disclosed as to what transpired at the conference, but it was clear that the close personal and official relations established between the two continue.

Now for a REAL ORANGE DRINK

Nedick's is HERE!

BRIGHT and early tomorrow morning Nedick's Thirst-Stations will open at prominent locations in the Loop district. Then Chicagoans will be able to get the famous orange drink which has already achieved such an outstanding success in New York, Philadelphia, Washington, Baltimore and Atlantic City.

A demonstration plant at the corner of Randolph and Clark Streets will enable Chicagoans to see just what they are getting when they exchange their dimes for tall glasses of Nedick's famous orange drink.

Drop in and see Nedick's made. You will see pure orange juice extracted from tree-ripened fruit right before your eyes.

CLIMAX TO CITY'S TRANSIT FIGHT IS DUE ON TUESDAY

Aldermen to Weigh Various Issues at Meeting.

Three or four separate phases of Chicago's complicated transit troubles are expected to come to a head at a special meeting of the city council's committee on local transportation called by Chairman Joseph McDonough for 2 p. m. Tuesday.

Most weighty are the problems created by the recent Supreme court decision against the city in the North Shore and Chicago Motor Coach cases and the elevated company's move in the federal courts to secure a straight ten cent fare. Other questions up for discussion and action are the demands of northwest side citizens for feeder busses and the start of negotiations for a new "comprehensive transit settlement."

Corporation Counsel Ettelson, now in Green Lake, Wis., will be invited to attend the meeting. For several days his office has been under fire for alleged mishandling of transit cases. He will be asked for explanations.

Each of Problems Related.

Each of the problems facing the committee have a direct inter-relation. For instance, the North Shore decision, interpreted as stripping away the city's control over the "L" and by some attorneys as showing the "L" to have a perpetual franchise, may prompt the aldermen to stop all subway proceedings and ask legal advice before proceeding with the consolidation ordinance. The proposed fare boost also has created misgivings about a deal of any kind with the "L" lines.

Should the Chicago Motor Coach decision prove as sweeping as indicated, some aldermen believe it may kill all hope for federer bus lines operated by the street car company. This decision gave the bus company a right to use the streets without the city's consent.

Urges Lisman Plan.

Into the controversy, Ald. Wiley W. Mills [35th] tossed a new statement yesterday demanding that the committee abandon its "dream" of a comprehensive transit settlement and consider the Lisman plan for separate operation of the Surface lines.

"A final settlement of the traction problem is impossible," declared Ald. Mills. "A complete surrender is possible. Progress and improvement also are possible, but they must come only as real progress always is made—step by step. To insist upon a 'unified system' and 'a final and complete settlement' is to permit theorists to block the attainable. Shall we permit slogans to enslave us?

"Not more than 20 per cent of the riders of Chicago travel daily into or through the loop. Fully 80 per cent make short rides on the surface cars going to and from their work. Yet every proposal for a 'settlement,' save one, has contemplated a consolidation of all means of local transportation into a 'comprehensive system.' The exception is the Lisman' plan, which has received no consideration for a year and a half."

Questions for Ettelson.

Ald. Mills said he would have something further along this line to say Tuesday when the committee convenes. He also proposes to ask Mr. Ettelson some questions about the "L" fare case.

According to Ald. Mills, the city's defense before the Illinois commerce commission was so faulty that the record itself, which admits that the company does not get an adequate return on its investment, is likely to give the company a victory in the federal court.

This, however, was contradicted yesterday by Assistant Corporation Counsel John G. Drennan, who is in charge of the case. If the city is permitted to go before the court, he said, it may submit any new evidence it finds. The door is not closed by the commerce commission record, he said. If Ald. Mills has any such evidence, he said, he would be glad to have it.

Interest in Bus Feeders.

There is perhaps more immediate public interest in the bus feeder line situation than any of the other matters confronting the committee. Ald. T. J. Bowler [41st] has warned that 5,000 angry northwest siders intend to march on the city hall one day this week if they are not afforded relief. Many of them are expected at the meeting Tuesday.

"I, too, am going to have some questions to ask Mr. Ettelson," said Ald. Bowler. "I want to know why he so suddenly changed front and dug out an old opinion denying the right of the surface lines to run feeder busses after we have one already running on Diversey boulevard. My people want feeder busses and are going to get them, corporation counsel or no corporation counsel."

Marriage Proposed

[Pacific and Atlantic Photo.]

SOFIA, Bulgaria, July 7.—(AP)—Reports were current here today that King Boris, whose engagement to Princess Giovanni of Italy was officially denied a few months ago, may marry Princess Francoise of France, 25 year old daughter of the Duke of Guise, claimant to the French throne.

It has been learned that a prominent member of the French chamber came to Bulgaria recently, ostensibly to inspect the earthquake region but actually to sound out the king in behalf of Premier Poincare and M. Briand on the question of marrying the second daughter of "the king of France."

The French deputy, it is said, told the king he had authority from the Duke of Guise to offer Princess Francoise in marriage. He emphasized the desirability of such a union, in view of the fact that King Boris' own mother, Marie Louise, was a member of the French royal family. He added that if such a marriage took place, he could promise the king, in behalf of M. Poincare and M. Briand, the full benevolence of France toward Bulgaria.

Boris is said to have informed the deputy, in effect, that he was too busy at the moment to get married, but would take the French offer under consideration.

Quincy Farmer, War Vet, Hangs Self in a Barn

Quincy, Ill., July 7.—[U.P.]—Claude M. Smith, 43, farmer and world war veteran, committed suicide by hanging himself with a rope. A searching party found the body in a barn after an all night hunt. Smith had been in ill health. His widow survives.

SQUEEZE DENS FOR CASH AS CITY MACHINE WANES

Find Price of Protection for Gamblers Doubled.

Investigators representing the special grand jury investigation came upon information yesterday indicating that the price of protection for the operation of gambling and vice resorts has nearly doubled. This, it was said, is regarded as evidence that the thousands of political favorites of the Thompson-Crowe machine are expecting the curtain to fall on their profitable activities. In pursuance of this thought they are taking advantage of the few months remaining of the state's attorney's administration to sweep up the last dimes.

The approaching election of a new state's attorney and the activity of Frank J. Loesch, the special prosecutor in the recent vote frauds and the Granady murder, are believed to have been the handwriting on the wall for the hoodlums.

Pay Up or Shut Up.

Out on the south side, which local criminologists have come to regard as the barometer of the "open town" in Chicago, investigators report that police have been assigned to raid and close games where the increased protection prices are not paid.

"We're playing our last stands, and it looks like a long winter, so we've got to play high, hard and handsome 'till the fall comes,'" is the word given to the gamblers by the protecting politicians.

Dan Jackson, Thompson ward committeeman, the big works of the farewell drive, has boosted the price for running "policy" games on the south side from $300 a week, the price in the good old days before the primary, to $600 a week, investigators learned.

Formerly John D. Clark alias Coats, made his collections from a loop office in the Fisher building. But now he travels a beat about the south town, collecting from place to place, it is stated.

Two Policemen on Job.

Two policemen are assigned to the job of suppressing the policy games, which are a sort of lottery attracting all sorts of bets, from the sucker 5 and 10 cent bets to as high as the players want to go. These policemen are Harry Deas and Harold Repler, and though they are assigned out of Stanton avenue station, they are reported as beholden to the politically astute Dan Jackson.

Capt. Matthew Homer, commander at Stanton avenue, said Deas and Repler were not under his command; they worked under Deputy Commissioner William Russell, he said. Russell said, "No, they don't work for me. I know they are assigned to suppress policy gambling." Asked if the men worked for Dan Jackson, Deputy Russell said, "It's news to me if they do."

A Move for Policy's Sake.

The Tia Juana, which was located at what used to be Dan Jackson's embalming emporium until it came to a livlier useage, at 30th and State streets, recently was moved a few blocks to 31st street between Prairie and Calumet avenues, to get it out of a certain police district, it is said.

The Tia Juana is the most pretentious of the policy games. At a Saturday night drawing of the lucky numbers, the classy automobiles of the players are spread for blocks around the place. Money flows across to the till of the operators.

Last night investigators reported that four city policemen, in uniform, stood by the cash registers to prevent a raid from thieves.

$5 a Week from Writers.

Then there is the Interstate game, at 29th and La Salle streets, run by Policy Sam and Julius Benvenuti; also the East and West and North and South, at 28th and State streets. These two and the Tia Juana together are said to have a play of more than $100,000 a week from the colored people of the district. Men called "policy writers" canvass from house to house getting the nickels and dimes of washerwomen and children and all who will buy. There are 450 of these policy writers, and each of them is "taxed" $5 a week by the political protectors, it is reported.

The whole colored population is keyed up by the chances they have to win $5 for a nickel, which are about nil, the only payments made being those to stir up trade, it is learned.

When complaint was made at the raise in the protection prices the policy owners were told the money was needed for the coming election, for the defense funds of those indicted by the special grand jury, and for raising bail to keep election terrorists out of jail while they await trials.

Will Question Eller.

Frank J. Loesch, chief prosecutor before the special grand jury, over the long distance telephone yesterday notified Charles O. Rundall, special assistant attorney general, that Morris Eller, boss of the Bloody 20th ward, certainly will be called before the jury during the coming week.

"We have many things to ask Mr. Eller," Prosecutor Rundall said, "and his request to appear, put in the shape of a demand, is not unwelcome. He will be questioned when the grand jury finds it convenient."

Mr. Loesch told his assistant that he would return to the city tomorrow, when the special grand jury will resume hearing witnesses to frauds and violence in the April primary who have been found by Sheridan A. Brusseaux, investigator in the Granady murder inquiry.

Gangster Freed by Ruse.

Sam Gianacana, leader of the "42" gang, arrested by Capt. John Stege, chief investigator for the special grand jury, after witnesses declared they saw him riding in an automobile on primary day with members of the 20th ward kidnaping gang, was released recently through a ruse employed by his attorney, Frank McDonnell, it was stated by Capt. Stege yesterday.

Gianacana had been taken to the Marquette police station to be "shown up" to victims of kidnapings, when McDonnell appeared and announced that Judge Emanuel Eller had issued a writ for Gianacana and demanded his release.

Special Prosecutor David D. Stansbury after the demand agreed to release the prisoner at a certain hour if no witnesses identified him. Only half a dozen of the prosecutor's witnesses had been found by the time set and none accused the prisoner, so he was released.

Jury Fund Steadily Nears $150,000

The Union League club through its public affairs committee yesterday sent a communication to each of its 2,800 resident members calling on them to subscribe to the fund being raised to pay the expenses of the special grand jury investigation of election fraud and violence. Yesterday's mail brought contributions amounting to $4,650 to the Chicago Association of Commerce, which is in charge of the drive for the $150,000 fund, bringing the total to date to $128,442.

"The committee earnestly recommends that each member of the Union League club contribute to this fund and thereby aid in the enforcement of all laws enacted to preserve the purity of the ballot box," said the communication which was signed by President Benjamin F. Affleck. Frank J. Loesch, chief prosecutor before the special grand jury, is a past president of the club.

PARDON BOARD TO HEAR PLEAS OF FIVE SLAYERS

Cases of five Chicago murderers who have applied for commutations of sentence will be heard, among others, when the state board of pardons and paroles goes into session in Springfield Tuesday. They are:

Phillip Fox, who in 1921 confessed he was implicated in the murder of Thomas A. Skirven, a Yellow Cab driver. Fox was the driver of a Checker cab.

Paul Asbury Porter, originally from Mount Pleasant, Ia., who shot and killed Detective Sergt. James Shea, while attempting to pass a bogus check in an Evanston store on March 11, 1918.

Louis Spano, who was sent to the penitentiary in 1922, for the murder of Antonio Varchetto, in a robbery. Three others implicated were hanged.

Three Boys, 9, 12 and 13, Arrested as Auto Thieves

Three youthful automobile thieves were arrested by Chief of Police Grosch in Schiller Park yesterday when he saw Stanley Smoleich, 13, of 1424 North Maplewood avenue; Walter Niemczura, 12, and his brother, Bruno, 9, of 1439 North Rockwell street, driving about in a stolen sedan. The chief's attention was attracted by the fact that Stanley was so small he had to stand up while driving. The boys admitted stealing the car, belonging to Max Madsen of 3000 Lowell avenue.

FELONY WAIVERS INCREASED FROM 7 TO 30 IN JUNE

Criminal Court Calendar Jam Is Growing.

CRIMINAL COURT.
Thomas Baird, burglary [changed to larceny], sentenced to 1 year in the Bridewell by Judge Otto Kerner.

Chicago Criminal court records for June show an increase over May in the number of felonies waived, according to the monthly report issued yesterday by John H. Passmore, court clerk.

There were only seven sentences for misdemeanors during May in cases in which the defendants had been charged with felonies. In June the number of felony waivers crept up to 30. That figure, however, is still far from the 90 to 100 shown monthly before Frank J. Loesch, president of the crime commission, made his charges of paltering against three Criminal court judges. Then again 11 judges were at criminal work in June as compared to the usual seven judges.

Normoyle Heads List.

Judge Denis J. Normoyle headed the list of sentences to the Bridewell or county jail, mostly cases wherein the charge was changed to a misdemeanor. He had eight of the 30 sentences.

Judge Klarkowski, one of those accused by Loesch of paltering, was second with six minor sentences, four to the Bridewell and two to the county jail. Judge Kerner, another accused by Loesch, had three of these sentences, 2 to the Bridewell and one to the county jail while Judge Eller, the third judge under fire, had none.

The report disclosed that the discontinuance of felony waiver practice is clogging the court calendars as never before, according to Melzar P. Welano, chief clerk. Despite this condition the judges are preparing for the usual vacation periods and within a week only four or possibly five judges will be holding Criminal court.

Increase of 368 Cases.

At the start of the July term of court the report shows 1,754 undisposed of indictments on the criminal dockets. This is a gain of 368 over the previous month. A year ago only 1,006 cases were undisposed of and nine judges worked through the month to get the figure down to the normal summertime number of between 700 and 800 cases, before vacations were taken.

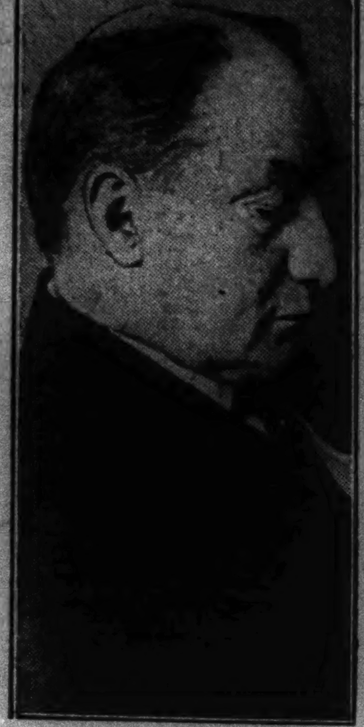
Delano was notified yesterday that starting with July 16 Judges Eller, Kerner, Harry B. Miller, and Joseph B. David would hold Criminal court only. Chief Justice William V. Brothers left for the remainder of the summer because of illness and Judge John P. McGoorthy has also ceased work. He, too, had been in ill health. Judge David will take his place. Judge Frank Comerford will also hold Criminal court until he disposes of the trial of three youths charged with murdering Pearl Eggleston, usherette of a Berwyn theater. The trial will start Monday.

In August Judge Eller will hold court part of the month, as will Judge David and possibly Judge Miller.

CRUSHED TO DEATH BY ICE BOX.

Peter Kancius, 30, of 124 West 108th place, was crushed to death yesterday when a large ice box fell on him at 37 East 103d street, where he was helping a friend move his belongings up a flight of stairs.

PASTOR DIES



THE REV. A. A. PFANSTIEHL.

The Rev. Albertus A. Pfanstiehl, former pastor of the Highland Park Presbyterian church, died of heart disease at the Highland Park hospital yesterday. He was 73 years old and had been retired from the ministry for several years.

Dr. Pfanstiehl was born in Holland, Mich., and was educated at Hope college and the McCormick Theological seminary. He was for a time pastor of a church near Lafayette, Ind., and from 1897 to 1908 was at Highland Park. Later he went to Germany at the outbreak of the world war and was in charge of the American Presbyterian church at Berlin.

He volunteered his services for British soldiers interned in Holland and was a member of a committee sent by residents of Amsterdam to arrange with Secretary Redfield for food supplies. Following the war he returned to the United States, but went to Europe again from 1922 to 1926. For the last two years he had lived at Highland Park. One son, Carl Pfanstiehl, noted research chemist, survives. Funeral services will be held at the Highland Park Presbyterian church at 4 p. m. today.

VACCARELLI, DRY FORCE WORKER IN MICHIGAN, QUITS

Daniel R. M. Vaccarelli, formerly chief of the conspiracy section of the Chicago prohibition forces, resigned yesterday from his position as assistant prohibition administrator for Michigan. The announcement was made by Thomas E. Stone, prohibition administrator at Detroit who said that the resignation was "to accept a better paid position outside the government service."

With orders to "stop the holes" through which liquor was flowing into the United States along the Detroit river, Vaccarelli was transferred from here in September of last year. While engaged in conspiracy work here under Alexander Jamie, then assistant to Administrator E. C. Yellowley, Vaccarelli was instrumental in arresting a Texas preacher, who had turned bootlegger, and seizing 400 cases of whisky. Turner, it was alleged delivered liquor to many prominent Chicagoans.

AMERICAN EDUCATION.

Dr. Abraham Flexner, who has resigned recently from the general education board of the Rockefeller Foundation, has been telling the British about American universities. If he had anything good to say of them, we do not find it quoted in the press at hand, but we take from the Manchester Guardian the following:

"University administrators may deplore certain objectionable tendencies in American life, but for the most part they swim with the current. Instead of making a stand they give the public what it wants, good and bad alike. For example, a great state university counts towards the college B. A. degree courses in retail advertising, business letter writing, copy reading and community news, and towards the degree of bachelor of science courses in costume model design, kinesiology [physical culture], and advertising campaigns. A great university in the east gives credit towards degrees for courses in packing house operations, public opinion, educational publicity, parental education, scouting and scoutcraft. Another university announcing a sub-department of hotel management offers courses in hotel stewarding, hotel practice, hotel machines, and hotel auxiliary equipment and gives academic credit for experience as bus boy or key clerk.

"This sort of thing does not deserve to be called education at all. It is an irrelevant and unworthy thing for a modern university to undertake to short-circuit experience and to furnish seductive advertisers or plausible bond salesmen. The most pretentious and richest of American university business schools awarded a $2,000 prize to the woman who organized the 'campaign for pet milk.' Is this a proper proceeding in an institution of learning?"

Dr. Flexner is one of our chief experts on the higher education and we trust we may safely assume that he will give his countrymen the benefit of his views, even though they will not be received with quite the complaisant satisfaction they arouse in the bosom of the Guardian. It is more important that we should know what is wrong with our universities than what is right, and Dr. Flexner finds a good deal that is wrong. We agree heartily with him that a university that gives a credit for experience as a "bus boy or key clerk" has a conception of the character and functions of the university that calls for some not altogether jocular consideration. We do not agree that the vocational training he cites "does not deserve to be called education at all." On the contrary, we believe it has more real educational value than some of the cultural exercises to which our college youth submit themselves. A good deal that passes for education is only a mild regurgitation which does not involve digestion either by the teacher or the pupil, and we have a notion there is less of what "deserves to be called education" in some cultural courses as taught than in a good course in cutting hair.

But, of course, we willingly concede that these educational activities do not belong in a university. At the same time, we have a certain human sympathy with the college administrators who are constrained to include them in the college bill of fare. We believe that in most instances there is resistance to their invasion, and we hope that in time the resistance will succeed. It is eventually a question of reorganization, which will provide vocational education where it belongs and permit the freeing of the institution of higher culture and research from its present entanglements and improper burdens. The desired changes will come slowly, perhaps, especially in the universities supported by public taxation, because they are certain to be subjected to political interference and to the pressure of an uninformed public opinion. These are now chiefly responsible for the overcrowding of the existing plants and the forcing of educational services which do not belong to a university proper. In our opinion the first step toward the release of the higher institutions and the proper organization of the educational scheme is the improvement and enlargement of our secondary education. A good deal that the colleges and universities are trying to do, and in many cases forced to do, should be removed, we think, into the secondary field.

The problem is difficult and it is most urgent. The present confusion is very costly and it deserves the best thought of the country. In the educational world it is having it, though perhaps not enough, but the press and public must give the problem consideration, for it will not and cannot be corrected without them.

OUR RELATIONS WITH CHINA.

Some days have passed by since the quiet occupation of the Chinese capital by the Nationalist forces. The Manchurian war lord, in the meantime, has been finally removed from the scene, and if the leaders of the Nationalist movement do not fall out or fall upon each other, the troubled political affairs of the Celestial land may enter upon a much needed period of stability. But the immediate situation may be less encouraging than its surface indicates. Its elements are highly unstable and explosive, and will remain dangerous and unpredictable until at least the problem of demobilization has been solved and the greater part of the forces under arms are disarmed and redistributed to civilian pursuits.

This is a most delicate and difficult problem. Its solution will put a severe strain upon the new government, but if the government attempts it, as we think it must, and survives it should be possible for the American government to put our relations with China upon a better footing. There has been no reluctance in America to recognize and deal with any Chinese government that could be honestly accepted as a Chinese government—that is, that had the power from such effective opinion as China has and the willingness to deal with us faithfully and responsibly. Up to this time the complaints of Chinese Nationalist leaders that we had not corrected inequities in our treaty relations, complaints supported by certain American sentimentalists who did not trouble to consider facts, could not be taken seriously. They were not, in fact, very sincere complaints, but were put forth as political propaganda in Chinese politics. The United States has been a friend of reasonable Chinese aspirations and has demonstrated that friendship consistently and persistently by acts as well as by authoritative words. We brought about the Peking conference on tariff revision and extraterritoriality, and our able representatives clung to their task until the demoralization of Chinese politics under the conflicting military factions destroyed all sensible hope of responsible agreement. We refused to go farther than necessary measures of defense for American nationals imperiled in the Nationalist military advance, and our government has made it plain that it stands ready to renew negotiations for treaty revision as soon as the Chinese have set up a government capable of making responsible agreements and performing its international duties in the family of civilized states.

We think the best men in China are not disposed to deny this and we have been glad to note that the influence of the government chiefly disposed to injure us with the Chinese and to try for its own advantage to embroil China with the other civilized powers—namely: Moscow—has been steadily declining. Chinese diplomatic intelligence is of a high order, and it has read the strategy of the soviet foreign policy in the far east shrewdly. We have reason to hope, therefore, if peace is maintained, that before long the Chinese and American governments can get together and work out a sound basis of understanding and friendly intercourse. A radical government would prevent this, but the Chinese mind is remarkably practical and there is some reason to hope that Nationalist radicalism, weighted with the responsibilities of government, will be more moderate than its political utterances and that a new government will recognize the need of China for external peace and assistance, as well as the internal need for order and stability.

AN EFFORT TO BRING MICHIGAN OUT OF THE DARK AGES.

At a conference of local prosecuting attorneys called by Attorney General Brucker of Michigan, it was agreed that offenses against the dry laws should be taken from the class of felonies and reclassified as misdemeanors. The case of Fred Palm, sentenced to life imprisonment under the habitual criminal act, upon conviction of possession of a half pint of gin, has raised this question picturesquely in Michigan and the discussion may result in state legislation moderating the criminal code in this respect. At the suggestion, Mr. Holsapple, head of the Anti-Saloon league of Michigan, becomes officially wroth and declares that offenses against the dry laws shall continue to be felonies, so there seems to be prospect of a real test of public sentiment on dry bigotry at the next session of the Michigan legislature.

The issue is really significant. Both the prohibitionist fanatic and the professional dry realize that the greater part of their political influence depends upon the assumption that prohibition is not an experiment in social and political policy upon which honest minds may and do differ but a great moral, not to say religious, issue upon which no man or woman of conscience can suffer any doubt.

To bolster this assumption is vitally important to the zealot and the professional dry and they do not propose to submit to any suggestion that an offense against the dry law is not morally heinous and deserving of a very special reprobation and punishment. In the federal law a concession was won, but if the tide were running with the prohibition extremists instead of against them, all penalties would be made more severe and all offenses against dry laws would be made felonies in the federal code.

Editorial of the Day

FORTY YEARS AGO.

[Kansas City, Mo., Post.]

One Wilhelm Hohenzollern, forty years ago, ascended to the throne in Germany. No young ruler ever faced brighter prospects than did the youthful emperor, welcomed to the ranks of rulers by his people and the entire civilized world. The house of Hohenzollern had added another strong character to history and his reign began auspiciously.

The contrast of that yesterday with today is a pitiful portrayal of the transition of greatness and of power. Today the way of Unter den Linden does not lead past any throne room. Today in Holland, exiled by public hatred and distrust, the broken emperor, gray with disappointment and the years, holds court only with his dogs for admirers, in lonely Doorn, where his wife is his only subject, and with the long hours to ruminate on what might have been and what was but never can be again.

What reminiscences forty years hold for the lonely man of Doorn are for no other mind but his. The story is an unpleasant one, more of blood than sand; more of kaiserism than of courage.

RELIGIOUS EDUCATION

BY HUGH S. MAGILL, LL. D.

[General Secretary International Council of Religious Education].

Religious education is receiving increased attention, not only on the part of the churches, but in colleges and universities and by leading authorities in the field of general education. During the past ten years departments of religious education have been established in scores of colleges, with carefully prepared courses for the training of teachers and leaders. Nearly all the theological seminaries now offer courses in religious education for the training of ministers. It is conservatively estimated that more than a thousand local churches throughout the United States now have full time directors of religious education.

The reason for religious education is the fact that religion is an essential element of life; that it is a vital human experience, a dynamic influence in the motivating of conduct and the determining of character that cannot be disregarded in the processes of education. Religion in its true interpretation is not a thing apart from life and experience which may be considered or disregarded. It is at the center of all right thinking and feeling, inspiring the loftiest concepts and highest outreaches of the soul.

During certain cycles or periods of history religion and spiritual values have received special consideration. These times have been followed by periods when materialistic considerations have been dominant in human thought. This has been particularly true during the development of the scientific age in which we are now living. As one writer has put it: "Formerly men were absorbed in the vision of heaven; now they are absorbed in the vision of the fruitful earth. Science has turned the modern world into a colossal workshop, and the more sensitive the genius of a race or of a man to the tendency of the age, the more irresistible the attraction of the majestic mechanism which is building the earth."

In the preface to the earliest classic of this scientific movement which now absorbs the modern world, Bacon prays that "from the opening up of the pathway of the senses and a fuller kindling of the natural light, there may not result in men's souls a weakening of faith and a blindness to divine mysteries." Loss of faith, which is the most hopeless kind of blindness, has fallen upon men not because they have willed it, but because the faculty has been weakened by disuse.

We received recently from the editor of one of the leading magazines for business men a request for an historical illustration of the importance of religion to society and to the state. We quoted in reply the famous Ordinance of 1787: "Religion, morality and knowledge being necessary to free government and the happiness of mankind, schools and the means of education shall forever be encouraged." Also from Washington's farewell address: "Of all the dispositions and habits which lead to political prosperity, religion and morality are indispensable supports."

If religion is so important, why is it not more generally taught? Of course, the first public schools in America were religious in their purpose and teaching. But the people belonged to different sects and churches, holding differing views on certain religious questions, even though they worshiped the same God. They wisely upheld the principle of religious liberty, which guarantees to every man the right to worship God according to the dictates of his own conscience and to have his children taught in harmony with his religious views. The doctrine of the separation of church and state was so interpreted and applied as practically to secularize public education. In more recent years the curriculum of the public schools has been so expanded that nearly all elements of human experience and knowledge have been included, with the exception of those supremely important religious concepts and experiences emanating from a consciousness of God.

Although it is conceded that the public schools cannot formally teach religion, there is an increasing recognition of the supreme importance of religious education, not only for the welfare of the individual, but in the interests of society. It will hardly be questioned that the security of the state depends upon the integrity and morality of its citizens, and that religious conviction is one of the strongest supports of national morality.

These considerations have led to an added emphasis upon the teaching ministry of the church. The Sunday school is being expanded into the church school, with its Sunday session supplemented by the vacation church school, weekday church school, and other educational agencies. Leaders and teachers are being especially trained for the different phases of the work. The whole program is being developed in accordance with sound educational principles, worthy of the highest respect. Leading authorities in general education, recognizing the limitations of the public schools, but appreciating the importance of religion in education, are showing an attitude of friendly cooperation.

In the recently published report of the commission on curriculum for secondary schools of the National Education association, composed of many of the leading educators of the United States, are found some very significant statements regarding the objectives of education.

The general objectives of all education are stated by the commission as follows:

"1. To promote the development of an understanding and an adequate evaluation of the self.

"2. To promote the development of an understanding and an appreciation of the world of nature.

"3. To promote the development of an understanding and an appreciation of organized society.

"4. To promote the development of an appreciation of the force of law and of love that is operating universally."

Commenting on this classification, the commission states:

"The individual self, nature, society, and God—these four, and in particular the adjustments which the individual self must make—constitute the objectives of education. A full understanding of the magnitude of the task reveals the need of continuing education throughout the whole period of life."

Following a somewhat detailed interpretation of the first three objectives of education as given, the commission makes the following statement regarding the fourth objective:

"To promote the development of an appreciation of the force of law and of love which is operating universally: Man craves more than a knowledge of himself, of nature, and of organized society. He hungers and thirsts after righteousness. Knowing his own imperfections, he feels that somewhere there is perfection. The great universe calls to his spirit, and unless he ignorantly or willfully closes his ears, he hears the voice of God. No question of theology or of ecclesiastical polity is involved here.

BY KATHERINE HANKEY.

I love to tell the story of unseen things above,
Of Jesus and His glory, of Jesus and His love.
I love to tell the story, because I know 'tis true;
It satisfies my longings as nothing else can do.
Refrain:
I love to tell the story, 'twill be my theme in glory,
To tell the old, old story of Jesus and His love.

I love to tell the story; more wonderful it seems
Than all the golden fancies of all our golden dreams.
I love to tell the story, it did so much for me;
And that is just the reason I tell it now to thee.

I love to tell the story; 'tis pleasant to repeat
What seems, each time I tell it, more wonderfully sweet.
I love to tell the story, for some have never heard
The message of salvation from God's own holy word.

WHY WE SHOULD CHANGE UNDIES FREQUENTLY.

THE Laundrymen's association will come mighty near wanting to reprint a report of a study made by Miss Winegar and printed in the Journal of Home Economics.

Miss Winegar makes a demonstration that is all to the good when it comes to the matter of frequent change of underwear. Up to that point the Laundrymen's association is with her. Unfortunately, she did not study the effects of washing underwear and, therefore, they may lose interest.

Miss Winegar studied the bacteriology of the underwear of forty Kansas athletes in hard training. She found 400,000 bacteria in each inch of an undergarment which had been worn once. A second wearing caused the bacterial count to multiply fifteen times. Garments worn three times had nineteen times as many bacteria and garments worn six times 24 times as many bacteria as garments worn once.

The bacteria present were principally of types formed in and on the skin. Many were staphylococci and some were streptococci. After a bit bacteria of soil origin began to come into evidence. In garments worn six times excretory organ bacilli were present.

Miss Winegar made no test of the efficacy of different methods of washing. No hot water, nor soap and no washing devices were employed. Therefore she has no special information to offer in washing. Rinsing a garment once in plain water removed 30 per cent of the bacteria. After ten rinsings only 25 per cent of the bacteria remained.

She did have something to say on the effects of drying. Her research proved that prolonged exposure in sunlight was the most effective method of drying so far as the bacterial content of the garments was concerned. She favors hanging the clothes on the line in the sunlight for two days. Hanging them on the line in the shade for two days was considerably less effective. Thorough drying is a very efficient method of killing bacteria. Added sunlight does even more than it is possible for drying by itself to accomplish.

NIGHT URINATION.

L. B. R. writes: If elderly men who find it necessary to urinate in the night will place a two quart mason jar near their bed and use it, they will do away with the annoyance of leaving a warm bed and going to a toilet room. The jars have metal tops that screw on and off, and the jar can be kept on a window ledge or chair within easy reach. In the morning the jar can be emptied and scalded out.

To use it requires so little effort that one barely wakes up, the circulation is not disturbed and danger of catching cold is obviated. I suspect that this necessity of night urination leads many old people to drink less water than they should and that this helps to slowly dry them up [physically] and hasten senile decay.

The jar named has a seat rim for the top that makes it convenient to hold with one hand. One should move slowly to avoid a spill. It is a great comfort and I think will add years to one's life. In using it, lie on the back. And finally, old fellers, go ahead and drink your own health in oodles of water.

LET HIM BATHE.

J. J. C. writes: My little boy of 3 years is very fond of bathing. Is it perfectly safe to take him in the water at the beach? He will wear a woolen bathing suit and will be under my protection.

REPLY.

It is.

BEARS INVESTIGATION.

Chicago, June 29.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—An only child, mother dead, was left a sum of money by will of father's relation. Father had himself appointed guardian. When child reached age of 21 a private settlement was made. The father had charged every cent spent on clothing, board, public school education, cash, gifts, etc., so that the sum turned over to his child was about half the original legacy. The father was, and is, very well to do, and has had no one else to support. Can the balance of this legacy, an absolute gift, be collected six years after settlement? E. M. B.

In the first place he was not entitled to make such charges without an express court order to that effect. Your rights may be barred by the running of the statute of limitations since you became of age, but the court well might consider that there was such a trust relation as to preclude your father from setting up that defense. If a substantial amount is involved we advise you to take the matter up in a personal interview with an attorney.

TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

SUPPORT FOR PARENT.

Chicago, June 29.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—Am the only daughter and married, having three brothers also married, two of them drawing more salary than my husband. Am I compelled to keep my father, who has been disabled for four years, without my brothers contributing towards his support? They claim they cannot afford to pay a few dollars regularly each week. A. M.

Our pauper act requires near relatives to contribute according to their means to the support of destitute persons, except that married women are not required to contribute unless they have independent means. Apply to the bureau of public welfare in the county building.

TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

NOTICE TO MOVE.

Chicago, June 29.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—The writer holds an apartment lease which expires Sept. 30, 1928, which I do not intend to renew. 1. How many days' notice must be given the landlord to the effect? 2. For how long a time previous to the expiration of the lease must the apartment be available for exhibition to prospective tenants? There is nothing in the lease covering these points. B. T. F.

1. You are not legally obliged to give any notice unless the lease so requires.

2. You are not obliged to exhibit the apartment unless the lease so requires.

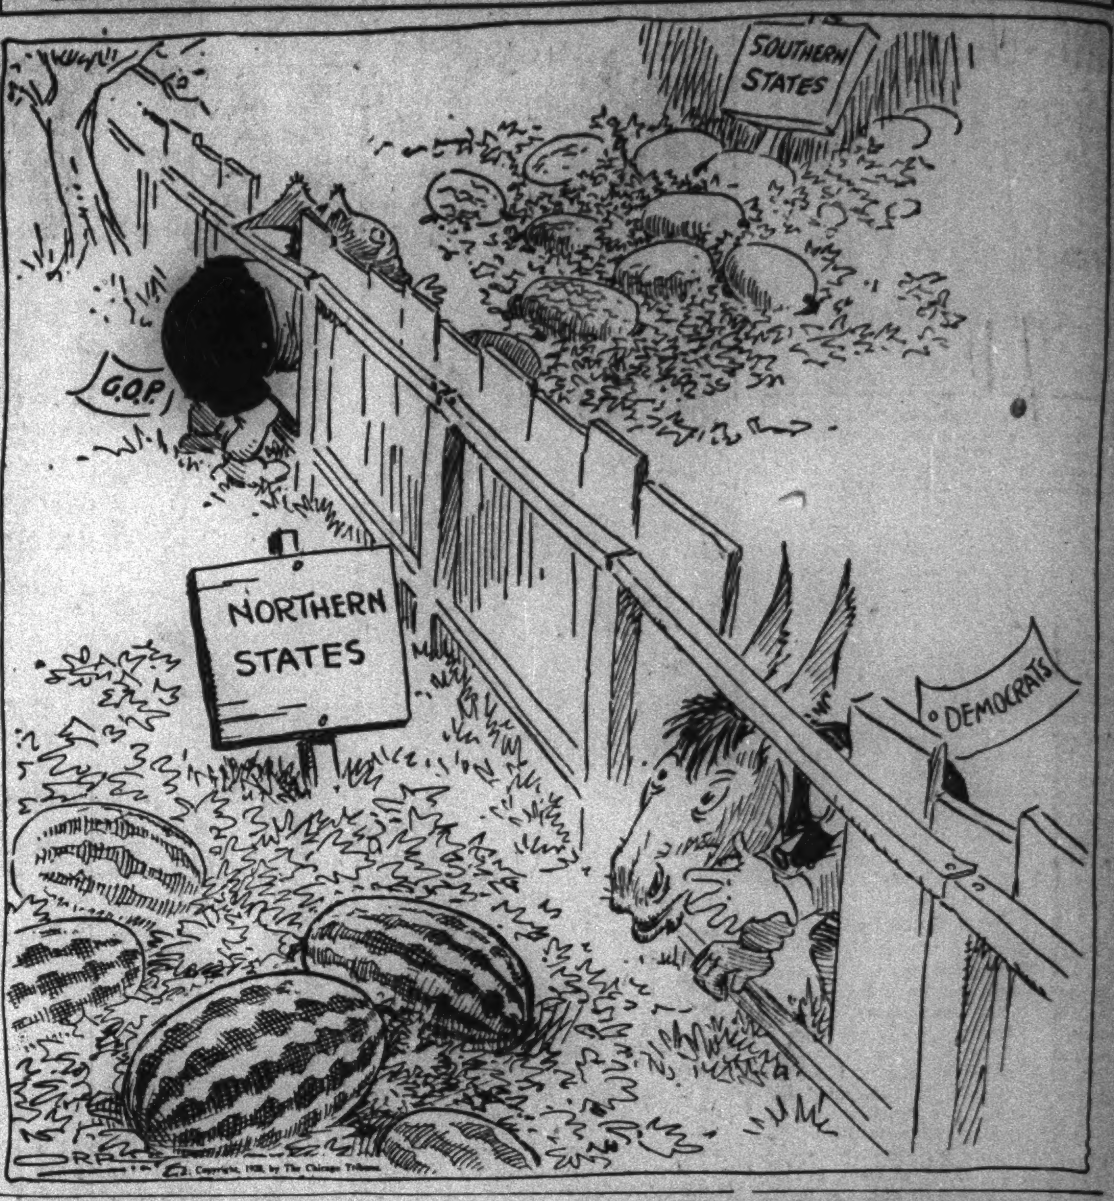
GETTING INTO EACH OTHER'S MELON PATCH



FROM THE TRIBUNE'S COLUMNS

65 YEARS AGO TODAY

JULY 8, 1863.

WASHINGTON. — Gideon Welles, secretary of the navy, received the following message from Acting Rear Admiral D. D. Porter, dated the flagship Blackhawk, Vicksburg, July 4: "I have the honor to inform you that Vicksburg has surrendered to the United States forces on this day, 4th of July."

CAIRO.—The steamer F. V. Wilson arrived from Vicksburg, bringing news of the surrender of that place to Gen. Grant on July 4, after forty-eight hours' bombardment. Passengers say that Gen. Pemberton, in command of the confederates, went out on the morning of the 4th with a flag of truce and offered to surrender, if allowed to march his men out. Grant is reported to have replied that no man should leave except as a prisoner of war. Pemberton then went back, and after a consultation with his subordinate officers, unconditionally surrendered.

PHILADELPHIA.—There is great rejoicing here over the fall of Vicksburg, with firing of salutes, ringing of Independence Hall bell, and illuminations. For the time being the victory of Meade at Gettysburg is lost sight of. The latest news from the Army of the Potomac is that our forces are pushing hard on Lee's fleeing army, killing and capturing many.

JULY 8, 1898.

LONDON.—The shocking accounts of the cowardice and savagery of the crew of the Bourgogne have caused the utmost horror here. Dispatches from Paris testify to the poignant feeling of grief and shame occasioned by the terrible story of inhuman selfishness.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—President McKinley and his advisers determined upon a vigorous war policy as a means of bringing Spain to a speedy realization of the hopelessness of her cause. Gen. Nelson A. Miles, commander-in-chief of the army, was directed to go to Santiago, where he will assume command of the American forces.

GEN. BATES' HEADQUARTERS, Before Santiago de Cuba, via Port Antonio, Jamaica.—An open stretch of only 200 yards now separates our trenches from the advance works of the enemy.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—The navy department has received the following cablegram from Admiral Dewey: "Cavite, July 4, via Hongkong, July 7.—The United States troops have landed and have been comfortably housed at Cavite, Luzon island.

10 YEARS AGO TODAY

JULY 8, 1918.

COPENHAGEN.—The arctic Russians have joined the allies. The entire population of the Murman coast (on the Kola peninsula, bordering the White sea and the arctic) has broken with Russia and united with the entente, a Vardoe, Norway, dispatch says.

WASHINGTON. — Leaders among the people of the Murman coast have appealed to the American and allied consuls at Kola for protection against the Germans, who are reported to the southward.

AMSTERDAM. — German submarines are increasing both in number and quality, Vice Admiral von Capelle, minister of the navy, declared in the reichstag.

WASHINGTON.—Rationing of coal to householders was announced by the fuel administration as among the plans designed to prevent a threatened shortage of coal next winter.

WASHINGTON.—In response to urgent pleas by Secretary of Labor Wilson and Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor, S. J. Konenkamp, president of the Commercial Telegraphers' union, called off the nation-wide strike of his organization set for tomorrow morning.

PEORIA, Ill.—Seventeen more bodies were recovered from the wreck of the excursion steamer Columbia, raising the total recovered to eighty. Coroner Clary of Tazewell county believes the extreme count will not be more than 125 dead, although others cling to the belief the death list will reach 200.

Writers should confine themselves to 200 to 300 words. Give full names and addresses. No manuscripts can be returned. Address Voice of the People, The Tribune.

THE DEMOCRATIC BEAM.

Chicago, June 29.—The Democratic die is cast. The Republican party is a sea of iniquity, its recent tenure of office a symposium of failure. No mention is made of the last seven years being the greatest era of prosperity through which this country has ever passed. Not a word is uttered about the reduction of the public debt by about 25 per cent or more than six billion dollars [this being at about twice as rapid a rate as the Democratic administration which authorized it planned that it should be amortized, with the help of receipts from foreign debtors, which so far have amounted to very little indeed].

They say prosperity has been limited to industry at the expense of the farmer. Does that explain why the agricultural implement companies are now and have been for the last two years doing the biggest business in their history? Are not the mail order companies, 90 per cent of whose customers are in the rural districts, overwhelmed with sales and constantly expanding? One's customers must be pretty well off to do such buying!

They take great pride in the federal reserve act, but make small mention of their responsibility for the eighteenth amendment, which they now propose to modify. They scream about the Ohio gang, but forget the leak of 1916 when names mentioned were close to the White House. They claim to stand for religious liberty and tolerance. Then, if successful, let them put both Jews and Negroes in the cabinet, that we may have a true democracy for the first time.

ALAN D. WHITNEY.

CONSISTENCY.

Niles, Mich., June 29.—How the enthusiasm of THE TRIBUNE for dampness seems to subside lately! It does not much value the jewel of consistency. May we suggest that hereafter, until December of this year, the editorials relating to the election be placed where they evidently belong, in the comic section of the paper? A. SMITH.

THE ASPIRATIONS OF THEIR LORDSHIPS.

Chicago, June 29.—Your reference today to Lord Birkenhead's speech in the house of lords must have been read by many with astonishment. It is to be hoped, however, that the common sense and kindliness of members of that august house will not be measured by the foolish utterances of one who we may now almost suspect was elevated to the house because of a conviction that he was no longer accountable for his actions. Lord Buckmaster appears to sympathize with humanity in its aspirations towards decency. Lord Birkenhead would seem not to be of that ilk, but happily he stands alone in that respect among British statesmen, who have won the reputation of ever inclining towards brotherly kindness. OLIVER MCEWAN.

INGREDIENTS OF A POTPOURRI.

Maywood, Ill., June 28.—I would be grateful to receive some information regarding the old fashioned potpourri. Can any of your readers tell me how to start one—what kind of flowers, spices, etc., are used? H. M.

A STREET CAR THAT STOPPED.

Chicago, June 29.—Will you kindly grant me space in your valuable column to express my appreciation of a courtesy which I was accorded early this morning? For fifteen years I have had to travel at night in Chicago. In all that time I have used the street cars; at transfer points when I was a second or two late I have usually been treated with derision and contempt by conductors whose cars I was unable to catch, despite the fact that I am a swift, strong young man of 32.

It surprised me to see that when I whistled at a northbound Wells street car at about 3 a. m. this morning the conductor pulled the bell rope as a signal to stop the car. It had then passed the intersection point and stopped in the middle of the block. I boarded the car, and a passenger standing on the back platform said, "That's worth a tip."

To offer the gentleman who was so courteous to me would have been an insult! The fact that I was accorded this courtesy has entirely changed my attitude toward the street car company. Formerly they seemed to be inimical to me. Now, when I realize that such men as conductor No. 11,494 are among their employés, I am hopeful that he, and men such as he, will make friends of the public, who must use the street car lines.

EDWARD BOYLE.

ACTORS' OBITUARIES.

Chicago, June 29.—I would like to say a word in praise of the obituary notices you have published in the last few days upon the actors, Mantell and Ditrichstein. It seemed to me that both notices were marked by moderation and that is an unusual quality in obituary items. Generally the praise is lavished with the result that the character under discussion is lost amid the praise bestowed. P. L. MORLEY.

BOLONEY.

Chicago, June 29.—You renounced your creed to marry hypocrisy you dirty bunch of bums. You! The very birds that cry to heaven about a congressman that drinks wet and votes dry. You! The protector of personal liberty. You! The world's greatest newspaper. Boloney!

The only reason in the world that you profess to be wet is to increase your circulation.

When an honest, fearless and intelligent man is nominated on a platform which you helped to promulgate, that I think is sufficient reason for your support regardless of his party affiliations.

I no longer see any reason why you should make any pretenses of being wet. Why not join with the Anti-Saloon league and become their official organ.

D. ALLMAN.

TO YOUR TENTS, O ISRAEL.

Hoopeston, Ill., June 29.—Mr. Claude Bowers used for the peroration of his keynote speech at the Democratic convention the war cry of the ten tribes of Israel when they revolted at the time King Rehoboam ascended the throne. History records that the ten tribes got lost; in fact, they have not been heard from for some time. Is this to be considered prophetic in the coming national election? M. A. B.

New Chrysler "75" Prices—Royal Sedan, $1535; 2-passenger Coupe (with rumble seat), $1535; Roadster (with rumble seat), $1555; Town Sedan, $1655 (wire wheels extra). All prices f. o. b. Detroit.

THESE two entirely new Chrysler Sixes—the "75" and the "65"—are deliberately designed and executed to inspire public admiration to such a pitch that they will immediately supersede all that has gone before and usher into existence an entirely new motoring vogue.

Striking new standards of beauty have been created in these new Chrysler Sixes, even when the artistry of a great industry has seemed to be at its height.

The wholly new Chrysler style creations, now shown for the first time, represent unusual advances over even Chrysler power, speed and efficiency.

We believe that, at their new low prices, they demonstrate that Chrysler engineering, research and manufacturing again have greatly increased the buying power of the dollar when invested in motor cars.

We are confident that all who are even remotely interested in the progress of motor car artistry will find themselves amply repaid by their immediate inspection of these two new Chrysler style achievements.

Features—New Chrysler "65"—New larger engine—65 h. p.—"Silver-Dome" high-compression head using any gasoline—65 and more miles per hour—counterweighted 7-bearing crankshaft, only car at or near this price with this costly feature; new, slender profile radiator—new bowl-shaped lamps—beautiful cowl moulding and cowl lamps—new, longer chassis and longer, wider, roomier bodies—new arched window silhouette—new "air-wing" full-crowned fenders—new internal expanding Chrysler hydraulic four-wheel brakes, unaffected by weather conditions—Lovejoy hydraulic shock absorbers, front and rear—spring ends anchored in live rubber, instead of metal shackles.

AL WORKS HARD; HUMS A TUNE IF ALL GOES WELL

Cheers Veteran Employes with Kind Word.

BY JAMES O'DONNELL BENNETT.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Albany, N. Y., July 7.—[Special.]—In the last three days you have seen Al Smith being perilously patriotic and neighborly with the humble neighbors and the intensely practical patriots down at Tammany Hall in Fourteenth street, New York.

And you have seen him being rough and ready in his sumptuous—but not too sumptuous—suite at the Biltmore.

And you have seen him in his favorite rôle of mentor to the plain people when, in City Hall park, he made his non-partisan and brotherly plea to five thousand "first voters" that they vote.

Now watch him at work in Albany. You shall move through his work room, his file room, and his room of state, and you shall listen to him as he gives to the press news of the Empire state's business. All is open.

No Secret Conference Rooms.

There are no secret conference rooms. If you have straight business with the governor you can see him without scandalous delay.

As governor of the state of New York for the fourth time, Al Smith works hard.

He lately said to officious well-wishers who persisted in talking presidency when he wanted to get to work: "Say, you know what happened to every governor who went to Albany and instead of attending strictly to business sat up in the dome of the capitol with his eyes glued to a pair of field glasses trained on the White House."

Almost within his arms' reach, on the close packed shelves of this gold ceilinged room, are a thousand or so volumes of law reports—New York Supreme court and Court of Appeals decisions—and to them he can make ready and exact reference. Reinforcements they are, and they never fail him.

Has Ten Year File.

In this immense file room, devoted to the documents on matters in which a governor of the state of New York was, is or possibly will be concerned, the system is to weed out every two years, or at least every four years—in other words, at the end of the one or the two terms which a governor may fill—a vast number of such documents as have become outdated. But not so with the documents on matters in which Al Smith was, is, or possibly will be concerned. In his case, the documents go back ten years, despite the fact that in 1920 the Harding landslide brought the two year interlude in his four governorships and the sole defeat ever suffered by a man who in twenty-four years has run 19 times for office.

In other words there was no weeding out when Smith left Albany in 1921. There was no weeding out "for the reason that," as George Graves, who devised the system, put it, "I had a notion he would be back. It's lucky we did not weed out in '21. The governor still asks for correspondence on bills that were before him in '19 and that now come up again with a new alibi."

Void of Formality.

In the little gold ceilinged room the conferences with state officials and with the press are held. Formality is not their note.

While the governor talks or listens he looks over the souvenir junk that accumulates on his desk every 24 hours, asking about it all and emitting baritone grunts indicative of doubt as to its utility. Toward his listeners he pushes a box full of cigars. They look sumptuous. He slits open his letters. He tosses a letter toward the reporters, saying, "Here's a letter with news in it. If you want to give it the once over go to it."

He opens the exercises by calling out with a reverberation that makes me jump.

"Mister Bennett, meet the newspaper men."

I did not know that he knew I was in the room, much less that he knew the name of the object.

During the ensuing twenty minutes his use of the words "perfunctory," "mandatory," and "actuary" is correct and fluent. Nor do I hear today any of the grammatical slips in which he often seems to wanton.

Once he hands forth carbon copies of a digest of a matter of public business, saying: "There you are: if you don't think there's any news in it, why, hop it."

Likes to Hear Questions.

He answers a bombardment of questions good-naturedly, laconically and precisely. They bear on prison reconstruction, on the hospital pension fund, on labor compensation, on budget prospects and on the road program.

Jibes and jokes are numerous. In jibes and in sarcasm, Al Smith can be pitiless, but in the every day attritions of existence, in managing which many notables are either abrupt or pompous, he is extraordinarily considerate, even tender. Aged doormen, some of them seeming old enough to be veterans of the civil war, sit guard in the dim corridors of the capitol, rather forlorn figures, I thought. Al Smith chirks them with a greeting when he breezes in at ten in the morning.

"Hello," says he. "Everything's breaking right for you this morning?"

Fleetingly, twenty years drop away from the aged men. They beam.

When he comes to Albany from New York City he usually takes a mid-afternoon train. That brings him to the executive mansion about seven o'clock. Thence he will telephone to the capitol. "Hello, George, how do you feel about a little work tonight?"

Graves Is Favorable.

Assurance is given that George Graves' attitude toward "a little work" that will run until one or two o'clock in the morning is favorable.

Then this: "I don't want the elevator, George. Have somebody tell the night operator to go home. He's got a family. Not if you're feeling feeble, though, Georgie. But I can walk up."

His stately surroundings; rich, historic, illustrious, cramp his style not at all. The next room, but one to the gold-ceilinged room which is his workroom, is a room of state. Half an acre of crimson carpet covers the floor. Rich crimson curtains emblazoned with the coat of arms of the state—Liberty, blind Justice and an eagle—hang from gilded cornices. The lofty ceiling is heavily beamed in mahogany. The walls are paneled in the same.

In one corner stands a clock a story and a half high and surmounted by an eagle, the governor's flag planted beside it. Over a fireplace as big as a bungalow and sentineled by the inevitable brass cuspidors, hangs a portrait of the aristocratic Tilden. To the left of the fireplace is a portrait of Roosevelt in truculent attitude, left hand on hip, chin thrust forward.

To the left of Clinton, Al himself, as painted by Douglas Volk, in 1921. Next to Al, the august Hughes. Above them both the bald, sinister Dave Hill, and facing them from the far end of the room Eastman Johnson's portrait of the bulky Cleveland.

On the wall opposite the fireplace is Gen. Lafayette, as painted by Charles Ingham more than a century ago, during Lafayette's last visit to New York. The massive gilt frame is the original one. Next to Lafayette is Gov. Seward, Lincoln's great secretary of state, by the celebrated Chester Harding, who was the authentic portraitist of Daniel Webster. And next to the secret panel door which admits to Smith is a marble bust of President Arthur.

Three Became Presidents.

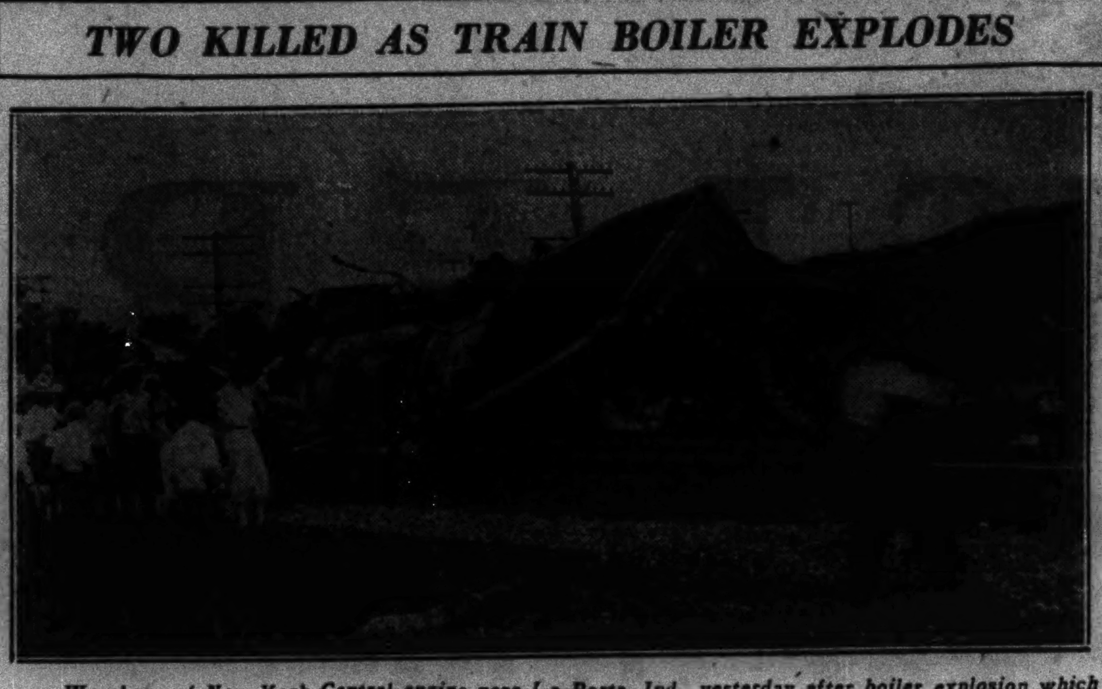
It is all a vivid gubernatorial history of a great commonwealth from the days of the ruffled shirts and white wigs of the Clintons, the stock and clawhammer of Seward, the "Prince Alberts" of Cleveland and Roosevelt, to the natty cutaway of Al Smith. Incidentally, you count in this room three New York politicians who became presidents of the United States, and two more who missed the presidency only by an eyelash.

You always know when work is going well with the governor. For then he sings at his work—some old ballad of other days, or some fleeting hit of the hour. And when work has gone very well indeed and, at the end of his well spent day, the sun is sinking behind the blue line of the Catskills, which he can see from his windows, then he sings "Tim Toulin." That, he sang as a boy to please the firemen in the engine houses of the lower east side.

He dictated the first stanza for me in song to one of his stenographers because he could "remember it better in that way." In deep baritone he hummed:

"When the polls force paraded
"On their semi-annual drill,
"Tim Toulin was the straightest,
"Man in all the line;
"And the Germans were obliged,
"Though much against their will,
"To own that our Tim Toulin,
"Was fourteen karats fine."

TWO KILLED AS TRAIN BOILER EXPLODES



Wreckage of New York Central engine near La Porte, Ind., yesterday after boiler explosion which killed engineer and fireman of passenger train. The blast hurled the boiler and engine cab high into the air.

Hurled Into Air

LaPorte, Ind., July 7.—[Special.]—The engineer and fireman of a New York Central passenger train were killed today when the boiler exploded as the train was being slowed down for a stop at Durham, six miles west of here. The explosion hurled the boiler and engine cab high in the air.

The engineer, Charles Berryman, Elkhart, Ind., was thrown 100 feet and instantly killed; the fireman, E. E. Pouliot, also of Elkhart, died on the way to a hospital.

Douglas Adam, Veteran Newspaper Man, Dies

TOKIO, Japan, July 7.—(AP)—Douglas Adam, 68, first correspondent of the Associated Press in Japan and a veteran journalist, died today of heart disease. He had recently been an editor of Rengo, a Japanese news service.

AL SMITH AND MANY OTHER NOTABLES ARE AT RASKOB FUNERAL

Centerville, Md., July 7.—[United Press.]—Persons of wealth and fame, as well as humble villagers, attended the funeral in a small Catholic church here today of William Raskob, young son of J. J. Raskob, finance chairman of the General Motors corporation.

Gov. Smith of New York, Democratic presidential nominee, was present with a wreath of roses and carnations.

Word that Smith was coming to the funeral attracted 150 citizens to the station, where the New York governor arrived at 4 a. m. with several companions in a special coach belonging to William F. Kenny, New York contractor and lifelong friend of Smith.

Smith and his New York friends, Kenny, J. J. Riordan and Dr. L. S. Sullivan, stayed only a few minutes at the home of the elder Raskob, a strong supporter of Smith's candidacy. They accompanied the cortege to the little Centerville church, their car forming one of 12 in the procession.

DEMOCRATS PICK MADISON MAYOR FOR GOVERNOR

Milwaukee, Wis., July 7.—[Special.] Wisconsin Democrats meeting in state convention here today unanimously indorsed Albert G. Schmedeman, mayor of Madison, as the party's candidate for governor.

The platform adopted by the convention declares in favor of a "fundamental change in the eighteenth amendment."

'SEWER KING' DIED FROM RUM, DEATH REPORT REVEALS

New York, July 7.—[Special.]—As John M. Phillips, "sewer king," was buried with military honors today in Old Calvary cemetery in Queens, it was disclosed in dispatches from Atlantic City that his death there Tuesday resulted from acute alcoholism, both the statement of the attending physician and the official death record being made public.

Seven automobiles loaded with flowers headed the long funeral cortège as it moved from the Phillips home to the church and from the church to the cemetery.

Information concerning the cause of death of Phillips, under indictment on a conspiracy charge in Queens with the former president of the borough, Maurice Connolly, as a result of sewer graft disclosures, was made public in Atlantic City by Frank J. Harrold, chief of the county detectives.

Hursen Automobiles at Hursen Funerals

You never see poor equipment among Hursen's funeral automobiles. You do not see the ordinary kind, either. You see the finest passenger automobiles in America—the most beautiful things on wheels. As to the hearses, Hursen recently surprised Chicago by producing the new Hursen idea—the limousine hearse.

Chicago has demanded a change from the old, overadorned, gloomy-looking hearse. They have tired of sombre gaudiness. The Hursen limousine-hearses are built along the same beautiful lines as the Hursen passenger automobiles. This is but one more feature which has added to the fame of "Hursen" funerals.

It does not matter whether the funeral is a very modest one or a very pretentious one. The same elegance prevails. You see the same unusual and unexcelled passenger automobiles, the same unusual Hursen limousine-hearses.

Yet, it costs not a cent more for the use of Hursen vehicles than for the use of the usual poor equipment you see at many funerals. Then again, remember, that the charges for Hursen funerals are but a fraction of the charges made elsewhere. This is why "Hursen's" is today the largest undertaking establishment in America. So, call Hursen, of course!

VESSEL IN ARCTIC REPORTS CLEW TO AMUNDSEN FATE

Says "Dark Object" Was Seen Falling Into Sea.

KINGS BAY, Spitzbergen, July 7.—(AP)—A clew to the fate of Capt. Roald Amundsen and the five men who accompanied him in a French seaplane in search of missing members of the Nobile Arctic expedition came to light today. Laborers of the Great Northern Coal company, en route from Norway to Advent Bay, said that on June 18, when their vessel, the Ingerfire, was off Bear Island, they saw a dark object dropping from the sky into the sea.

The distance was so great that they could not make out just what it was and they thought nothing further of the incident until their arrival, when they heard other workmen discussing the disappearance of Amundsen's plane. The big machine would have been in the neighborhood of Bear Island at about the time the men mentioned.

Capt. Wisting of the steamship Quest was pessimistic when he was told of the laborers' story.

Fear Alpine Commander Lost.

Anxiety is felt by the Italian rescue forces for Capt. Sora, commander of a party of Alpinists who have been exploring the north coast for traces of the three members of the Nobile party who left the ice floe camp on May 30. The captain has been absent from his party more than a week.

He had been warned in a note dropped by Lieut. Lutzow Holm, Norwegian aviator, not to attempt a foot crossing of the sea ice between him and the Nobile refugees near Foyn island. Members of the captain's party said that he started despite this advice. Another sledge party found a note from him at Cape Brun saying he was proceeding toward Foyn island and relating Lieut. Holm's warning.

Capt. Sora carried very little food and Arctic experts said his lone attempt was against all Arctic experience.

No Trace of Malmgren Party.

STOCKHOLM, July 7.—(AP)—The leader of the Swedish expedition at Spitzbergen reports that the Swedish planes have patrolled the whole coast of Northeast Land without finding trace of the three men of the Nobile party headed by the Swedish scientist, Finn Malmgren. Anxiety for Prof. Malmgren and his two Italian comrades is growing daily.

The Swedish papers criticize the concentration of all efforts for extending relief to the group on the ice floes near Foyn island. The Swedish planes, they argue, should devote their efforts to searching for Prof. Malmgren.

The head of the Swedish expedition has gone to Virgo bay for a conference with the commander of the base ship, Citta di Milano. A Finnish seaplane is about to join the Swedish expedition.

Czecho-Slovakia Sends Plane.

PRAGUE, Czecho-Slovakia, July 7.—(AP)—Czecho-Slovakia today joined the nations which are trying to assist the survivors of the ill fated expedition of Gen. Umberto Nobile. Especial interest here is centered in Dr. Behounek, a citizen of this country, and one of the two meteorologists on the Italia. He is one of the five survivors at the red tent on the ice floe near Foyn island.

The government telegraphed Capt. Haznik, who is now in Sweden with a powerful airplane, to proceed with his machine immediately to the arctic and aid in the rescue attempts. He was specifically instructed to do everything in his power to bring out Dr. Behounek.

HEAT BRINGS NEW NEED FOR ICE AND CAMP FUND GIFTS

Tenement Mothers Seek Relief in Vain.

The city sweltered yesterday. It sweltered last night, and according to the weather man, it will do likewise today. Electric fans buzzed continually, and motorists last night went in search of a breath of stirring air along the country roads.

But down in some districts of the city, walled in from even the smallest bit of a breeze by rows upon rows of tenements, children leaned far out of the windows and whole families attempted to find relief on the fire escapes. Sleep was fitful and broken. Children tossed and babies cried. Milk turned sour for want of ice in the refrigerator. Mothers lay thinking of other summers past, when the hot weather meant the annual vacation to the country where there was a clean sweep of cool, fresh air, stars and nights in which sleep was sound and restful. And many of them wondered, perhaps, if life would ever be like that again.

Heat Bearable to Others.

In other, wealthier sections of the city, the prickly heat was felt also. But by turning on of the electric fan, or mixing fruit juices and tinkling ice, or riding into the country, the evening became bearable.

Yesterday's torrid wave brought suffering to many a home in the tenement districts—homes without ice, and where the thought of relief is as far away as the crisp cool days of fall. There will be no let-up in the suffocating heat of the small tenement rooms all summer long unless the more fortunate friends of these mothers and children come to their aid.

Contributions sent to THE TRIBUNE previous to yesterday's blast of hot weather helped to send many to Camp Algonquin, 40 miles northwest on the Fox river, where these mothers and children may enjoy a vacation among the cool green hills. Gifts to THE TRIBUNE'S free ice fund have been responsible for many an ice book being delivered to grateful mothers in these same tenement districts.

Still More Is Needed.

Further contributions to both funds are acknowledged by THE TRIBUNE:

PLAN EARLY WORK ON NEW WACKER DRIVE BUILDING

Work is to start immediately on a twenty-nine story shop and office building at the southeast corner of Wacker drive and La Salle street, opposite the new Builders' building, for J. M. Patterson.

The main part of the structure will be twenty-three stories high, with a tower rising an additional six stories. Shops will comprise the first five floors, with standard offices in the rest of the building. Both street elevations will be of Bedford stone.

Holabird & Root, and Rebori, Wentworth, Dewey & McCormick are associated architects in the planning of the structure which is to be completed for occupancy by May 1, 1929. The size of the site is 60½x100 feet. Clark & Trainer will have the management of the building.

AMELIA CALLS ON NEW YORK WOMEN TO HELP AVIATION

Make Flights, She Urges Them at Luncheon.

New York, July 7.—[Special.]—Women prominent in the affairs of city and state, honored the first of their sex to fly the Atlantic when Miss Amelia Earhart was their guest at the Woman's City club on Park avenue, today. Reservations were made for 150.

Mrs. H. Edward Dreier, president of the club, praised the flyer as a modern American girl; Mrs. E. C. Carter, chairman of International Coöperation for the State League of Women Voters, spoke of her as a promoter of international friendship and Miss Frances Perkins, head of the Industrial Bureau of the state department of labor, touched on her activities as a social worker in Boston.

Miss Earhart Talks.

"I am a social worker," Miss Earhart said, in part, "and I'm just out on a bat. But, seriously, I want you all to understand that the prime motive behind our flight across the Atlantic was a furtherance of the knowledge of aviation and drawing the attention of the public to it.

"America is far behind Europe in the development of commercial air lines. If our flight will make our country more air conscious and lead to the greater development of American aviation, we will not have flown in vain."

Miss Earhart urged the women of the club to encourage aviation by taking individual flights.

Rides in Police Side Car.

Miss Earhart added a new thrill to her adventures late today when she braved the perils of New York's traffic in the side car of a police motorcycle, and she called it a "once in a life ride."

Leaving a hospital where she had chatted with several child patients, she found Motorcycle Patrolman Charles Minnett, one of her escort, just about to mount his machine.

She got into the side car, waved to Mr. and Mrs. Putnam, her erstwhile companions in a limousine, and sped away.

The cop and the flyer went down Riverside drive well ahead of the Putnam machine. The cycle hit an average of fifty miles an hour, and, to use her own words, Miss Earhart "just loved it." The trip ended at the Biltmore hotel, where Miss Amelia is stopping.

Guests of Ziegfeld.

Tonight Miss Earhart and her companions, Wilmer Stultz, pilot, and Louis Gordon, mechanic, of the monoplane Friendship, were guests of Mr. and Mrs. Florenz Ziegfeld at the Ziegfeld theater, where "Show Boat" is the attraction. After the performance Miss Earhart was to go to the George Palmer Putnam home in Rye, N. Y., and tomorrow she and her coflyers will be entertained at the Westchester Biltmore.

Gordon had a streak of hard luck last night, he told police today, when he lost the engagement ring he had given Miss Anne Bruce of Brookline, Mass., his fiancée, before he started across the Atlantic in the Friendship.

He noticed Miss Bruce had left the ring on her boudoir table at the Hotel Biltmore last night, he said. He picked it up to take it to her when he joined the others of his party, including Mr. and Mrs. Putnam and Mrs. Stultz, at the Paramount theater. Gordon told Miss Bruce he had the ring, but he could not find it in his pocket.

Talks About Engineer.

Is Miss Earhart engaged?

That is the question she soon must answer, somehow or other. Yesterday, in the rush of her official homecoming, she managed to evade all inquiries about Sam Chapman, the electrical engineer, who is reported to be her fiancé. Not so today.

"I would rather not speak about my private affairs," Miss Earhart explained. "Yes, I have heard from Mr. Chapman. There were roses waiting for me here. But I have received flowers from many persons to whom I am not engaged."

She said she expected to see Mr. Chapman in Boston on Monday.

Meanwhile the slim young woman, who has been called, to her own displeasure, "Lady Lindy," steadfastly refused to discuss even her theories of marriage.

"I don't know whether marriage is woman's natural career," she declared. "That is a question which has not been settled, and I haven't tried it, so I cannot say."

McCrossen Elected Head of Baptist Young People

Kansas City, Mo., July 7.—(AP)—J. Willard McCrossen, Philadelphia, vice president of the Baptist Young People's Union of America, today was elected president of the organization at its annual convention here.

James Morrice, San Francisco; Claude Webb, Kansas City, Kas.; Hugh D. Pickett, Philippi, W. Va., and W. A. Kennedy, Winnipeg, Man., were elected vice presidents. Morrice was reëlected. Miss Thelma Rogers of Kansas City was elected secretary and Orlo Montague, Chicago, was reëlected treasurer.

The 1929 convention will be held in Detroit and the 1930 convention in San Francisco.

ITALIANS TELL OF BATTLING CLOUDS IN BRAZIL FLIGHT

Worst Moments Were in Seeking Landing.

ROME, July 7.—(AP)—The most difficult part of the long distance record flight of the Italian Savoia-64 by Capt. Ferrarin and Maj. Del Prete was not the long hop across the South Atlantic, but was the long period while the aviators were flying in fog and rain along the coast of Brazil seeking a landing place.

In an official report to the Italian government the two flyers told how they flew back and forth along the coast and then, fearing the exhaustion of their gasoline, finally made an emergency landing at Tauros beach, after 59 hours in the air.

The report, the first full story of the brilliant flight, was made public by the ministry of aeronautics today and was as follows:

"We left the Montacello field at 6:51 p. m. [all hours indicated are Greenwich time]. Notwithstanding that the takeoff was exceedingly long, the machine sustained itself well in the air and we made for Gibraltar, passing over Sardinia at 8:28.

Dodge Hot Air.

"We saw the lighthouses at Cape Fernando and at Cavoli island without noting the torpedo boat escort. Coming near the African coast near Algiers at 400 meters height, we were surrounded by very hot air. We got away from the coast to seek a lower temperature.

"During the night we rose gradually to 3,500 meters in order to get above cloud banks, but were not successful. From 11 o'clock at night to 2 o'clock in the morning we were obliged to navigate long stretches amidst the clouds.

"Near the equator the sky was serene. At 3 p. m., flying 4,000 meters up, we saw the American coast, which was immediately lost to view below us, and we proceeded, steering by compass, for Bahia. At 4:20 p. m., on account of the low clouds, the bad weather and the impossibility of descending to study the coast, we decided to return northward, where we a landing at Port Natal. had left behind clear weather, to make Hunt Safe Landing.

"On account of the low clouds at a low flying level, the hills around, and the poor visibility because of rain, we did not succeed in finding the field, which was 23 kilometers southwest of Natal, behind hills. In view of the approaching exhaustion of our gasoline supply, we decided to return north where we had observed a zone favorable to an emergency landing.

"Near the village of Tauros, the gasoline pressure gave out unexpectedly while we were flying under clouds at a height of 100 meters, and we were obliged to land on a beach of sandy soil. After a few meters of rolling, the wheels sank in the soft sand, causing damage to the chassis.

"During the whole flight the functioning of the motor and the behavior of the plane and the various installations aboard were perfect."

Await Repairs to Plane.

RIO JANEIRO, July 7.—(AP)—The French Air Mail company has placed one of its planes at the disposal of the Italian flyers. Acting on instructions from Rome, however, the flyers declined the offer and will continue their flight to Rio Janeiro in their own plane when it is repaired.

The Italian chamber of commerce of Sao Paulo, Brazil, decided to pay the expenses of the flight in addition to giving the airmen the $25,000 prize.

U. S. TARS RESCUE MAN MAROONED NIGHT ON ROCK

Battle Potomac Falls as Thousands Watch.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., July 7.—[Special.]—Four sailors in a small boat gave thousands of spectators lining the Virginia and Maryland shores a thrill this morning when they successfully battled the swirling rapids of the Little Potomac falls to rescue Hubert E. Lugenbeel, 31, marooned on a rock in the middle of the turbulent river for more than twelve hours.

Lugenbeel and a companion, James H. Angel, were thrown into the water when they attempted to shoot the rapids and dislodge the body of Miss Catherine Carr, of Hyattsville, Md., who was drowned Tuesday night. Angel was rescued after three hours' work. He was severely bruised and cut.

Through the night, powerful search lights furnished by the coast guard and the Washington fire department were trained upon the rock.

MAD DOG BITES BOY.

Antigo, Wis., July 7.—[Special.]—William Igl, 13, son of Joe Igl, was bitten on the hand by a dog which was found to have rabies. Stray dogs in the immediate neighborhood have been ordered killed.

Wife Granted Writ to Halt Strong Arm Rule of Spouse

Strong arm methods that were once approved by society as an expedient for preserving the family are no longer countenanced either by statute or public opinion, Superior Judge Joseph David held yesterday. He issued a writ of habeas corpus to free Mrs. Caroline Walker, 5550 Kenmore avenue, from the alleged domination of her spouse, Jack Walker, sales manager for a radio firm.

The woman's petition, presented to the court by Attorney Benjamin Piser, set forth that her husband through force and intimidation was preventing her from filing a suit for divorce. The lawyer told the court that Friday night Mrs. Walker informed her spouse that she would no longer tolerate his drinking habits, that she was going to file suit to end their marriage.

Locked in Her Room.

"He locked her in her room," Attorney Piser related to the judge, "so she could not keep an appointment with her counsel. He insisted that as head of the household he was justified in extreme measures to save his home. My client fears that, unless she is given the protection of this court, she will be coerced into a sacrifice of rights that are hers regardless of her sex."

"It is true," Judge David agreed, "that man is no longer king in his own home. In matrimony a woman does not pledge herself into bondage. She retains her individual rights.

"There was a time in history when a man was commended for using physical force in preserving a family institution. Today, a man in danger of losing his wife must resort solely to persuasion. The change is for the better; we have risen from the brute stage.

Both in Court Monday.

"I'll issue this writ of habeas corpus and make it returnable Monday. I want both the huhband and wife to appear before me Monday to ascertain the facts supporting her allegations. No man, in this enlightened age, can intimidate or forcibly bar his wife from asking the courts to give her a divorce."

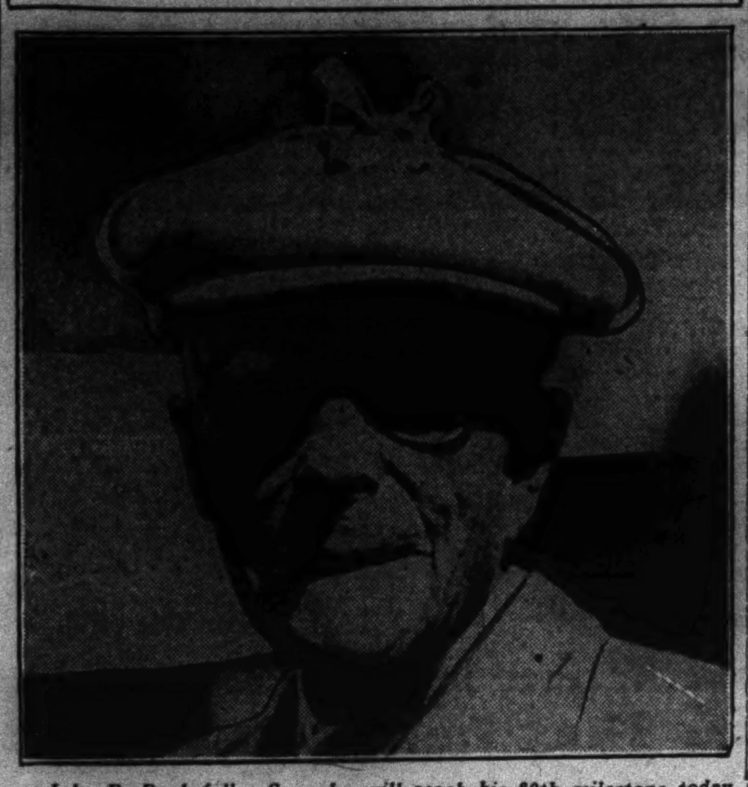
ROCKEFELLER 89 TODAY; HAS FEAST ONE DAY AHEAD

Won't Be Found in Usual Pew This Morning.

JOHN D. 89 YEARS OLD TODAY



John D. Rockefeller Sr., who will reach his 89th milestone today. He celebrated the event yesterday. [Associated Press Photo.]

New York, July 7.—[Special.]—At 89 John D. Rockefeller is proving himself a good Baptist by celebrating his birthday today instead of tomorrow when it really occurs, but at the same time he is reducing the possible number of newspaper photographers in the Union chapel congregation on Sunday by announcing that he will not attend church there.

Today was a fine day for golf, and Mr. Rockefeller played at his best, which is accounted excellent for a man of his years. He has two steadfast ambitions, to make golf scores under 100 and to bring his birthdays up to that figure, and doctor says that those ambitious go well together.

Date to Play on 100th Birthday.

So closely joined are golf and birthdays in the mind of Mr. Rockefeller that he has an appointment to play golf with his physician, Dr. H. F. Biggars, on the day he is exactly one century old. One of the heavy ambitions of Dr. Biggars, professionally and as a sportsman, is to see that Mr. Rockefeller keeps that appointment.

"I am in the best of health," Mr. Rockefeller said this morning. "I never permit myself to look at a time piece when retiring at night or before arising in the morning and I find that it adds very much to restfulness."

Following his birthday game of golf, Mr. Rockefeller motored through the Westchester hills and afterwards had dinner with members of the family, including Mr. and Mrs. John D. Rockefeller Jr.

At the age of 60 the elder Rockefeller was quoted as saying, "I believe it is a religious duty to get all the money you can, fairly and honestly, to keep all you can, and give away all you can."

List of Major Donations.

A recent computation reveals that he has followed that philosophy fairly well. Following is a list of the major Rockefeller philanthropies, father and son, not counting the shiny dimes:

Rockefeller Foundation	$182,704,624
General educational board	129,197,960
Laura Spellman Rockefeller memorial	73,825,457
University of Chicago	44,000,000
Rockefeller Institute for Medical Research	39,904,602
International education board	21,000,000
American Baptist Foreign Missionary society	5,725,000
Ministers and missionaires' benefit board [Baptist]	5,475,000
American Baptist Home Mission society	5,475,000

IRON HAND SAVES LITHUANIA FROM AIMLESS PARTIES

Dictatorship Better than Pseudo-Democracy.

BY JOHN STEELE.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

KAUNAS, July 7.—The reason dictatorships flourish in Europe is because of the extreme weakness of the opposition. Nowhere have I been more impressed by the utter futility of the spokesmen of ideal democracy than in Lithuania, where a little man less than five feet tall but with a square jaw and an emphatic fist is ruling the country more absolutely even than Mussolini is ruling Italy or Pilsudski Poland. Each of the last named despots puts up with some pretense of a parliament, but Augustinas Waldemaras holds such subterfuges in utter contempt, and declares frankly he won't have a parliament until he is absolutely sure it will be a tame one.

Every now and then there is a "plot" against him, but the only result is a few more lodgers in the state jails. The last one was typical. A group of army officers decided that the time had come in the name of liberty to depose the dictator. That much they were agreed on, but they were not very clear on what they wanted to put in his place. They got a couple of regiments ready and called on Waldemaras and informed him that he was out.

Vodka Was Strong.

Waldemaras received the news with good natured interest and invited them to sit down and have a drink and talk over the details of handing over the government. The vodka was strong and the talk was long and after a while the officers were overcome. They woke up in jail and probably are still wondering how it happened.

Other conspirators never got so far. Usually the plots are discovered after the first meeting or two of the plotters and those who are not arrested leave the country and pose as exiled patriots in Berlin, Paris and London. After a while they come back and if they behave themselves the government lets them alone.

Too Many Parties.

The truth is that Lithuania suffered before the dictatorship from too many parties. Most of the new states since Versailles would like to get rid of the representative system, but it is sacred as part of the international agreement to which they owe their existence, even though it breeds a plethora of parties. All are therefore engaged in finding some way to neutralize its effects. Latvia has passed a law compelling every registered party to put up a sum of money which will be forfeited if a certain portion of votes is not polled. Lithuania and Poland have taken the way of dictatorship while preserving the parliamentary form. The last Lithuanian parliament had 85 members and twenty-six parties. The situation was somewhat ameliorated by the grouping of the twenty-six into seven large blocs, but the composition of these big groups was always changing, and no prime minister could count on a stable majority. This was the situation when Waldermaras seized power and dissolved parliament. He is determined that it shall not recur. He hopes when he does decide to have a parliament to have only two or at most three parties.

Chindblom Recommends Extra Panama Canal Locks

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BALBOA, Panama Canal Zone, July 7.—Congressman Carl N. Chindblom of Chicago, who with his family sailed for Hawaii, believes preparation for an extra set of locks in the Panama Canal should be made without delay. "With the ever increasing South American and Pacific trade, I am sure these locks will be required within ten to fifteen years," he said.

American Baroness Killed as Auto Falls Into Ravine

NICE, France, July 7.—(AP)—Baroness Heckscher, 55, born Paddie Manuel of Newark, N. J., and her English companion, Mrs. Annie Sconcia, were killed last night when their automobile fell 350 feet into a ravine near Apremont. Sidney Rusinow of Fredrickaburg, O., the driver, was seriously hurt, but is expected to recover.

Two Killed in Auto Crash.

New York, July 7.—[Special.]—Two young women were killed and a man was injured gravely today when their automobile overturned near North Caldwell, N. J. A second man in the automobile escaped injury. The dead were Miss Sarah Hughes and Miss May Shaffrey, both of Newark. The injured man was Russell Garret of Bloomfield, N. J.

SWALLOWS SAFETY PIN, CHILD DIES.

AN AMAZING NEW INVENTION

That Will End Ironing-Day Drudgery for Millions

The New Thor ROTARY IRON

$49.50

WOMEN—there is no longer any economy in bending over an ironing board hours at a time at the back-breaking, health-ruining job of ironing by hand.

Here is relief! You need never again stand up to iron. You need never take more than 3 hours' time to do the largest ironing. You need never again be tired and weary when ironing is done.

A new invention brings this relief

An amazing new appliance is on the market. Different from anything you have seen or heard about. It is a product of the Hurley Machine Company—for 21 years makers of world-famous Thor Washing and Ironing Machines. It is the result of months of test and research—in which General Electric engineers have co-operated with the Hurley engineering division to make possible faster, simpler, more efficient ironing.

Sensationally low priced

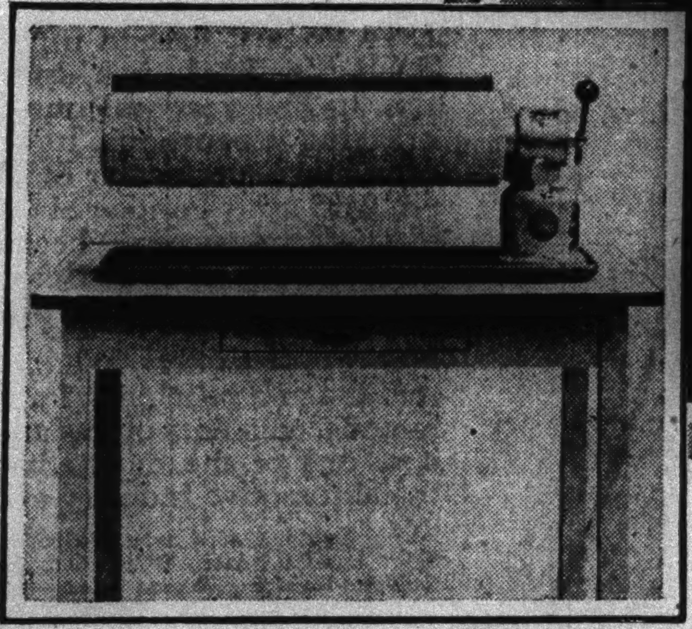
We have priced this remarkable new Rotary Iron at less than one-half the price of any machine of comparable quality and results on the market today. Priced it so low that you can own one for a few cents a day. Now—it's cheaper to own this amazing new device than to do your own ironing by hand, or have it done by a laundress.

No labor—No exertion—You iron sitting down

This is the simplest of all ironing methods. Note how simple in the illustrations. To iron, you simply connect it to the electric light current—sit down, and feed the pieces over the heated roll. It heats as quickly as an ordinary electric iron. It irons everything—most important, of course, the loads of flat work that make up some 90% of the family ironing. A tablecloth that took you 40 minutes to do by hand, slips through the Thor Rotary Iron in 4 minutes. And finishes with a beautiful sheen, impossible to obtain by the most expert hand methods.

2 models to meet every home requirement

Model No. 0 detachable model (illustrated) operates from the wringer shaft of your Thor 2, 6 or 8 Washing Machine. Its light weight enables women to carry it without slightest strain or exertion. When ironing is done—slip it into a drawer, corner or closet, out of the way until needed again.



Model No. 10 (illustrated) is the Thor Rotary Iron complete with enclosed General Electric motor. This model, too, is portable, small size, big capacity. It can be carried from one room to another as easily as you carry your vacuum cleaner.

Be rid of ironing-day labor forever!

Are you still slaving with the ironing-day methods of yesterday? It's false economy. It wears you out. It isn't worth the price you pay. Give us 30 minutes in your own home to prove the absolute simplicity of this new workless way. And realize that for a few cents a day from your household budget you can have this remarkable new-type machine—and never again iron by hand.

Portable • Light Weight • Big Capacity • Low Priced

1 Remove the wringer from wringer shaft.

3 To iron, you sit in a comfortable chair and feed the pieces through.

4 After ironing, slip the Rotary Iron away into kitchen drawer, closet or corner.

EXPERT URGES PRIVATE CAPITAL BUILD HIGHWAYS

Only Immediate Way to Relieve Jams, He Says.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Ogdensburg, N. Y., July 7.—[Special.]—So insistent is the demand of motor traffic for adequate facilities in the north nad western portions of New York state that private capital for highway enterprises offers the best promise of an immediate solution, in the opinion of George C. Diehl, consulting engineer for Erie county, and international authority on municipal and regional planning.

Mr. Diehl points out that all that is humanly possible, politics considered, is being done in the Buffalo area to build roads, but that with a $38,000,000 program in full blast, this region is from ten to 15 years behind the development of the auto vehicle.

Converging lines of a vast traffic from the west and east pass through the Buffalo-Niagara needle's eye, not only motor traffic, but rail and water traffic as well.

Buffalo Plans for Future.

What has already developed in rail transportation may be looked for in motor transportation, with perhaps an added volume. Besides the normal traffic moving east and west through this gateway, one of the greatest natural attractions for tourists, Niagara Falls, exerts a masterful drawing power upon automobile nomads, and yet another magnet is found in the hoadry quality of the accommodations just across the Niagara river.

Mr. Diehl considers that he is engaged in building the groundwork for an international city of seven millions population in the Buffalo-Niagara region covering an area of 700 miles. He believes that the first step in such an enterprise must be the creation of modern arteries of transportation.

To meet the situation a definite plan known as the greater motorway system has been adopted by Erie county, in which Buffalo is situated, and designed to tie in with the programs of Chautauqua and Niagara counties. In connection with the latter several boulevards to the falls are provided, and with the former a wide boulevard along Lake Erie connecting with the national trails from the west.

15 Years Behind on Roads.

The Buffalo plan is now fairly under way. It includes 40 to 60 foot roadways and in the end the cost is expected to reach $38,000,000. The financing aspect is quite similar to that existing in Cook county. The city of Buffalo pays 76 per cent of the county's taxes and the highway development is considered more a Buffalo enterprise than one of the outlying county.

The highway plan, briefly, consists of 22 radial highways leading from the city, each intersecting two loop highways. The first loop encircles an area of 5 miles, the center of which is downtown Buffalo. The outer loop incloses an area of 150 square miles.

"This area, in common with most other metropolitan centers, is from ten to fifteen years behind automobile development in its road building," Mr. Diehl asserted. "But the right of way development is still further in arrears. The right of way should be at least ten years ahead of the motor traffic situation in every important center. Pavements can be built almost overnight anywhere, but rights of way require time to acquire and they constitute the fundamental basis for all traffic facility.

Boosts Private Capital Plan.

"I am inclined to think that self-sustaining thoroughfares, built with private capital, under laws providing reasonable reversion and recapture provisions will finally be the solution to the problem of motor traffic's summary demands.

"Private capital can get rights of way more speedily and at more reasonable costs than units of government. Rights of way are more wisely and scientifically determined by private investors than by public bodies. Politics do not influence private investment while they do influence public action. The business investors' actions are based on business principles, it recognizes a speculative quality, but it does not make investments in worthless properties nor improvements on the basis of political considerations.

"Private capital is waiting for a chance to hazard billions on the future of motor ways, and when it enters the field will build thoroughfares of the most advanced design, separating all grades and lighting maintaining and policing in a sane manner. These highways of course, will revert to the state in the course of time or, if their revenues justify, be subject to recapture by the state. At any rate, rights of way will be procured and be preserved for the public, before it is too late, in the most desirable form for public convenience."

BY EDWARD MOORE.

"Il Trovatore" is elderly but still spry. One takes it from last night's performance at Ravinia to be about the best bet in opera. It is the last degree unlikely that the percentage of patrons able to pass an examination on the subject of its plot grows any larger from year to year, but on the other hand they do not forget its fine old squaretoed tunes and that counts for a lot among opera goers.

Heat Agrees with Singer.

The Ravinia pilgrims had several reasons for enjoying themselves at this performance. One was that "Il Trovatore" calls for velvets and heavy cloaks and lots of them, so that by regarding the cast on the stage the audience could take a sort of heartless comfort in realizing that they were at least somewhat cooler than the singers.

Another reason for enjoyment was that high temperatures seemed to have a favorable effect on the singers' throats, and that with Elisabeth Rethberg as Leonora and Giovanni Martinelli as Manrico the pilgrims were hearing a performance of the soprano and tenor parts of this work such as can be found only under exceptional circumstances.

These two set the pace, but the old principals were only the briefest space behind. Ina Bourskaya came in at short notice to take the place of the announced but indisposed Julia Claussen as the contralto gypsy Azucena. She is a skilled artist in character parts and to this one she gave an entirely uncommon amount of distinguishing color and fire.

Basiola's Voice Just Right.

So applause ran high and everybody had a good time, and no one with the slightest pretension to charitable heart could begrudge any of the audience their enjoyment, certainly not on a night as hot as last night.

FRENCH CURB ON U. S. FILMS UNDER FIRE AT GENEVA

Wilson Loses Tilt with Europeans.

GENEVA, July 7.—(AP)—The Franco-American Film controversy entered the league of nations today when Hugh R. Wilson, American minister in Berne, announced that the United States reserved the right to have recourse to diplomatic action or to an arbitral award.

The announcement was made before the conference for the abolition of restrictions on imports.

Mr. Wilson protested the recent French regulations concerning the showing of foreign films in France, and stated that while the Americans have acquiesced, they have not agreed to the procedure of the French government. The Americans, he said, had taken the best they could get so as to be able to continue business temporarily.

Disagree on Definition.

He said that the American government disagrees with the French view that film restrictions are not prohibitions within the strict meaning of the convention on this question.

He argued that the lack of freedom to show films was essentially not different from preventing their entrance into the country, and hence that the ratio agreement which has been reached between France and American film interests vitiated the Geneva convention.

M. Serruys, the French plenipotentiary, contended that the question involved was not economic, but spiritual. He insisted upon France's right to protect her national traditions, culture and ideals. France had the right to require that foreign films should not insult France, he said.

"Destroyed Traditions."

Europe, he said, was forced to accept the rush of American products such as automobiles, but had no intention of being swamped by American films if they destroyed European traditions.

M. Serruys declared that Mr. Wilson was right in insisting that there should be no disguised protectionism, but insisted that it was noteworthy that the United States herself sometimes resorted to discrimination against foreign products.

The delegates of Germany, Austria, Italy, and India rallied to the position taken by M. Serruys, and eventually the conference decided to accept the opinion of the German delegate that the matter was outside the scope of the conference.

President Colijn of Holland practically broke off further discussion and announced that the debate would rest as a mere exchange of views.

Better than ever · and winning even greater success

Ever since it flashed into the field, Pontiac Six has been a history-making car. Its first year was one of record-breaking proportions. Its second saw even more spectacular heights attained. And now, Pontiac Six is winning even greater success—because today's Pontiac Six in countless ways is a better car than its famous predecessors.

Now Pontiac offers, in addition to the stamina and reliability for which it is famous, elements of design stamping it as one of the most advanced cars the automotive industry affords. The G-M-R cylinder head—the cross-flow radiator—the AC fuel pump . . . these, and a dozen additional developments, are typical of its marked superiority over all other cars in the field.

Combining the beauty of bodies by Fisher and highest quality construction with its numerous notable engineering advancements, it provides style, comfort, long life and smooth six-cylinder performance—never before available at prices as low as $745. Ride once—and you will agree . . . here is value that cannot be matched!

JUDAH IS HOME; BOOSTS CUBA AS WESTERN RIVIERA

Ambassador Also Praises Island's Liquor.

Noble Brandon Judah, Chicago lawyer, ambassador to Cuba and colonel of the 149th Field artillery of the Rainbow division, returned to his Lake Forest home for a vacation yesterday. During the afternoon he enumerated for a reporter the beauties and advantages of the little island republic and chief among them was—good liquor.

As the soldier-diplomat visualized it, Cuba will soon be the Riviera of the western world. Now, he said, only Havana is a playground. Not so long hence it will be the whole of the island, for Cuba has just borrowed $50,000,000 from the Third National Bank of New York, and with that sum will span the island from end to end with fine broad highways.

See It Great Resort.

"Then," he added, "the visitor may drive all over the island. It will be one of the most wonderful resorts in the world."

Col. Judah will remain at home in Lake Forest for a few days. On the 15th and 16th of the month he will go to Columbus, O., to attend a reunion of the Rainbow division, with which he served in France. And on July 22 he will go into camp for two weeks with his regiment, the 149th, at Sparta, Wis.

He looked forward to the latter with a keen enthusiasm. "I think it will be great fun," he said. "And I suppose I am the only United States ambassador who is also colonel of a regiment."

Cubans for Hoover.

Col. Judah said Cuba's prosperity is much bound up with prosperity in the United States. He said he believed most Cubans hope Hoover will be elected, for they were much satisfied with the Coolidge administration and they believe that Hoover will follow out the President's aims and policies.

"Cuba, like the United States, has had its recent farm problem," he added. "It was due mostly to an overproduction of sugar. But the farmers in Cuba are solving their own problem by diversified farming. Many, for instance, now are growing potatoes and other commodities in large quantities, where before they grew only sugar."

Ambassador Judah will return to Cuba after the Sparta encampment.

FATHER SHOOTS TWO IN EFFORT TO AVENGE GIRL

Ferdinand Morando, 35, of 2924 Lyndale avenue, shot and wounded two men yesterday. He had been told, the police learned, that John Manna, 24, a barber at 603 South Western avenue, had mistreated his 5 year old daughter. Morando entered the shop and shot Manna while he was shaving a customer. Policeman John Duchan, who saw the shooting, tried to disarm Morando and the gun accidentally discharged. The bullet struck Walter Radtke, 27, of 1539 Nelson street. The two wounded men were taken to the county hospital in a serious condition. Morando was taken to the Marquette station.

GIRL CHARGES HUSBAND WITH KIDNAPING HER

Dorothy Mareras Tossopoulos, 18 years old, appeared before Magistrate Sandusky of Cicero yesterday and demanded a warrant charging her own husband, Chris Tossopoulos, 48 years old, with kidnaping.

"I think maybe I better get a warrant for my mother and father, too," she added. They helped him. Chris was a boarder at our home and they all decided last November I ought to marry him. I couldn't see him. He was too old. But they loaded me into an automobile, drove to Rockford and made me go through a marriage ceremony.

"It made no difference to me. I wouldn't have him. Chris lives at 701 South Paulina street and I live in Cicero. I work in a waffle shop and don't mind that if I can keep away from him. Last Monday he kidnaped me again and took me to my parents. They beat me and said I had to live with him. When he tried to come into the room with me I grabbed his pistol and made them all let me get away."

Magistrate Sandusky issued a warrant charging Tossopoulos with disorderly conduct and announced the kidnaping angle would be threshed out at a later date before him.

Wounded Professor and Son to Stay in Estes Park

Professor George Newton Sleight of Lake Forest college, and his son, Virgil, who were mysteriously shot and wounded in Estes Park, Colo., expect to carry out their original vacation plans and remain in the park the rest of the summer. A. G. Sleight of Sturgis, Mich., another son, talked to his father over the telephone yesterday and learned that the injuries are slight. Meanwhile, forest rangers and park officials are searching the mountain area for the assailant who is believed to be a maniac.

ASHURST LAUDS MEN ON BOULDER DAM COMMISSION

Work's Appointees Have Ability, He Says.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., July 7.—[Special.]—Confidence in the ability and impartiality of the five experts named yesterday by Secretary of the Interior Work to study and report on the feasibility of the Boulder Cañon dam project was expressed today by Senator Ashurst [Dem., Ariz.], who has led the fight for several years against the Boulder dam bill.

Similarly the personnel of the new commission was lauded at the Washington headquarters of the American Engineering council, although not one of the five eminent engineers and geologists recommended by the council is among those named by Dr. Work.

Members of Board.

None of the commission, which includes Maj. Gen. William I. Sibert, retired, former chief of army engineers; Daniel Webster Mead of the University of Wisconsin engineering department; Robert Ridgway, widely known New York engineer; Charles P. Berkey, New York geologist, and Warren J. Mead, professor of geology at the University of Wisconsin, has ever, so far as is known here, committed himself on any of the controversial phases of the Boulder dam project.

Senator Ashurst declared he was particularly impressed by the appointment of Gen. Sibert and Mr. Ridgway, while I. W. Wallace, executive secretary of the American Engineering council, declared he was prepared to vouch for the reliability, capability, and integrity of every member of the commission.

All Have Open Minds.

"They are splendid men and they will make a strong commisison," declared Mr. Wallace. "So far as I know they are not committed in any way on any phase of the Boulder dam question and we are sure they will go into this work with open minds and will do a conscientious piece of work."

Appointment of the commission was authorized by a resolution passed in the closing hours of the last session and signed by President Coolidge. The secretary of the interior was given authority to name a special commission of five engineers and geologists, one of which should be an active or retired officer of the army.

On Canal Board.

Gen. Sibert, who was retired in 1920, served as a member of the canal commission from 1907 to 1914. He built the Gatun locks and dam in the Panama canal, the west breakwater, Colon harbor and excavated the channel from Gatun to the Atlantic ocean.

Mr. Ridgway, known in Chicago as a member of the traction and subway commission which made an exhaustive study of the city's transportation problem in 1916'-17, has been chief engineer for the New York City transportation board, in charge of all rapid transit design and construction, since 1924, and prior to that superintended the building of the Catskill aqueduct and a number of East river tunnels.

Daniel Webster Mead has been professor of hydraulic and sanitary engineering at the University of Wisconsin since 1904 and is known as the designer and builder of water and hydro-electric plants all over the country.

Member of Wisconsin Faculty.

Warren Judson Mead has been a member of the faculty of the University of Wisconsin since 1906 and professor of geology at that institution since 1918.

Mr. Berkey, the fifth member of the commission and a former member of the faculty of the University of Minnesota, has been professor of geology at Columbia university since 1903.

STUDY FEASIBILITY OF BOULDER DAM

TRIBUNE TO GIVE NEWS DAILY TO VIRGIN ISLANDS

Radio Station to Pick Up Broadcast to Ships.

New York, July 7.—[Special.]—Extension of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE'S ship news service to embrace the Virgin islands was announced here today.

Under the arrangement the inhabitants of this newest insular possession of the United States will be supplied with a comprehensive daily digest of the world's news—impartial and unbiased.

Appreciates Service.

Request for THE TRIBUNE'S news originated with W. Evans, governor of the Virgin islands. His appreciation of the service—which has been granted free of all cost—is expressed in the following letter:

"VIRGIN ISLANDS, June 15.—Col. R. R. McCormick, THE TRIBUNE, Chicago.

"My Dear Col. McCormick: Arthur S. Henning has just informed me that you have granted authority for the publication of THE TRIBUNE'S R. C. A. news service in the Virgin islands, in accordance with the recent request from me.

"I wish to assure you that your kindness in this matter is greatly appreciated both by the government and the people of the Virgin islands and that this service will be of immense value to us in this outlying possession of the United States where accurate and prompt publication of events of world interest is very necessary.

"With kindest regard and renewed assurance of my gratitude, I am, cordially yours,

[Signed] "W. EVANS, Governor."

Furnish News to 100 Ships.

For several years THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE has been furnishing news to almost 100 ships at sea, through an arrangement with Radio Corporation of America. Becoming familiar with this service and the nature of the news content, the governor of the Virgin islands decided that its dissemination in the islands would prove beneficial, both to government officials and to the populace.

The news will be "picked up" in the Virgin islands by the naval radio station there. It is broadcast nightly to ship subscribers by the R. C. A. Of the receiving vessels, 25 are linked with the sea edition of THE TRIBUNE, which is printed under the title of The Chicago Tribune Ocean Times. These 25 vessels, comprising the passenger fleets of the White Star, Red Star, U. S. Lines, Royal Mail, and Atlantic Transport, are supplied not only with the digest of world news, but with a complete daily newspaper, tabloid in size.

In addition to the fresh wireless news, which is prepared nightly by the New York correspondent of THE TRIBUNE, the ship paper contains preprinted reading matter and some of THE TRIBUNE'S features and cartoons, together with representative advertising copy.

Other ships in the north Atlantic lanes subscribe only to THE TRIBUNE'S news service, supplying it to their passengers through their own small newspapers or bulletin sheets.

Altogether, TRIBUNE news keeps the traveler at sea well informed—and the extension to the Virgin islands is an indication of possibilities of further development.

Unusual Rise Is Recorded in Level of Lake Michigan

There has been an unusual rise in the water level of Lake Michigan during the last three months, according to government lake survey reports for that period, received yesterday by Assistant Chief Engineer H. J. Ramey of the sanitary district. The higher levels, Mr. Ramey stated, will permit heavier cargoes in lake shipping, with the consequent gain of several million dollars to the shippers.

How Level Has Risen.

The government engineers report that the average level of Lakes Michigan and Huron this June was 0.19 foot higher than in May, 0.68 foot higher than the June stage a year ago, 0.02 foot above the average stage of June for the last ten years, and 1.71 feet above the low stage of June, 1926. The April rise was 0.59 foot over the previous month and the May rise 0.42 foot over April, making an aggregate rise for the three months of 1.20 feet. Based on past records an appreciable rise is predicted for July.

Mr. Ramey pointed out that the level continued to rise despite Chicago's diversion of 8500 cubic feet of water per second from the lake. "These comparative figures," he said "provide added evidence which tends to prove our contention that Chicago's diversion of lake water through the drainage canal has but a minor effect upon lake levels and that rainfall is the chief factor in its fluctuation."

Boon to Boat Owners.

Owners of vessels carrying iron ore, coal, grain and limestone across the lakes watch the lake level closely and take advantage of the high stages to load their boats to greater draft, Mr. Ramey pointed out. "Government figures show that a reduction of one tenth of a foot in available draft amounts to an average loss of $500,000 per year for the fleet in the upper lakes and approximately $70,000 per year for the smaller vessels engaged in trade through the Welland and St. Lawrence canals."

While only rough estimates can be made, Mr. Ramey predicted a probable increase of several millions if the level continues to rise.

Wife Vanishes; Husband Finds Her Body in Lake

Suffering from nervous breakdown, Mrs. Sarah O'Neill, 6915 Paxton avenue, yesterday eluded her nurse and disappeared from her home. Her husband, Arthur O'Neill, began a search and found her body floating in the lake off East Sixty-seventh street.

DEMOCRATS OF INDIANA AT WORK ON HOME FENCES

Indianapolis, Ind., July 7.—[Special.]—In line with their determination to make badly needed repairs on the home fences first, Indiana Democratic leaders are quietly refraining from any major efforts on the national campaign.

Evidently given their cue by state leaders, the Democratic press throughout Indiana is twanging insistently on the worth of the state ticket, but is covering Al Smith only in a routine way.

The Republican press of the state, faced with the opposite situation of a klan-smirched state ticket but an acceptable national nominee, is harping loudly about Tammany's dominance of the zebra party.

The state campaign will present at least a sharp double edge, for not only is the governorship and state house control at stake, but Arthur Robinson, junior United States senator, also is up for reëlection.

Robinson is an aggressive campaigner; he makes every welkin and many a pulpit, too, ring, with old fashioned silver tongued oratory. But he is opposed by a Democratic nominee who does not belie his name—Albert Stump, who not only speaks at every town pump and has canvassed every township in the state in the last four years, but travels the byroads in a small automobile and swaps stories and glad hands with the citizenry.

Harry Leslie, the Republican nominee for governor, has led a colorful life and as speaker of the Indiana house in 1925 and 1927 showed himself to be an adaptable politician.

Opposing Leslie is Frank C. Dailey, who was Democratic district attorney and did not hesitate to prosecute the Democratic city administrations of Terre Haute and Indianapolis when he found them corrupt just as severely as he prosecuted the Senator Newberry case.

Announcing

THE NEW FRANKLIN
AIRMAN LIMITED

introducing a wholly new vogue of Luxurious Fast Travel

Anticipating this announcement, a Franklin sedan was driven from Los Angeles to New York to Los Angeles—6,692 miles in 6½ days—shattering the former record by 10½ hours—the fastest trip ever made by motor car or Limited train ....

This amazing feat offers the greatest demonstration of fast travel ever presented to American motorists. And the new Airman Limited offers luxury such as you have never known in a motor car.

In introducing LUXURIOUS FAST TRAVEL, Franklin has stolen a march on the entire motor world.

The Airman Limited inaugurates, in its interiors, an elegance, completeness and color harmonies which have been no more than hinted at, by the built-to-order motor cars exhibited in recent American and European Custom Salons.

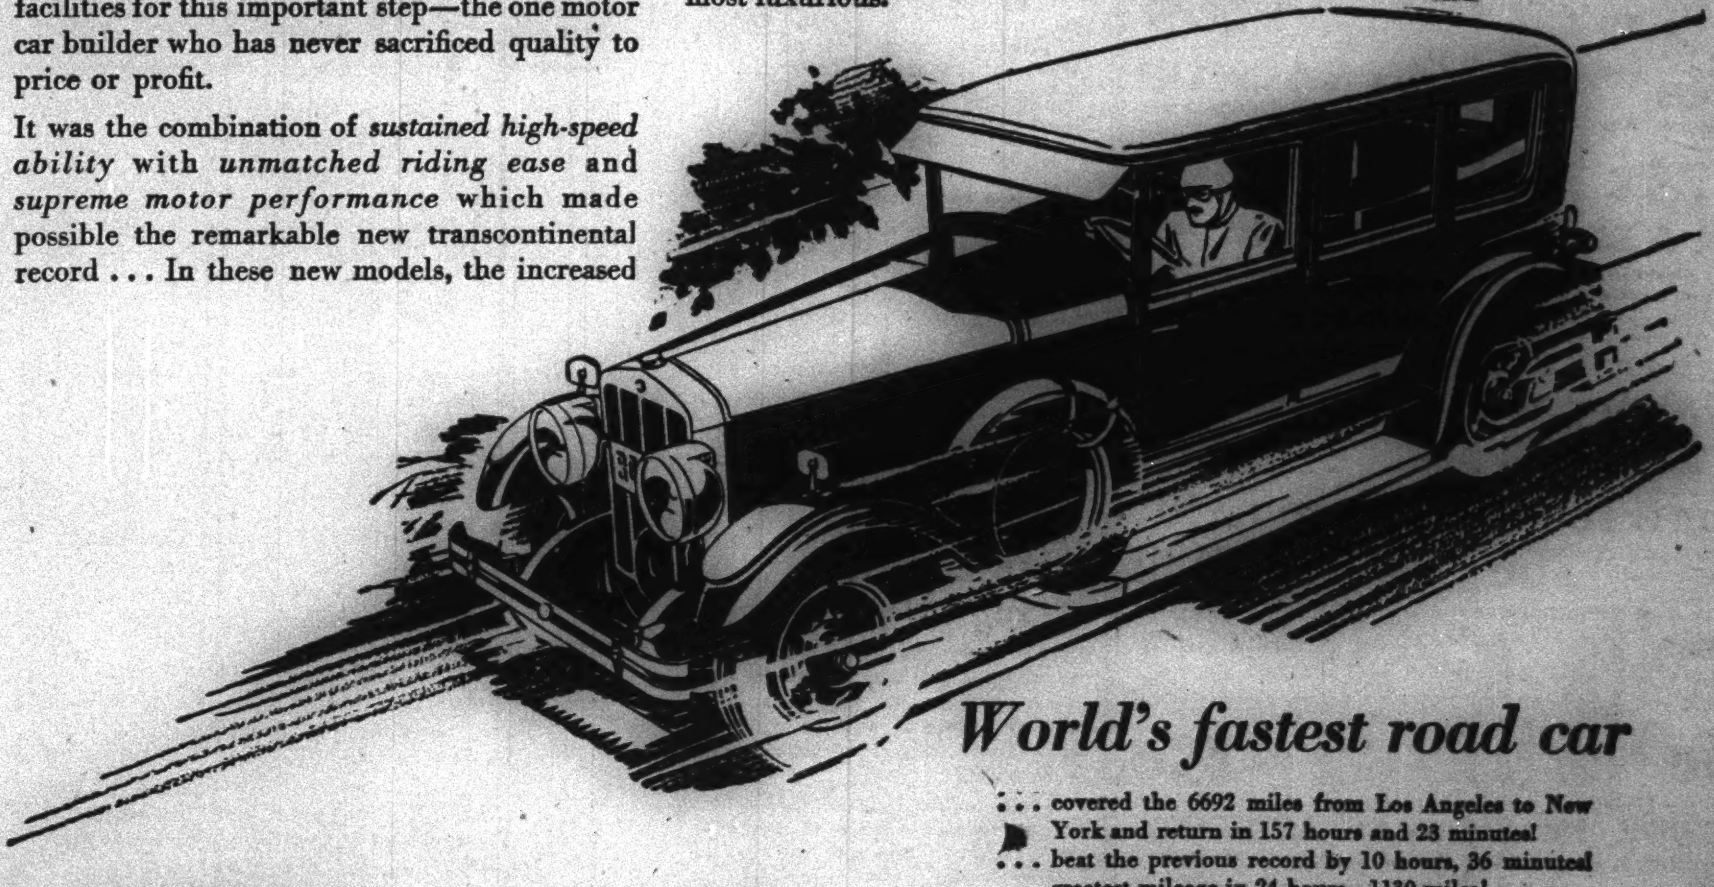
To the foremost championship of the day, in which Cannon Ball Baker established Franklin as the world's fastest road car—to a beauty of body lines already copied by half the motor world—Franklin now adds undisputed leadership in interior style, comfort and convenience.

The Airman Limited must be seen and driven—then you will know the meaning of LUXURIOUS FAST TRAVEL. No single automotive development of recent years holds such significance. We predict that no other manufacturer will be able to duplicate these interiors for three years—if ever. Franklin alone has the facilities for this important step—the one motor car builder who has never sacrificed quality to price or profit.

It was the combination of sustained high-speed ability with unmatched riding ease and supreme motor performance which made possible the remarkable new transcontinental record ... In these new models, the increased motor compression achieves still greater responsiveness. And a new perfection of the famous spring suspension brings riding comfort surpassing all previous standards of this renowned Franklin feature. Throughout the car, quality has been added to quality—performance to performance.

The complete enjoyment of a motor car, as now afforded by the Airman Limited, establishes an entirely new conception of values, which must inevitably benefit every automobile owner.

The fastest road car in the world—and the most luxurious.



Tune in

On July 9th the AIR-COOLED AIRMAN will be on the AIR . . . at 9:00 P. M. Eastern Standard Time—over the NBC Red Network and allied stations . . . at 9:00 P. M. Chicago Time—over WEBH.

World's fastest road car

. . . covered the 6692 miles from Los Angeles to New York and return in 157 hours and 23 minutes!
. . . beat the previous record by 10 hours, 36 minutes!
. . . greatest mileage in 24 hours—1130 miles!
. . . fastest 100 miles—1 hour and 50 minutes!
. . . greatest distance in 1 hour—57 miles!

TELLS FUN LOVING MODERNS TO GET MORE RELIGION

Pastor, at Camp Meeting, Warns of Accounting.

Recreations and pleasures and the inventions of modern life are becoming a substitute for higher mental and spiritual life, the Rev. Robert J. Smith, pastor of the Hyde Park Methodist Episcopal church declared yesterday at the afternoon meeting of the Des Plaines camp meeting.

"The hours required for labor are being reduced because of the flood of labor saving devices," he declared. "New inventions are continually coming along saving a little more time. More and more time is available for recreation and pleasure, but we really have less and less time for the things we ought to do. We are the stewards of our time and it is reasonable that we should be held accountable for the way we use it."

Deplores Modern Letters.

"Writing letters is becoming a lost art. Read any of the letters of John Adams to his wife in revolutionary times and you will find the stamp of personality upon each. These days a man does not put his personality into his letters. He telegraphs. No man can put himself into ten words. In fact, the slogan of today might well be: 'don't write, telegraph.' Everything must be done quickly."

F. F. Farmiloe, who is 82 years old, opened the first daily program of the thirty-ninth annual Des Plaines Methodist encampment yesterday morning and several hundred heard him speak on "The Exultation of Christ." The pastor, despite his age, continues to preach each Sunday in various pastorates in the state although he has been superannuated for several years.

Among those attending the encampment are Christian Ebinger, 94, of 6802 Olcott avenue, Edison Park, and Wm. S. Verity, 96, of 226 Vine street. The former attended the first encampment sixty-nine years ago and has not missed a single meeting since.

"We used to travel to the tent meetings in wagons," Mr. Ebinger said. "Often we were obliged to disband because of heavy rains that flooded the grounds and swept away the bridges.

Thankful for Autos.

"Different now? Well I should say so. We used to think we were making good time with our wagons, and we all managed to get to the meeting. Automobiles have done it, and I'm glad they have come. I'd be driving one myself if my family wasn't so finiky about me."

Mr. Verity, has attended the camp meetings for many years. "I missed several during the civil war, but there's no mising them now," he declared.

Crowds are coming in steadily for the meetings. More than 1,000 persons gathered last night to hear the Rev. F. W. Ingvoldstad, pastor of the Decatur Methodist church. Today Prof. Edmund D. Soper, Duke university, Durham, N. C., will preach at the morning service; Dr. Charles A. Tindley, pastor of Tindley temple, Philadelphia, at the afternoon service, and Bishop Edwin Holt Hughes will preach at the evening services.

Halt Robbery Hearing as He Charges Intimidation

Judge George Curran in the South Clark street court yesterday halted the robbery hearing of Thomas Bangora when the jurist said he noticed attempts by the defendant to intimidate a state witness. The court ordered Bangora held to the grand jury in bonds of $15,000. Bangora was captured June 15 by Sergt. Joseph Connelly and his detective bureau squad when he attempted to rob the Goldenrod Ice Cream company at 2134 Ward street. Bangora's partner, Ralph Weinberg, 831 Cornelia street, was shot and killed by policemen at the time.

CONSIDER SMALL BORE AUTOMATIC FOR DOUGHBOYS

Officials Find Them Light and Swift Rifles.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., July 7.—[Special.]—Scrapping of the present regulation .30 caliber Springfield rifle in favor of a smaller bore semi-automatic weapon is now receiving serious consideration by the army high command. Increased fire power and lighter weight ammunition are two of the objects sought in this latest move toward modernization of the American army.

At the direction of Maj. Gen. Charles P. Summerall, army chief of staff, a special board of officers has been named to meet July 20, to investigate the possibilities of the semi-automatic rifle as a standard item of equipment for each doughboy and cavalryman. The board also has been ordered "to recommend a specific caliber."

Seek Light Weapons.

Special attention will be directed to the Pederson .276 caliber semi-automatic weapon which has been tested exhaustively by a special infantry and cavalry board. Study also will be given to the .30 caliber semi-automatic shoulder rifles.

Many army officers believe adoption of a light semi-automatic rifle in place of the Springfield would greatly increase the fire power and effectiveness as a battle unit of the infantry regiment. The semi-automatic weapon can be aimed and fired more than twice as fast as the heavier Springfield. In addition it does not tire the operator nearly as much as the service weapon. If the tests determine that the faster shooting rifle has sufficient striking power and that the doughboy can shoot as straight, recommendation will be made in favor of a smaller bore semi-automatic gun.

Rifle Automatically Reloads.

The Pederson weapon is a shoulder rifle loaded by a clip containing ten rounds. The trigger must be pulled for each shot, but the rifle automatically reloads itself. The Pederson weighs about 8½ pounds, a fraction less than the Springfield. Experts believe rifles of this type can be built to weigh several ounces less without losing accuracy. The kick of the new weapon is about one-half that of the service rifle.

"Tests already made have demonstrated that with a rifle of the Pederson type a rate of aimed fire twice that possible with the Springfield can easily be maintained without fatigue to the firer," Col. Aubrey Lippincott of the Thirteenth cavalry states.

FLAT BUILDING TENANTS PROTEST AGAINST PICKETS

Tenants of a 55 apartment building at Sunnyside and Central Park avenues, including William H. Quick, yesterday complained that the janitors' union is picketing the building and that no garbage or refuse had been allowed to go out of the building for a week and no milk, ice or laundry allowed to come in.

They complained that all the trouble is over the fact the building is in the hands of a receiver and that the janitor had not been paid any salary for two months prior to a week ago when the pickets were put on. Mr. Quick said no lights were allowed to be lighted in the hallways of the building and that most of the tenants do not know to whom they are to pay their rent pending the action on the receivership in Judge Carpenter's federal court.

A check for $5,000 from Samuel Insull, presented to Miss Julia D president of the Illinois club, at a dinner in the Auditorium hotel Friday night by County Clerk Robert M. Sweitzer, brought the total of the organization's drive for $300,000 up to the $100,000 mark. Three hundred members of the club attended the dinner.

Homer J. Buckley was toastmaster at the dinner, at which the project of a thirty-one story hotel for business girls and women, to be erected at Ontario and Rush street as soon as the drive is completed, was lauded by several speakers. Talks were made by the Rev. John Thompson, pastor of the First Methodist church, the Very Rev. Thomas Levan, president of De Paul university, James Breen, assistant corporation counsel, Mrs. George V. McIntyre, president of the Big Sisters and Rabbi T. Schanfarber.

162 STATIONS ON AIR BATTLE FOR LIFE TOMORROW

Radio Board Will Hear Plan to Keep Permits.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., July 7.—[Special.] — Litigation which will determine the validity of the "equitable distribution of broadcasting licenses and station power" policy adopted during the last session of congress is certain to follow the hearings scheduled by the federal radio commission for Monday morning.

Representatives of 162 broadcasting stations throughout the country have been notified that they must appear before the commission Monday and show a "public necessity" for the continuance of their stations or lose their licenses.

Affects Scores of Stations.

Scores of the affected stations, including a dozen or more in the Chicago district and downstate Illinois, already have indicated they will carry their fight for existence to the courts if the radio commission in its drastic move to comply with the direction of congress to reallocate licenses, wave lengths, operating periods and power within the zones according to population, refuses to renew their permits.

Anticipating the certainty of attacks upon the constitutionality of the "equitable distribution" amendment, the commission has drafted the services of a number of special counsel, headed by Attorney Louis G. Caldwell of Chicago, and staff of expert radio technicians, to assist in the hearings and represent the commission in whatever litigation may follow.

The Monday hearing of the commission probably will be limited to a call of the "calender" during which the spokesmen for the 162 stations will be given an opportunity to announce whether they are willing to surrender their licenses without a fight or are determined to contest the right of the commission to force them off the air. A docket of the latter cases is to be prepared and immediate hearings will be scheduled.

Have Right of Appeal.

Under the radio act of 1927, broadcasters whose licenses are revoked or who are refused a renewal have the right to appeal from the commission's rulings to the court of appeals of the District of Columbia or to the federal district court of the jurisdiction in which the broadcasting station is located.

Ninety-one—more than half of the 162 stations ordered by the commission to appear Monday "with an affirmative showing that public interest, convenience, or necessity will be served by the granting of your application"—are located in the fourth radio zone, which includes Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Kansas, Minnesota, Missouri, Nebraska, North Dakota, South Dakota, and Wisconsin.

Twenty-two of the 91 in the fourth zone are Chicago district stations as follows: WLIB, WBCN, KFKX, WEDC, WSBC, WHFC, WBKI, WFKB, WLTS, WQJ, WSAX, WCRW all in Chicago; WMBB, WOK in Homewood; WNBA, Forest Park; WEHS, Evanston; WPEP, Waukegan; WTAS, Elgin; WJBA, WKBB, and WCLS, in Joliet, WJBZ, Chicago Heights, and WWAE, Hammond, Ind.

NO. DAKOTA RADICALS LOSE THEIR CONTROL OF STATE INDUSTRIES

Bismarck, N. D., July 7.—[Special.] —The Nonpartisan league has a small advantage in the divided verdict returned by North Dakota at the primary election June 27. The league Republicans nominated Lynn J. Frazier for the United States senate over ex-Gov. R. A. Nestos. They will control the state senate and they named the candidates for state treasurer, secretary of state, insurance commissioner, railroad commissioner, and congressman in the Third district, J. H. Sinclair.

Independent Republicans, opposed to the Nonpartisan league through 12 years of bitter political warfare over the state's industrial program, nominated their candidate for governor, attorney general, and member of the industrial commission. They also renominated Congressman Hall in the Second district and Congressman Burtness in the First. Through control of the industrial commission they will assume, with ratification in November, full control of the state mill and elevator and the state bank of North Dakota.

Nonpartisan league control of the senate, however, will prevent them from passing legislation making radical changes in the state's industries.

PLUCKY NURSE SAVES BANKER IN DEATH LEAP

Clings to His Ankle Till Help Arrives.

New York, July 7.—[Special.]—A diminutive twenty-six year old nurse today saved the life of Horace Poor, president of the Garfield National bank, when, according to the police, he attempted to jump from a fourth story window of a sanitarium in the Fifties.

The nurse, Dorothy Randolph, seized Mr. Poor by one of his ankles as he leaped from the window. She held him, dangling head down over the pavement, for nearly fifteen minutes while persons on the street piled up blankets and cushions.

Injuries Are Slight.

He was hurried to Polyclynic hospital in a taxicab and Dr. Huber Howe, his physician, announced after an examination that the banker had suffered only abrasions of the arm and leg in the fifty foot fall. Miss Randolph accompained her patient to the Polyclinic and insisted on remaining with him.

Mr. Poor, according to sanitarium officials, came there three weeks ago to recuperate from an operation for appendicitis. They said he was in "good condition" and had given no indications of despondency.

Early today a group of taxi drivers at the stand in front of the Gotham hotel, Fifth avenue and Fifty-first street, heard a woman scream.

Hasten to Rescue.

They ran next door to the sanitarium and saw Miss Randolph clinging desperately to Poor's leg, while he, hanging head down, wriggled and struggled.

Some one ran into the Gotham and returned with a thick mattress and a heavy blanket. By this time Miss Randolph was visibly weakening. Just as the men on the street got the blanket stretched above the pile of cushions, she released her hold.

PHONE ANNOYER FINED $200.

William Mann, colored, 4732 Langley avenue, was fined $200 yesterday by Judge George A. Curran in the South Clark street court for annoying Mrs. Isabelle Beardaman, 901 Argyle street, over the telephone. Mann was trapped and arrested by Sergt. Michael Naughton.

PRESIDENT ELECT OF MEXICO MADE FORTUNE ON SOIL

Is Expert Farmer; Owns Thousands of Aeres.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

San José, Cal., July 7.—A farmer president will soon take the dictatorial power in Mexico. The recent elections again placed the scepter of Mexican power in the hands of Gen. Alvaro Obregon, president of the Chick Pea Coöperative association. Gen. Obregon was born in the state of Sonora, near the Gulf of California, about 350 miles south of the Arizona line, forty-eight years ago. He is the son of Spanish ancestors, with a trace of Indian blood in his veins. He is the youngest of eighteen children and lost both his parents as a small child. His forebears were pioneers in that section.

His schooling would not exceed the eighth grade in the United States. Three of his sisters were his first teachers in the village school of Huatabampo, but the one who most deeply influenced him was his oldest brother, José, the principal of the village school. It was the dying request of his mother that these kin folks take Alvaro into their home. The combined salary of the four teachers was $50 per month. All lived the simple life, but all were highly respected and had unusual innate ability.

Made Own Shoes.

Alvaro, as a boy, wore sandals instead of shoes—the first hat he owned he made out of rice straw at the age of fourteen. But among these teachers he gained a thorough training in conduct and they drilled into him a love for justice.

Farming then was carried on in a most primitive manner. As a boy, he plowed with a yoke of oxen and a stick.

Having a keen, alert, and practical mind with a mechanical turn, he early started to use more modern farm implements. Farming was his vocation then, and is today.

When he retired from office, four years ago, he returned to his hacienda and home of his youth at Navojoa. Today he owns a large acreage and during the last three years has purchased 6,000 acres of raw land at Cajeme, thirty miles north of Navojoa. Since then he has cleared the land, put in an irrigation system. Today this vast tract is in a high state of cultivation, raising rice, wheat, corn, beans, and other vegetables and fruits.

Is Expert Farmer.

Of particular interest is his large experimental nursery, on which are growing figs and dates brought from Arabia, oranges from Italy, roses from old Spain, bananas from Central America, and henequen, a sisal plant for rope and artificial silk, originating in India.

He seems to get great satisfaction in making two plants grow where one grew before, and still more in developing raw land that was idle throughout the ages. The farm buildings are new and up to date.

Fortune From Chick Pea.

In a land fertile as the west coast of Mexico, it is easy to grow and produce. The important problem is to sell what is produced to a profitable market. To gain this end Gen. Obregon at 30 years of age found the garbanzo [a large chick pea] a profitable crop; he developed the first coöperative association. This selling agency has been a very large factor in the prosperity of the west coast growers of garbanzo in Sonora and Sinaloa. The product is the basis of his fortune.

In order to avoid the dumping on the market, this association, under his leadership, built its own large warehouses to store garbanzo, and to release the crop without depressing the market value.

In many sections of Mexico farming is carried on in the most primitive methods. "This is too slow," he said. "Primitive methods mean small incomes. Primitive methods mean inefficiency." Here is the key to his enthusiasm for industrial education of his people.

DOUBLE EAGLE
the first super-tire!

THE TIREMASTER

P. W. Litchfield, President of The Goodyear Tire & Rubber Company, Inc.; President, Chairman, or Advisory Board Member of twenty-four affiliated or subsidiary corporations. Under Mr. Litchfield's direct charge, Goodyear has made more than 115,000,000 tires, and now crowns that unequaled record with the Goodyear Double Eagle Tire

THE MASTER TIRE

Important Features of the "Goodyear Double Eagle" —the Tire of Tires

2 The deep-cut, tractive All-Weather Tread is practically double-thick.
3 The toughest and longest-wearing rubber compound in this tread Goodyear has yet developed.
4 The body of the tire built extra-heavy of SUPERTWIST cord fabric, to a new oversize dimension both in cross-section and overall diameter.
5 More plies of cord fabric; more rubber between the plies.
6 Heavy friction coating of rubber to protect the cords from moisture.
7 Special low temperature cure.
8 The finest materials, the finest construction, regardless of cost.

There have been oversize tires and extra-ply tires and heavy duty tires.

But never before has there been a tire like the new Goodyear Double Eagle.

It is something distinct, something vastly more than have been the previous attempts to make an especially good tire.

It is the perfect working out of an expertly planned endeavor to make the finest tire the world has so far seen.

The Double Eagle is built to honor the thirtieth anniversary of the founding of Goodyear in 1898.

In its development, costs were absolutely not considered.

Wherever extraordinarily lavish use of labor or material could better the result, such extra use was made.

The tire as it stands today is almost wastefully good, and naturally is considerably higher priced.

Every tested principle of strength and stamina that Goodyear experience has confirmed is embodied in the Double Eagle.

Every new direction of advance that young invention could contribute is incorporated in it also.

IDENTIFICATION:

On the sidewall of this tire you will find in silver silhouette the Double Eagle world mark of superfine quality and value, symbol of that Goodyear union of seasoned experience and youthful progress which has produced the tire of tires

In design, substance and structure it is the super-tire—for those favored folk to whom price is secondary to service.

We expect it to have a limited production, because it frankly is a much better tire than the usual motorist needs.

Whether or not you will want to buy the Double Eagle, examine it at your Goodyear Dealer's.

It's an amazing step ahead in excellence—a tire that under anything like normal conditions will last as long as you keep your car.

The Double Eagle being a special tire, made and sold only under its own name, Goodyear has built especially for it an equally superior inner tube—and calls this distinguished buff-colored tube, also the Double Eagle

CUBS LOSE TO ROBINS, 5-3; THEN WIN, 6-2

TORO WINS LINCOLN HANDICAP; SUN BEAU SECOND

FLAT IRON THIRD; KIEV, SANDE UP, EARLY LEADER

18,000 Watch $25,000 Stake Race.

BY FRENCH LANE.

A familiar shout went out at Lincoln Fields yesterday when 15 American stake stars rounded into the home stretch and started the drive to the finish line in the $25,000 Lincoln handicap.

EDDIE AMBROSE.

"Here comes Toro!"

The cry went up from 18,000 voices, parched voices mostly because a burning sun had beat down on those 18,000 cheering race goers all afternoon.

And there was no mistake that Toro was coming. He came in long drawn strides. The winner of the American Derby and Latonia Derby was staging the most spectacular run of his sensational career. He was racing up on even terms and passing the older stake stars one after another. He was doing it after he had given away weight to all of them. He continued to do it until he was showing his heels to the entire field.

Wins by Half a Length.

Toro rushed on to the finish line and won the Lincoln handicap by half a length from Sun Beau, one of the other two 3 year olds in the field. Flat Iron was third, beaten four lengths by the two leaders. Toro was favorite, paying $6.04. He ran the mile and a quarter in 2:05 3-5 over a track which was fast for the first time since the season opened.

The race was the most remarkable run by a 3 year old in years. Reigh Count will have to come back to the races soon and beat this sturdy son of The Porter, which races in the silks of Edward B. McLean, the Washington publisher, or Toro will go into retirement this year not only the three year old champion but the handicap champion of America.

Toro got away fast. Jockey Eddie Ambrose took him wide on all turns and rated him off the pace until he had straightened out at the head of the stretch for the run home.

For the first time, Ambrose called on the big bay. Toro responded in an instant. He began his march down the stretch. He outran every other horse in the race and was going away as the finish line was reached.

Sande's Horse Takes Lead.

The sweltering 18,000 broke into cheers right at the beginning as they watched Earl Sande start slightly in front in the unwieldy field and rush the gray streak Kiev, which was racing in Joseph E. Widener's silks, into the lead. They watched Sande by his hard riding round the first bend a length in front of the others, more than half of which were closely bunched.

Then came more cheers and yells for Sande as he hurried the gray 4 year old along in front down the back stretch. There were other cheers for Chicago, which was running second and for the first time this season was showing all his old time speed. And there were cheers for Flat Iron when he worked his way into third place after meeting up with all kinds of interference.

Flat Iron also ran a striking race, for Jockey Fronk had him next to the rail and in close quarters all the way. When he tried to make his move in the stretch he was cut off completely. A less game horse would have dropped entirely out of it.

At the last turn Chicago moved up with one of his old time rushes. He shook off Flat Iron. He took after Kiev and whipped the easterner. Turning into the stretch, he had taken the lead and it looked like he was on his way to victory.

Toro Steps Out.

Then arose that now familiar shout "Here comes Toro!" He was far on the outside. Ambrose was calling on him and Jockey Craigmyle who had ridden Sun Beau up into contention, was riding the Kilmer 3 year old like his life depended on the outcome. The pair of three year olds took after the leaders and for a sixteenth of a mile ran them ragged.

Less than a sixteenth out Toro had taken the lead which Sun Beau had held just for a second. Toro went on and so did Sun Beau and in this order they arrived at the finish line. Kiev dropped out of it when Chicago whipped him, so did Chicago drop back after his one great burst of speed. Mike Hall was far back all the way and Rolled Stocking was never a contender.

In the mutuel betting Toro paid [illegible] to win, $4.56 to place, and $3.70 to show. Sun Beau to place was [illegible], and to show, $7.26. For the show Flat Iron paid $4.02.

Toro came back limping slightly to greet the judges and to hear the cheers of the crowd. He seemed to [illegible] in his left foreleg, but Trainer [illegible] said it was nothing to worry

WHEN HALF A LENGTH MEANS $25,000

Toro rushes to half length victory in the rich Lincoln Handicap. He led Willis Sharpe Kilmer's 3 year old, Sun Beau, to the finish line by that distance. Flat Iron, next to the rail, is third. Chicago, after gaining the lead in the stretch, dropped back to fourth place, and Handy Mandy is fifth. Eighteen thousand cheered as the American Derby and Latonia Derby winner repeated his success in the all aged stake. Eddie Ambrose rated him back of the pace until the final sixteenth, when he called on E. B. McLean's colt for the winning spurt.

"They're off!" was the roar which arose when Starter Harry Morrissey released the barrier. Jockey Earl Sande has rushed Kiev into the lead. He is closely followed by Chicago, ridden by F. Chiavetta. Flat Iron is third, and Mike Hall fourth. Toro, the winner, broke on the extreme outside, in ninth position. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

Helen Retains World's Net Title, 6-2, 6-3

BY WILLIAM SHIRER.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

WIMBLEDON, England, July 7.—Out of what appeared to be undue consideration for Señorita Elia de Alvarez's eleventh hour illness, which was ballyhooed to great lengths in the London press, Helen Wills declined to force matters today, but coasted along to an easy 6-2, 6-3 victory to retain her Wimbledon championship, won last year.

Miss Wills now is ruler of the tennis world such as no other woman ever has been before. In addition to being the only player ever to hold the American, British and French championships simultaneously, she will—after she wins at Forest Hills next month—set a precedent which probably will stand a long time, that of winning all three championships in the same summer.

Cochet and Brugnon Win.

The Wimbledon doubles champions crowned this afternoon in the finals were Henri Cochet and Jacques Brugnon of France, who defeated Gerald Patterson and J. B. Hawkes of Australia by 13-11, 6-4, 6-4, thus regaining the championship they won in 1926 and lost to Bill Tilden and Francis T. Hunter last year; Miss Elizabeth Ryan and P. D. B. Spence of South Africa, who conquered Daphne Akhurst and Jack Crawford, Australian players, by 7-5, 6-4; and Mrs. Watson and Peggy Saunders, who beat Eileen Bennett and Miss Harvey in the all-English finals, 6-2, 6-3.

How far Miss Wills is ahead of even her nearest rival was shown today when she beat Señorita de Alvarez without uncorking her real speed until the final game of the match. Then, with the championship tucked away and her opponent beaten too disgracefully even for a sick player, Miss Wills edified the crowd which included the king and queen, with four cannonball services and some short-lived driving, the speed of which no other woman ever has approached.

Helen Coasts to Victory.

She took the game at love, as she might have taken a good many others earlier had it not been for her reticence in forcing a killing victory.

Indeed, throughout the first set and until the middle of the second one, when she allowed the Spanish beauty to jump to a 3-0 lead, Helen seemed content to return the soft ball to the center of the baseline and wait for the señorita to drive out or net.

The señorita was obliging in this respect, as a glance at the stroke analysis shows. Señorita de Alvarez made 53 errors to Miss Wills' 29. It was rather unusual for the American that she scored only seven placements, so soft was her game, while her dashing opponent sunk thirteen shots for placements.

For the señorita it is fair to report she is probably Miss Wills' closest rival, and her game today was considerably improved over that of the previous two Wimbledon finals.

Cochet and Brugnon, who undoubtedly will be France's double combination against the United States in the Davis cup match starting July 28, looked like world beaters today against Patterson and Hawkes.

Last Week's Answers

Quotation—The marines have landed and have the situation well in hand.

(A search through navy department records shows that this well known saying was the message sent by a naval officer, name unrecorded, when the marines landed in China during the Boxer uprising of 1900. Since none of the answers received by the Who Said It editor agreed with this finding, it has been determined not to award a prize. The variety of the answers, however, is interesting. Some of them follow.)

Answer—The statement is now used to express the reputation the Devil Dogs have acquired for quelling disorders with dispatch. In 1915 the republic of Haiti was in turmoil due to civil war. The lives and property of foreigners were in danger and the United States dispatched forces to Port au Prince. The situation was quickly quieted, thus giving cause for the report mentioned above.—James C. O'Connor Jr., 1036 Loyola avenue, Chicago.

Answer—Admiral Mayo said it in his report of the taking of Vera Cruz during the early morning of April 22, 1914.—Carl B. Werthwein, Hampshire, Ill.

Answer—That was the report of the marines to Washington after they landed in Vera Cruz in 1914.—Lew Sachs, 3503 Holmes avenue, Baltimore, Md.

Answer—Admiral William T. Sampson thus reported the arrival of 600 marines at Santiago on June 10, 1898.—Adele W. Sabath, 3415 West Adams street, Chicago.

Answer—Capt. Robley D. [Fighting Bob] Evans said this in a cablegram to President Cleveland during his last term of office upon Evans' landing in Venezuela with marines.—Raleigh Wall, 4933 North Oakley avenue, Chicago.

Quotation—There is a time to pray and a time to fight, but now is the time to fight.

Answer—John Peter Gabriel Muhlenberg was the son of a minister and himself a minister at Woodstock, Va. At the beginning of the revolutionary war he was asked by Washington to accept a colonel's commission, and when it was received he preached his farewell sermon, saying: "There is a time for all things—a time to preach and a time to fight, and now is the time to fight." With the pronouncing of the benediction he threw back his preacher's gown, disclosing a Continental uniform. He then proceeded to the door of the church and ordered the drums to beat for recruits, enlisting about 300. He later became a major general.—Miss Carmen Podewell, 526 5th avenue, Janesville, Wis.

Quotation—Where was you when the cyclone struck us?

Answer—This quotation came from a story which went the rounds some thirty years ago. A man was trying to break a parrot of swearing. He said: "Fine day, Polly." Polly's answer was: "Damn fine day." The man then grabbed the cage and swung it around his head four or five times. Setting the cage down, he again remarked: "Fine day, Polly." Polly's answer was: "Fine day, but where in —— was you when the cyclone struck us?"—P. G. Whidden, 539 Aldine avenue, Chicago.

Coast Crew Beats Yale in Olympic Test

Philadelphia, Pa., July 7.—[Special.]—Nine young men from California sat in a slim slip of cedar on the Schuylkill river here late this afternoon with their rights hands held high above their heads while a brass band on the bank ground out strains of the "Star Spangled Banner." Then they turned their craft around and paddled out of sight around the bend in the river, headed for Amsterdam and the Olympics.

By the margin of one and one-fifth seconds, California, conquerors of the Hudson, defeated Yale in the Olympic trial rowing final and won the right to represent this country abroad.

Taking the lead in the last of the day's list of races a mile from the finish, the tremendous California shell fought off everything that Yale had to offer and came home in front by the margin of about a quarter of a length. The times were 5:46 and 5:47 1-5.

California was not the only college crew to win a place on the Olympic team. In the first race of the day, four Harvard oarsmen, recently recruited from eights, took the event for fours with coxswains by the margin of a couple of feet from the Bachelors' Barge club. Then the Penn Barge club won the pairs without coxswains and the stage was set for the first of the day's two major events, the singles.

Here Walter Hoover, trying for the one great rowing honor he never has won, fell just short in a great last

Then in rapid succession with only a brief delay here and there and with the events almost on time, surprising for a regatta, the Penn A. C. won the pair oared with coxswain; the Penn Barge won the four oar without coxswain, and the veteran Paul Costello, with Charles McIlvaine rowing bow, stroked the Penn A. C. double to a sensational victory over Walter Hoover and Charles Coulston. Then the eights finished off the proceedings.

Olympic Chiefs Announce Makeup of U.S. Team Today

Hahn, Hamm Break World Marks In Olympic Trials

BY WALTER ECKERSALL.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Boston, Mass., July 7.—Smashing of world's, Olympic, and American records, not to mention championship marks which have stood for years, featured the final Olympic tryouts and National A. A. U. outdoor track and field championships held this afternoon in the Harvard stadium.

Never before in the history of this branch of sport have so many records fallen in one day, and the performances indicate likelihood of another American victory in the track and field competition of the Olympic games, which opens on July 29 and continues through Aug. 5 at Amsterdam, Holland.

The 15,000 athletically inclined persons who filed through the gates of the Crimson stadium saw two world's records broken and one tied. They saw another Olympic and two American marks go by the boards, as well as three records for National A. A. U. championships, pass into the discard.

Hamm First to Set Record.

Team honors of the meet went to the Los Angeles A. C., which scored 42 points, New York A. C. was second with 33 points and Illinois A. C., third with 23 markers.

The record smashing started shortly after the meet opened. Edward B. Hamm of Georgia Tech., one of the greatest all around performers developed in the south in years, shattered the world's record in the running broad jump. On his second effort, Hamm leaped 25 feet 11⅛ inches. This performance broke the former world's mark of 25 feet 10⅞ inches made by De Hart Hubbard of the University of Michigan, in Chicago, in 1925.

Lloyd Hahn, of the Boston A. A., America's hope in the 800 meter run, not only won his event but smashed the world's record as well. Lloyd, who has been running close to record time in most all of his races, stepped the 800 meters today in 1:51 2-5, one-fifth of a second faster than the world's record.

Borah Breaks Record.

Stephen Anderson, of the University of Washington, won the final of the 110 meter high hurdles in :14 4-5. This performance ties the world's and Olympic record made by Earl Thomson, the former Dartmouth hurdler, who made the mark in 1920.

Charles Borah, the University of Southern California sprinter, who competed under the colors of the Los Angeles A. C., not only won the 200 meter dash, but he broke the Olympic record in both his trial and final heats. The Trojan took his trial in :21 1-5 and the final in the same time.

Ray Conger, of the Illinois A. C., won the 1,500 meter run by a great sprint in the home stretch. He fairly crashed through a tiring field to break the tape a winner in the fast time of 3:55. This performance bettered the American record of 3:55 4-5.

Ray Wins 10,000 Meters.

In order to keep in trim for the marathon Joie Ray of the I. A. C. breezed through the 10,000 meters run—about 6¼ miles—in 31:28 2-5. This time beat the former American record of 31:43 3-5 made by W. J. Kramer, at Cambridge, Mass., in 1912.

Brix's mark in the shotput shattered the National A. A. U. championship record of 50:26 feet made by Ralph Rose of the University of Michigan in 1909. Cliff B. Hines of Georgetown university hurled the javelin 202 feet 1¾ inches to better the championship mark of 199 feet 7 inches made by John Kuck of the Los Angeles A. C. in 1926.

Frank Cubel, University of Iowa captain, who qualified for the Olympic team by taking second place in the 400 meter hurdles at Philadelphia, won the 220 yard low hurdles in :23 2-5. This mark bettered the National A. A. U. record of :24 made by F. Murray of San Francisco in 1916 and tied by Kenneth Grumbles of the Hollywood A. C., in 1926.

New Record Holders

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BOSTON, MASS., July 7.—Eight records, two of them world marks, were smashed in the final Olympic trials and National A. A. U. outdoor track and field championships at Harvard stadium today. The new champions and new record follow:

Name	Event.	New Record
Edward B. Hamm,	Running broad jump	*25 feet 11 1-8 inches
Lloyd Hahn,	800 meters	*1:51 2-5
Charles Borah,	200 meters	:21 1-5
Ray Conger,	1,500 meters	3:55
Joie Ray,	10,000 meters	31:28 2-5
Frank Cubel,	220 yard low hurdles	*:23 2-5
Cliff Hines,	Javelin throw	*202 feet 1¾ inches
Brix,	Shot put	*50 feet 11¾ inches

*World's record.
Olympic record.
American record.
*National A. A. U. record.

William Spencer of the C. A. A. showed the way to the tape in the final of the 3,000 meter steeplechase. The Cherry Circle athlete laid back of the field for half of the distance, then moved on to win easily.

Abbott Third in 5,000 Meter.

Charles McGinnis, the former Wisconsin athlete who competed under C. A. A. colors, was a double place winner. McGinnis tied with King of Stanford for first place in the running high jump at 6 feet 5 inches. In the jump off, the Stanford athlete won and McGinnis had to be satisfied with second place. The Cherry Circle athlete tied for fourth place in the pole vault, and in the jump off won the position. In this event Barnes of the Los Angeles A. C., Carr of Yale, and Droegemueller of Northwestern tied for first at 13 feet 9 inches. In the jump off, Barnes won first place, Droegemueller second, and Carr third.

Anson of Ohio State finished fifth in the running broad jump and secured the same position in the running hop, step, and jump. Brix of the University of Washington took the shot put with an effort of 50 feet 11¾ inches, one-quarter of an inch short of the accepted world's record.

Dave Abbott of the University of Illinois ran a splendid race to secure third place in the 5,000 meter run. The Orange and Blue athlete led until the back stretch of the last lap, when Leo Lermond of the Boston A. A. passed him. Just before the Illinois runner reached the tape Smith of Boston A. A. came with a rush and won second place by six inches.

Athletes who have made the team will depart for New York tonight. Those who failed are leaving for their homes.

The American Olympic team will sail for Holland on Wednesday.

WILSON DROPS NO. 22 AMONG BLEACHER FANS

Brooklyn Jars Blake in First Game.

BY IRVING VAUGHAN.

Due to a belated outbreak on the part of the Brooklyn Robins, the Cubs were forced to count the first portion of a double header as a total loss yesterday, but they got revenge. The late splurge by the visitors created a 5 to 3 victory for them, but in the nightcap the McCarthy troops breezed through the torrid temperature with no apparent effort and accumulated a 6 to 2 triumph that served to cut down by half a game the distance separating them from the top place Cardinals.

PAT MALONE.

In the initial combat Hack Wilson put the Cubs on the road to prosperity by notching a homer against Doug McWeeny with a mate on base in round four, but the slim lead didn't last. It melted away with amazing speed in the seventh because Fred Sheriff Blake lost the hop on his speed ball and Rescuer Charley Root couldn't induce Del Bissonette to sit down without hitting a homer. Four runs came out of this rumpus, and, although the Cubs made a bid to come back in the home seventh, they accomplished only the calling into service of Dazzy Vance, who created the customary havoc.

Nehf Outpitches Elliott.

The nightcap affair, which was just a matter of some timely hits and every day fielding, started as a left handed argument between "Jumbo" Elliott and Art Nehf. Both encountered misfortune but in a different form. "Jumbo's" troubles were caused by the Cub bats which slapped across a pair of runs in the first inning, three more in the fifth and one in the eighth. Nehf was not roughed up to any extent, but he found the tropical temperature a matter of great annoyance so after seven innings was excused to let Pat Malone finish for him. It also was the heat that induced McWeeny to request a recall after six rounds in the initial battle.

The homer which Wilson made gave the Cubs a lead in the fourth inning of the first game. Prior to this the 30,000 coatless spectators hadn't much to shout about. Maguire pried open the session with a single over short and Cuyler performed the customary sacrifice. Hack then took a toe hold and swung. The ball sailed into center a bit to the right and plunked down among the right field sun gods for his twenty-second homer of the campaign.

Hendrick Out at the Plate.

The Robins returned Wilson's compliment by scoring once in the fifth on a couple of hits and a pass. The ticket went to Carey at the start of the inning and Hendrick beat out a perfect bunt along the third base line. Herman singled to left and Carey scored.

The seventh that turned out so disastrously for the Cubs' ambitions opened with McWeeny singling to center. He took an extra base when Wilson made an uncalled-for throw to first base. Carey singled to right, but McWeeny was a bit weary from the heat and halted at third. Hendrick hit to right, scoring McWeeny and putting Carey on third. Blake quit at this point and the luckless Root came in. Herman slapped a long fly to Stephenson and Carey counted after the catch. After Bressler had flied out Bissonette aimed a homer into the right field seats, driving Hendrick across ahead of him. It was Bissonette's seventeenth circuit smack.

Vance Stops theCubs.

The Cubs stirred up such a tempest in the home half of the seventh that it was necessary to employ three Brooklyn twirlers, but only one run came out of the threat. Ehrhardt started to pitch and walked Beck. Heathcote was ordered up to bat for

ROBINS RALLY TO UPSET CUBS, 5-3; THEN LOSE, 6 TO 2

Root so the Robins switched to Clark, a southpaw. McCarthy countered by recalling Heathcote and letting McMillan bat. The latter singled and put Beck on third. English singled to score Beck.

This brought Vance into action and Maguire tried to sacrifice but bunted on the line to Hendrick and McMillan was doubled off second. Then Cuyler singled but Wilson only bounced to Flowers and the round closed. Vance permitted no liberties after this.

McCarthy's men lost no time getting results in the second battle. They stepped on the large Elliott for two runs in the opening inning. This started with a single by English. Maguire flied out but Cuyler exercised patience and drew a free ticket. Wilson fanned but Stephenson was awarded a pass that loaded the bases. Then Capt. Grimm dribbled a single out over second base, sending both English and Cuyler to the plate.

The Robins put together a pair of doubles in the second inning and managed to get one run for their efforts. Bressler opened with a drive that went into left for two sacks and Bissonette's out moved him to third. He tallied on Flowers' sacrifice fly. Then Bancroft doubled but Henline grounded to English to end the round. The Robins scored another in the sixth on hits by Statz and Bressler, but by that time the Cubs were well fixed by virtue of three picked up in the course of some timely hitting in the fifth.

Wilson Sends Two Runs Home.

In this inning Nehf picked up a single because Elliott neglected to cover the base on a grounder to Bissonette. English forced Nehf, but Maguire caromed a hard single off Riconda's shin. Flowers helped matters along by fumbling Cuyler's bounder. This filled the sacks and Wilson promptly inserted a single in left, English and Maguire scoring and Cuyler racing to third. Stephenson grounded to Bissonette, who touched the bag and then whipped the ball to the plate but not in time to slice down Cuyler, who was carrying the third run of the inning.

With Nehf going along nicely until the seventh and with Malone doing an excellent job at relieving in the last two innings there wasn't any necessity for the Cubs exerting themselves on attack, but they could hardly avoid scoring once in the eighth. Gonzales doubled against the right field fence with two out and Beck grounded to Riconda, but the third sacker permitted the ball to go through his paws so Gonzales ambled home.

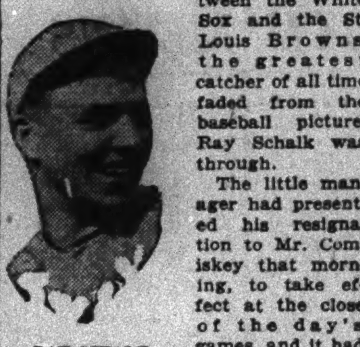
SCHALK LEAVES BEST RECORD OF ALL CATCHERS

His 17 Years of Service Proves Superiority.



RAY SCHALK.

As Bud Clancy made the final out in the second game of the July 4 double header between the White Sox and the St. Louis Browns, the greatest catcher of all time faded from the baseball picture. Ray Schalk was through.

The little manager had presented his resignation to Mr. Comiskey that morning, to take effect at the close of the day's games, and it had been accepted. When the team left for Washington that evening it was making the first eastern trip in 17 seasons without the "Cracker."

Like, Cobb, Speaker, Collins and all other thoroughbreds, who finally come to the end of the road, Ray insisted, that while he had rid himself of the managerial burden, he was not through as a player. They are all like that.

Schalk Is Greatest Catcher.

There will be discussion from time to time in the future, as there has been in the past, as to the identity of the greatest outfielder, the four best infielders, or the king of pitchers. But there can be no real dispute concerning the catcher. In the light of Schalk's record the second best can be hardly discerned.

He was a big leaguer for seventeen seasons. During nearly all those years Schalk gave daily exhibitions of skill, intelligence, nerve and endurance that were at once the envy of his opponents and wonder to his friends.

"Too small," the critics said, that day in August, 1912, as the little kid for whom Mr. Comiskey had just paid more than had ever previously been exacted for a backstop, ran out to "warm up" big Ed Walsh. Yet the kid has caught 1,719 games in the American league, a greater number than any of the giants, past or present, has accomplished.

Until Schalk 100 games behind the bat was a rare performance for any backstop. The "iron men" who had accomplished that feat almost could be numbered on one hand. The little kid caught more than 100 games for eleven consecutive seasons. He leads all catchers in putouts. He also is first in assists.

Drill Made for Perfection.

Realizing at the outset of his career that his arm was not as strong as a catcher's arm should be, Schalk began a course of training arm and shoulder muscles. When he reached Chicago he could give a runner a long start toward second and beat him without effort. The lightning quickness and deadly accuracy of his throw made this possible.

Expert in all the mechanical duties of his trade, Schalk was preëminent in several particulars. In the art of snaring fouls no receiver has been in his class.

Sox Held to Three Hits as Griffs Beat Blankenship, 9-1

BY EDWARD BURNS.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., July 7.—Just when the White Sox were getting all full of vim and vigor, they had to run into a fellow named Braxton, who is left handed and currently very strong. The result was that Lena Blackburne's lads made a total of three hits, two of them by Bud Clancy, who is reputed to be weak against southpaw persons. The score was Washington, 9, Chicago, 1.

Ted Blankenship, who has been exceptionally able in recent encounters, so able, in fact, that he went into the game a .500 pitcher, had several distressing moments, due in a measure to his wildness. All of the first five runs of the enemy were made after two were out in the first, fourth and sixth innings. And in each a wild pitch by Atoka Ted whizzed by at the crucial instant.

A young southerner named "Lovely" Barnes was the sharpest thorn in Big Ted's side. This young person scored the first run of the game after a single in the first; drove in two with a triple in the fourth and accounted for another tally in the sixth with his third hit.

Clancy Averts Shutout.

Clancy's double in the fourth saved the Chicagoans from a shutout, for he later got around on an error and an infield out. Blankenship's single in the sixth was the only Sox hit not made by Bud. Braxton even refused to issue a pass.

Production of the first run of the game got under way after two were out in the Washington half of the first inning. Rice and Hayes were disposed of, but Barnes singled to right and went to second on a wild pitch. Judge walked and Reeves singled to left center, scoring Barnes.

The Nationals loaded the bases with one out in the second, but failed to push over a marker. Bluege popped to Hunnefield. Ruel singled to center and went to second while Braxton was beating out a bunt along the third base line. The bases were full when Rice walked. Hayes popped to Kamm and Barnes was thrown out by Hunnefield.

Sox Tie Score in Fourth.

During the first three innings the Sox went out in order, but in the fourth they tied the score at one all. Hunnefield was thrown out by Bluege, but Clancy doubled off the right field advertising art. Mostil sent a grounder to Reeves, and when the Senator shortstop made a poor throw to third Bud was safe and so was Johnny. Clancy scored while Reynolds was forcing Mostil.

The Senators resumed the business of scoring after two were out in the fourth inning. Kamm threw out Bluege and Reynolds got Ruel. Then Atoka Ted walked Braxton, who later went to second on a wild pitch. Rice walked for the second successive time. Haynes singled to center, scoring Braxton, and Rice stopped at second. Barnes tripled to left, scoring Rice and Hayes. Reynolds went to the wall to get Judge's fly. That made the score: Washington, 4; Chicago, 1.

In the sixth, after two were out, Cissell threw out Braxton, but Rice walked for the third successive time. Blankenship's third wild pitch then bobbed up, Rice reaching second. Hayes flied to Mostil, but Barnes made his third hit to drive in Rice.

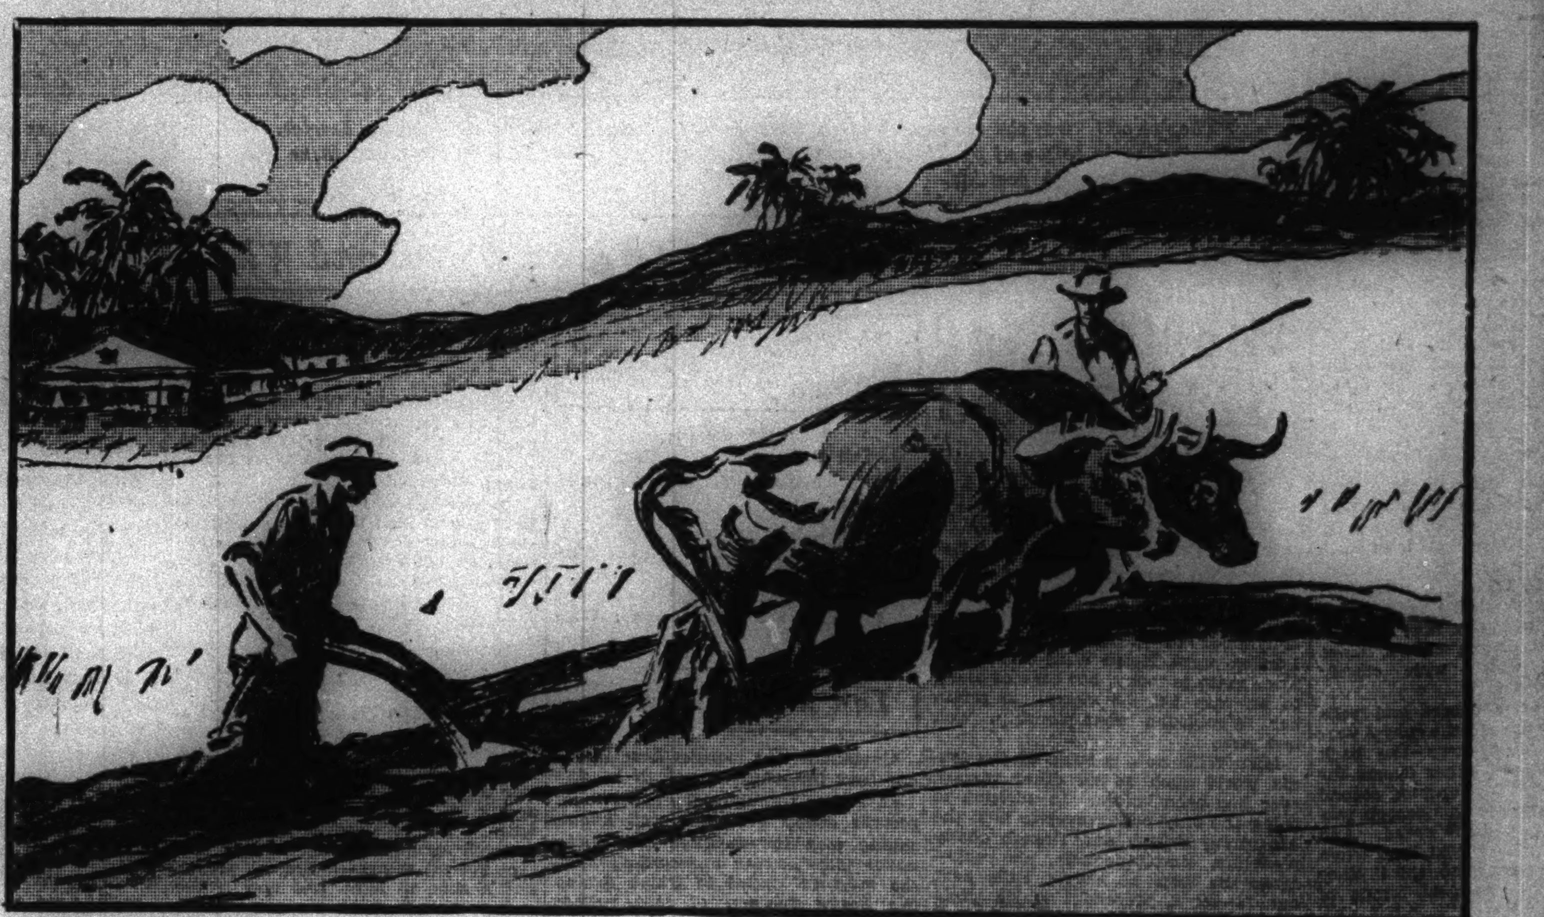
mildness of the Cuban air



Under the warm Cuban sun, under the blue Cuban sky, ripens the richest tobacco in the world. And—months before the harvest—our plantation-riders have secured Cuba's finest tobacco for the Robt Burns cigar. These fieldmen know tobacco—they buy only the choicest leaf.

Pedigreed tobacco from Cuba's richest soil gives the Robt Burns its flavor, its mildness. Try a Robt Burns today—Perfecto Grande, Staples or Panatela. In every Robt Burns cigar there is a full Havana filler of pedigreed Cuban leaf—the finest tobacco that grows on Cuban soil.

[TRIBUNE Photo.]

CUYLER LAYS DOWN A PERFECT BUNT TO SEND MAGUIRE TO SECOND BASE. In the fourth inning of the first game against Brooklyn yesterday afternoon at Wrigley field Maguire started trouble for Doug McWeeney with a single. Then came Kiki to set the stage for Hack Wilson, the cleanup artist of McCarthy's performers.

HACK WILSON SMACKS HIS TWENTY-SECOND HOME RUN INTO THE CENTER FIELD BLEACHERS. After Kiki Cuyler and Fred Maguire had done their work Hack took a toe hold at the plate and caught one of McWeeney's fast ones on the nose. It landed in the far corner of the bleachers and the Cubs led, 2 to 0. However, a seventh inning rally by the Robins won this game, 5 to 3. (Story on page 1, Sports.)

HENDRICK FAILS TO SCORE. Gabby Hartnett broke up an attempted double steal in the first game. In the fifth Bissonette dashed for second, hoping to enable Hendrick to score from third. The Cubs stopped that strategy and here Gabby tags Hendrick for the third out.

PIPGRAS, HOYT HURL YANKS TO DOUBLE VICTORY

Beat Browns by 6 to 5 and 1 to 0 Scores.

New York, July 7.—(AP)—The Yankees defeated the Browns in two close games today, 6 to 5 and 1 to 0. George Pipgras received credit for his fifteenth victory in the opener, although he had to have aid from Herb Pennock in the eighth when the Browns scored three runs and came within one of a tie.

Pipgras is the first hurler in the majors to reach fifteen games won. This decision was earned in the seventh when Gehrig tripled with two on, and scored on Meusel's sacrifice fly.

Walte Hoyt took his eleventh victory of the season in the nightcap. Babe Ruth's double and Gehrig's single in the sixth accounted for Hoyt's thin margin. Scores:

Pirates Apply Brakes, Throw Giants for Double Setback

Pittsburgh, Pa., July 7.—(AP)—The faltering Pirates came to life today with two rousing victories over the Giants, 8 to 6 and 5 to 2, before 18,000 of the faithful. The victories ended a five-game losing streak for the buccaneers, and further tightened the National league race.

The Pirates came from behind with a five-run rally against Larry Benton in the sixth to win the opener. Benton, acting as relief man after Aldridge and Henry had failed, pitched two innings, and snapped his record for innings without aid at 152 2-3. Jackson hit a home run in the first game.

Fine pitching by Ervin Brame, recently recalled from Indianapolis, and bunched hits against Fred Fitzsimmons in the first and the eighth gave the Pirates the second decision. Score:

THE INQUIRING REPORTER

Every Day He Asks Five Persons, Picked at Random, a Question.

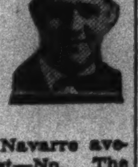
The Tribune will pay $5 for each question accepted for the Inquiring Reporter to ask. Send name and address with your question to "The Inquiring Reporter," Chicago Tribune. For today's question Charles Kittelson, 8430 East View park, Chicago, was awarded $5.

The Question.

Do you believe the change in managers will benefit the White Sox?

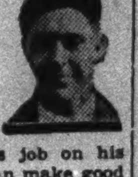
The Answers.

David Nelson, 937 North Franklin street, automobile salesman—To be frank, I am a Cub fan and am not particularly interested in the management or personnel of the Sox team. However, it seems the club should have made a better showing that it has. The Sox have some capable players.



Lyle Wissinger, 7838 Dobson avenue, fire insurance — The change won't do any harm. Some of the star players on the team have not been able to get going this season, but Blackburne may be able to make them swing into line.

Lester L. Bath, 6020 Navarre avenue, artist—No. The Sox did not get at the source of the trouble. I think the Sox need a whole new team instead of a new manager. Ray Schalk may have had his weak points, but the team itself needs rejuvenation.



Ted Hassett, 5326 Cornell avenue, fire insurance.—I consider it an unselfish act on the part of Ray Schalk to resign when he saw he could not make the team go at top speed. He stepped out to give someone else a chance. Blackburne has a man's job on his hands, and whether he can make good or not only time can tell. I hope Schalk will return to his old catching job.

W. E. Swift, Fond du Lac, Wis., furniture — I believe Schalk made a good showing with the Sox, considering the material he had to work with, and I feel that he is entitled to more credit than he has received. I think it is the team, not the manager, that needs changing. The Sox could use an outfielder, a couple of infielders and several capable pitchers.

AMIABLE TUNNEY DAZES PEGLER; RESULT: NO NEWS

Even Champion's Aid Is Nonplussed.

BY WESTBROOK PEGLER.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Speculator, N. Y., July 7.—There is something of a very mysterious nature going on here in Speculator. When your correspondent arrived in town last evening, Gene Tunney, the heavyweight champion pugilist of the world, came down the steps of the sparring partners' cottage, which in the training camp of any other heavyweight champion would be known as the hyena house, and greeted him with a handshake, and a very pleasant time of the evening.

Horses reared on the highway, the local fish turned a cartwheel in Lake Pleasant, one of Mrs. Sturgess' spinster hens hauled off and laid a parsley omelet, and Mr. Bill Gibson, stepmanager of Mr. Tunney, was so nonplussed that he split an infinitive for the first time since he came under the influence of refinement.

Gibson Splits Infinitives.

This constituted a technical violation of his contract with Mr. Tunney, but the mysterious change in the atmosphere of the place is so radical that I do not believe Mr. Tunney will seize upon this impulsive and involuntary breach as a reason to sever the relationship. In fact, judging by other significant circumstances which I have observed during my 24 hours of amazement, I even suspect that Mr. Gibson has been instructed to split all infinitives on sight, and let the double negatives fall where they may, as one means of dissipating the aristocratic atmosphere which heretofore has proved so stifling in Speculator.

Last year, when sport writers and photographers were going around Speculator panting for breath, they were told that this was due to the altitude, but the altitude is the same this year, and yet I find breathing much easier, so I am beginning to believe that it wasn't the altitude, but the refinement.

No Millionaires in Colony.

Thus far your correspondent has not discovered a single millionaire in the personal colony of the heavyweight champion pugilist, and basing all calculations solely on the manner in which people are dressed, it seems there isn't a soul in town worth more than $50,000, with the exception of the champion himself.

This method of deduction is not strictly infallible but as a general rule it is safe to conclude that if a man goes around town wearing a set of motheaten pants, cracked shoes, open work socks and a faded short with a monogram on the breast pocket he is a millionaire. The richer the millionaire, the more moth-eaten his pants are likely to be, the more decrepit his shoes and the more disreputable the state of his shirt.

If Mr. Henry Ford were here and he pursued this sartorial caste system to its logical conclusion, Mr. Will Osborn, the Speculator police force, probably would feel compelled to lock him up in the barber shop as a common bum so that the watch dogs would not Fletcherize him.

Hannagan Interprets Gene.

Puzzled by the change in the state of affairs in Speculator I have consulted Mr. Stephen John Hannagan, who had been detailed by Mr. Tex Rickard to reside here during Mr. Tunney's training for the uplift of New York, to be performed on July 26 in collaboration with Thomas Heeney, and interpret Mr. Tunney to press and the public.

Other persons have made abortive endeavors to interpret Mr. Tunney in the past, but Mr. Hannagan has interpreted the aesthetic significance of six day bicycle races, and eat-more-rhubarb weeks and he has even interpreted the philanthropic motives of Florida real estate promoters, so you feel certain that when he attempts to interpret Mr. Tunney he will come home with his interpretation or on it.

It seems that for some time Mr. Hannagan made little progress in his work because every time he would interpret Mr. Tunney as an amiable, sociable, funloving youth, and there would be a rush of sightseers of the mountain roads to witness this phenomenon, Mr. Tunney would jump into a boat, accompanied by a good book, and row out to an island to admire nature.

Seclusion Stirs Up Tex.

The newspapers heard of this, and, perceiving that Mr. Tunney seemed to desire seclusion above anything else, they did not send any sport writers or photographers up to annoy him. Up to the present time they have given him so much seclusion that Mr. Rickard has been put to the expedient of issuing body writs for the New York sport writers.

In the meantime Mr. Hannagan continues to interpret. In today's interpretation of events he states that the sport writers are pouring into camp. Inasmuch as your correspondent is the only sport writer who has arrived in camp lately, I feel called upon to state that Mr. Hannagan's choice of the word "pour" was either malicious or erroneous.

Mystery Is Complicated.

"Never in his career has Tunney been more amiable, and reporters and photographers are moving about this peaceful camp aglow with sunburned smiles and delighted with the easy air of the champion, which makes their duties so much more pleasant than is usual in a fight camp," says Mr. Hannagan's interpretation.

This only complicates the mystery. Thus far your correspondent has counted two reporters and no photographers, net, and my expression, although sunburned, is not so much smiling as goofy or puzzled. However, it is true that Mr. Tunney has never been more amiable. In fact, he is so amiable that, so far as I am concerned, all is confusion and I can send no news.

MILLS STRIVE TO HOLD FIRST PLACE IN CITY LEAGUE

Games Today

Belle Plaines at Logan Square.
Kruteckoffs at Mills stadium.
Litsingers at Duffy park.
Firemen at Hammond.

The four traveling nines will play four park teams in the thirteenth round of play for the City league baseball pennant today.

One of the best contests today promises to be at Logan Square, where Belle Plaines will furnish the competition. Manager Jim Hutton has been working since July 4 on the infielding and patching some of the holes which were evident on Independence day when the Squares lost to the Mills by one run.

Bill Harley's Mills, still on the pinnacle, will be assailed by the Krutckoffs. Nolan will fill the shortstop position for the Mills, replacing Buster Caton.

The Duffys have a chance to go into first place if they defeat the Litsingers, providing the Mills lose. John Duffy, with that idea in view, is going to send his slab ace, Big Jim Vaughan, to the front. Dolly Gray is Bill Niesen's opposition choice.

"Men Who Chew Are Men Who Do"—So Goose Goslin Hits Ball at .406 Clip

BY EDWARD BURNS.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., July 7.—Since we recently solved several big problems pertaining to baseball we have been getting more worthy letters than ever before. We have decided not to work on any baseball problem unless it is worthy and ethical, which sometimes leads to intricacies, but we shall remain calm and courageous at all times.

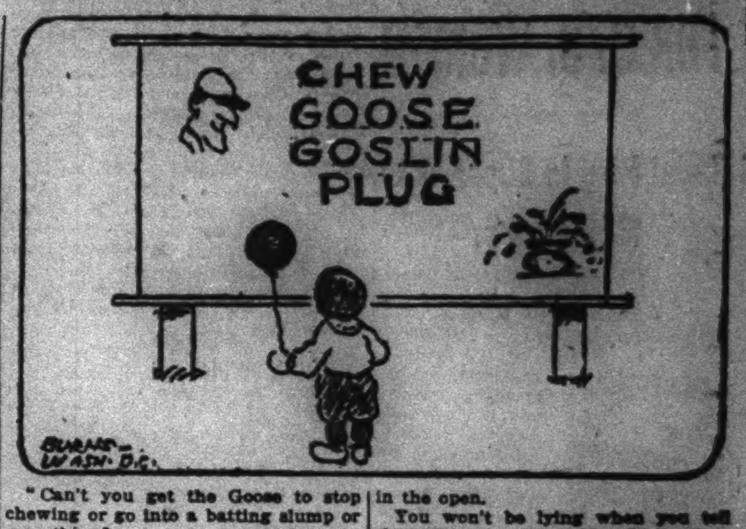
In this week's issue we purpose to take up the problem presented by a little gal right here in the nation's capital. Here's the letter:

"Kind sir: I am writing to you in behalf of myself and a group of other school teachers who are worried about the tobacco chewing menace as fomented by one Goose Goslin, the star athlete on the Washington club.

"As you know, the American boy is highly impressionable and no good can come from the fact that this Goslin has endorsed a certain brand of spitting tobacco. When the ads first came out, we had our little boys under our direct control and Mr. Goslin was just a baseball player.

"Now, however, as you know, the Goose is socking the old apple for a percentage of .406, leading both major circuits with the stick. And our little charges are on vacation.

"The menace to those little fellows is obvious. With no teacher to guide them they naturally think Mr. Goslin is batting .406 just because he eats a certain brand of plug tobacco.



"Can't you get the Goose to stop chewing or go into a batting slump or something?

"[Signed.] ANXIOUS."

Well, "ANXIOUS," we want to help you and the rest of the girls, but frankly, you have given us one of the knottiest problems ever we have been asked to solve.

We suggest, however, that when classes resume, you call the little fellows together and explain to them that Mr. Goslin does not chew socially—only on the ball field. This at least will cut down the menace to the extent that the boys will take up the habit only for use while at play out in the open.

You won't be lying when you tell them this, Anxious. Mr. Goslin lives right in the swell hotel where this is being written and we've noticed he dresses up in white flannels every evening. And you know that no chronic chewer would take a draw like that.

Don't waste time taking up the Goslin matter with Commissioner Landis. We remember when the judge was on the Federal bench. He used to hole out in one on every shot. Benny Stein, his personal bailiff, or caddy, you might say, would move the cup around at different angles, just to relieve the monotony of tedious litigations.

VELIE aircraft engine approved by United States Department of Commerce

THIS certificate of merit bestowed upon the sensational Velie aircraft engine which powers the celebrated "Monocoupe" is entirely logical.

For this Velie aircraft engine, which has received the endorsement of Uncle Sam, is a refinement—a development of the Velie airplane type automobile motor found in the distinctive Velie car for the last eight years.

Exclusive to the Velie, this motor of surpassing smoothness and power accounts for the comfort, luxury and speed which have made Velie performance famous wherever fine cars are analyzed and tested.

A magnificent line of 6's and straight 8's await your inspection—eleven models in all.

Try a demonstration—compare Velie with other fine cars. Then you will understand why Velie sales are steadily mounting and why the mammoth Velie plant is taxed to capacity.

You may purchase a Velie from income, with convenient monthly installments. Your present used car will apply on the purchase price.

VELIE MOTORS CORPORATION, Moline, Illinois

More than eight years ago Velie recognized the demand for a better automobile motor and designed and built the famous Velie airplane type valve-in-head motor. The Monocoupe Airplane, which is creating a sensation in aviation today, is powered by the Velie five-cylinder, radial, aircraft engine — a tribute to the efficiency and reliability of its sister motor — the silent, rugged, vibrationless Velie valve-in-head motor which powers the Velie automobile.

PROPOSE OPEN GOLF TOURNEY FOR U. S. WOMEN

Medal Play Is Superior to Match Play.

BY HARLAND ROHM.

Out of the national open golf championship at Olympia Fields came a suggestion, which probably isn't new but at least deserves serious consideration by the monarchs of American golf—the United States Golf Association. The suggestion is that a national open championship be held for women.

MAUREEN ORCUTT.

At present the one major woman's tournament, the national championship, is a match play event. While this is an admirable arrangement for a single championship, medal play has some advantages over match play just as in other ways match play is superior.

Match play, of necessity, gives no premium to consistent golf. A golfer who is "wild as hawk" can win at match play by combining all his bad shots on a few holes and defeat a really better golfer who consistently shoots his pars and one over pars. Or a "bad day" when the shots simply will not go right may result in the elimination of a golfer by another who couldn't win one match in ten from his opponent.

Few Women Are Pros.

In medal play that "bad day" may put a good golfer out of the running but at least he or she has a chance to make up for it with a good round the next day. Over sufficient number of holes, there can hardly be any question that medal play will favor the better golfer.

There have been numerous examples of this in the men's championship as well as the women's, even in recent years, of a fair golfer, helped by breaks, winning a tournament over better golfers, and while there has been an occasional fluke open champion, the examples are extremely rare.

There are few, if any, women professionals in this country, which would be one argument against a women's open—the point being that the open is the championship of all men golfers, professional and amateur, while a woman's open would be only another women's championship. But this ignores the fact that there is a hard to define, but very real difference between match play golf and medal play golf.

Suggest 72 Hole Tourney.

Only two of the women's championships at present are medal play, both over 54 holes, the eastern and the western medal play championships. Maureen Orcutt won the eastern championship this year with a score of 84-93-81—258 and Mrs. Lee Mida won the western with 87-87-87—261 over the Hinsdale course which had been soaked by rain daily for ten days before the tournament. The western, which was begun only a few years ago as an experiment, has gained steadily in popularity.

The proposal which met with unanimous approval of the group of golf writers from all over the country was that some women's organization sponsor a 72 hole national medal play competition next year, the women to play 18 holes a day for four days. Some arrangement should be made to have the tournament under the auspices of the U. S. G. A. Probably that organization would not want to attempt it as a regular annual affair until it had been proved it was a worthy tournament, but there is little doubt they would approve it as an experiment. That is a job for some women's organization to attempt.

SECOND YACHT FLEET STARTS RACE TO SPAIN

On Board U. S. S. Iuka Off Ambrose Lightship, New York Harbor, July 7. (AP)—The five ocean racing schooners seeking the King Alfonso thirteenth cup set out for Santander, Spain, today after a two and one half hours' postponement caused by a lack of wind.

A light southwesterly breeze that gradually worked around from the southward filled the sails of the fleet—the second to depart in a week from New York for the goal 3,055 miles across the Atlantic.

Hagen Exhibition Match at Twin Orchard Postponed

The exhibition golf match between Walter Hagen and Eddie Gayer against Al Espinosa and Chick Evans, scheduled for Twin Orchard today, has been postponed. Hagen telephoned from New York yesterday he would be unable to play.

BUTTERFIELD.

ITASCA.

In the qualifying match for the July Handicap, H. R. Ratabun, 89—14—75; B. J. Aubineau, 83—8—75; and L. S. Hamilton, 94—19—75; were tied for first place. Next was G. Pritchard, 88—12—76.

OAK PARK.

In an 18 hole medal play ball sweepstakes event, low gross winners were: Class A—J. P. Hook, 75; J. K. Walker, 85; class C—C. E. Gambill, 96. Low net—Class A: E. L. Hartig, 77—7—70; class B—A. L. Sawyer, 88—15—73; A. S. Pearl, 101—29—72.

SUNSET RIDGE.

H. R. Walton won the weekly "Won Tyme" tournament at Sunset Ridge yesterday with a score of 75—3—72. The leaders in the ball sweepstakes event in classes A and B were: L. T. Ellis, 82—7—75; W. O. Coleman, 88—13—75; E. W. Neese, 92—16—76; S. H. Clark, 86—10—76; R. Peet, 93—16—77; J. H. Musson, 88—11—77; H. D. Hite, 93—16—77; N. D. Belnap, 93—15—78; J. N. Heath, 89—11—78; H. S. Stevens, 86—8—78; Classes C and D—C. Schwartz, 105—30—75; R. P. Minton, 97—19—78; Dr. E. A. Oliver, 99—20—79; G. V. Nevius, 103—22—81.

BRIERGATE.

B. H. Elliott won a special approaching contest at Briergate yesterday, his iron shots from distances of 75, 100 and 125 yards from the eighteen hole falling an average distance of seventeen yards from the cup. R. Halpin, 87—11—76, won the sweepstakes in class A; W. W. Fox, 91—17—74, won in class B, and W. Hay, 106—26—80, captured first in class C.

CALUMET.

J. T. Aitkins made his 91—21—70 do double duty at Calumet yesterday, winning the George Knox trophy, posted for an eighteen hole medal play event and taking the lead in the O. D. May trophy tournament, which is a 72 hole affair. In the match play against par event R. O. Hartreger won, 4 down, while C. W. Blackwell was second, 5 down. In the ball sweepstakes event T. Lett, 74—1—73, won in class A. R. F. McPartlin Jr., 83—12—71, won in class B, and J. T. Atkins, 91—21—70, won in class C. In class A of the second round of the Sports and Pastime trophy event, A. O. Brett defeated Walter A. Burns, 6 and 5, in class B. C. W. Blackwell defeated J. F. Fogle, 3 and 2, and in class C, C. S. Greer defeated S. J. Joy, 5 and 4. These were the final events held over the "old" course. An innovation is to be tried today. Concurrent with the opening of the new golf shop, the two nines are to be interchanged, the first tee becoming the tenth and so on over the course. Such an arrangement will permit the members to discharge their caddies right at the shot.

SKOKIE.

L. Barnett won the Boomerang cup with a score of 86—11—75. Barnett was also one of the winners in the ball sweepstakes low net event with the same score. The other low net winners were R. L. Roberts, 92—16—76; L. B. Steele, 94—17—77. W. S. Creston was the low gross winner with a score of 81.

FLOSSMOOR.

The Hardie trophy, a 72 hole event, was won by C. F. Thompson, who had a net score of 303. In an 18 hole medal play event, full handicap, J. A. Bloomington was the winner in classes A and B with a score of 83—10—73. A. W. Swayne was the winner in classes C and D with 84—14—70. Following are the results of the ball sweepstakes event: J. A. Bloomington, 83—10—73; A. W. Swayne, 84—14—70; D. E. Fouse, 87—12—75; E. Westlake, 87—11—76; C. F. Thompson, 88—12—76; F. P. Wood, 102—26—76; H. G. McLain, 87—10—77.

OLYMPIA FIELDS.

Charles Kellam finished first in the 18 hole medal play event, full handicap, with a score of 82—12—70. Dr. R. K. Packard finished second with a 90—19—71. In the final round of the June class A tournament, W. Crowdus defeated L. L. Hebbero, 4 and 2.

SOUTHMOOR.

Qualifying twosomes in the Directors' trophy tournament were announced as W. Freeman and J. J. Stephens, 165 net; A. Beuttenmiller and E. Egan, 167; R. Brooks and C. O. White, 154; W. Bradish and G. 112 Entered in District Golf Championship

When entries for the snappiest golf tournament in the middle west—the Chicago district amateur championship—closed Friday one hundred and twelve golfers had set their names on the list, indicating they would shoot for the championship, won over Olympia Fields No. 4 course last year by A. J. [Jack] Westland. The champion was one who did not enter.

The tournament, which will be held at Barrington Hills tomorrow, Tuesday, and Wednesday, deserves the name of the snappiest tournament because of the speed with which a champion is decided. Three days from the time the first man steps upon the tee for the qualifying round to the finish is speed.

What Field Faces.

The 112 will be cut to sixteen by the 36 hole qualifying round Monday, two eighteen hole matches will reduce the sixteen to the four semifinalists by Tuesday night, while the semi-final matches will be held Thursday morning and the final Thursday afternoon.

Among the stars of the district who should be somewhere up in the running are Robert A. Gardner of Onwentsia, formerly national amateur champion and district titleholder in 1925 and 1926; George Thomas, Jr., Russell Martin, and Eldridge Robinson, all of Flossmoor; Arthur Sweet and Rial Rolfe, Ridgemoor; Gus Novotny and Tom Frainey, Edgewood Valley; J. Douglas Casey, Riverside; H. D. Fargo Jr., Edgewater, and John McKinlay Jr., Beverly. Because of the large number of entries the golfers will be sent off in threesomes in the qualifying round. Trains leave for Barrington from the North Western station at 8, 8:20, 10:10, 11:10, 12:10, and 1:15.

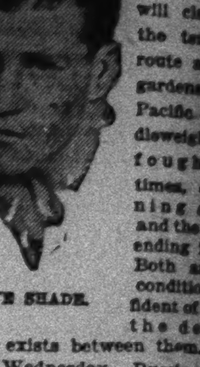
FOUR RING SHOWS COMPRISE WEEK'S MENU FOR FANS

Four boxing shows comprise an unusually heavy menu for Chicago fistic fans this week. In the opening card tomorrow night, Dave Shade and Bert Colima will clash over the ten round route at Midway gardens. The two Pacific coast middleweights have fought three times, each winning a decision and the third bout ending in a draw. Both are in top condition and confident of breaking the deadlock which exists between them.



DAVE SHADE.

On Wednesday, Russie Le Roy, Fargo, N. D., junior welterweight, meets Young Jack Thompson in the ten round feature of the card arranged by the Parkway club at the American Giants' baseball park. Jimmy Mollette of the south side and Ralph Mendoza, Mexican lightweight, are slated to provide the fireworks in the semi-windup. Three other six round fights and one four rounder complete the card.

Two ten round fights will share the spotlight on Promoter James C. Mullen's show at the Mills stadium on Thursday night. Jack (Kid) Berg, the English lightweight contender who defeated Pedro Amador and Freddie Mueller in his last two appearances in local rings, will attempt to extend his winning streak against Mike [illegible] of California in one-half of the double windup. The other portion will put Tuffy Griffiths of Sioux City against Haakon Hansen, the Norwegian middleweight.

Four preliminaries of five rounds each will serve as appetizer for the main bouts. Earl Mastro will box Gaston Charles, Harry Dublinsky will meet Cecil Como, Harry Forbes tackles Maurice Holtzer, and Bud Peters engages Harry Fierro.

Les Marriner, University of Illinois heavyweight, will ring down the curtain on the busy week when he battles Al Friedman at the new Hippodrome arena, 4810 N. Clark street, on Friday. Billy Showers and Johnny Sherrod are the principals in the semi-windup.

JUST TRY IT IN TRAFFIC

SEE HOW IT PARKS

Not only does the New Oldsmobile offer the fine-car qualities of power, comfort and appearance—but it offers them in a car of convenient size, designed to meet modern-day traffic conditions.

Just try it in traffic. Mark its silent smoothness as you flash ahead when an opening appears—accelerating in high from 5 to 25 m. p. h. in a scant 8½ seconds. Note the quick response to steering. See how easily you slip into small parking places—a tapered frame enables you to turn completely around in a 36-foot circle. Then head for the open road . . . here is speed to meet every driving emergency, to answer every desire.

Only fine-car design and fine-car features could give this fine-car performance. A rubber-cushioned, 55 h. p. high-compression engine . . . crankcase ventilation . . . controlled cooling and full-pressure oiling—these are typical examples of the advanced engineering that you find in the new Oldsmobile.

And matching this progressiveness in design are new Fisher bodies—created by artist-engineers to be free from rattles and drumming and to express in their bold, free beauty the whole new spirit of our times.

We want you to drive the new Oldsmobile. We want your own experience to confirm the growing judgment of America—"Here, truly, is the Fine Car of Low Price!"—the judgment that thousands are confirming by choosing Oldsmobile. We have a new Oldsmobile waiting for you . . . come take that drive today!

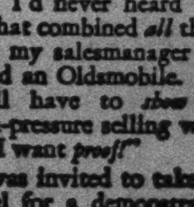
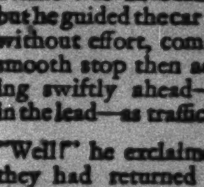
A Salesman "sells" himself on Oldsmobile



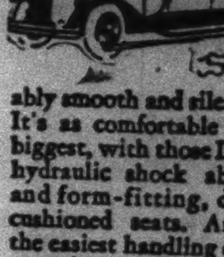
"I drive a car all day long in making my calls," said Mr. T, "and practically all of my driving is through heavy traffic. So I want a car of convenient size and one that handles easily. Yet I want big-car comfort and quality, too. I'd never heard of a car that combined all this until my salesmanager suggested an Oldsmobile. But you'll have to show me! High-pressure selling won't do. I want proof!"

He was invited to take the wheel for a demonstration and he stepped into the car.



Traffic was unusually thick but he guided the car through without effort, coming to a smooth stop then accelerating swiftly ahead—always in the lead—as traffic started.

"Well!" he exclaimed after they had returned to the showroom, "I can't think of a single test that this car doesn't meet. It's got all the power in the world—remarkably smooth and silent, too.



It's as comfortable as the biggest, with those Lovejoy hydraulic shock absorbers and form-fitting, deeply-cushioned seats. And it's the easiest handling car I've ever driven! Make out an order—I'm ready to sign up now."

Lehmann's Reveille Wins Blue Ribbon at Milwaukee

Milwaukee, Wis., July 7.—[Special.]—The second day of the Milwaukee Hunt club's horse show at the Milwaukee Country club drew a record-breaking attendance of Milwaukee and Chicago society folk despite the heat wave.

The chestnut mare Reveille, owned by O. W. Lehmann, Lake Villa, Ill., carried off the blue ribbon honors in the first contest of the afternoon, the handy hunter event, while a second Illinois horse, Lord Byng, a chestnut gelding owned by Mrs. Mary Llewellyn of Sunset farm, Palatine, Ill., took second place. Third place went to Main Spring, the bay gelding of Dr. Stanley J. Seeger, Milwaukee.

Chicago Horse Wins.

The trophy for the combination class was won by Enchanter, the chestnut gelding entered by Frederick A. Poole Jr., Chicago, which was ridden by Miss Henrietta Countess of Chicago and Lake Geneva. Miss Countess won applause for her riding ability on the side saddle. Second place in this class was won by the chestnut mare Miss Dainty, owned by Fred Cox of Delafield, Wis., while third place went to Luckey, the bay gelding owned by Mrs. Oscar Greenwald, Milwaukee. Charm, a brown mare owned by Gustave Pabst, Milwaukee, placed fourth.

One of the feature events of the afternoon was the children's jumping class in which youngsters under sixteen participated. Blue ribbon honors were carried off by little Coolidge Chapin of Lake Forest, Ill., riding Miss Elizabeth Chapin's gray mare, Grey Miss. Frank Cox's black mare, Trinket, ridden by Jeannette Atwood, Delafield, Wis., took second prize, while Eleanore Wheeler of Lake Forest, carried off the third prize. Fourth place went to Jack Van Dyke, Milwaukee, riding Martha Ann, a black mare from the Duffield farms.

One of the thrills of the afternoon was the near spill of Jimmy Kieckhefer, Milwaukee, in the children's jumping event. His horse refused to take the second hurdle, and the little fellow was thrown over the horse's neck, but he flung his arms around the grey mare's neck, hung on, and recovered.

A team of three hunters from Armin A. Schlesinger's Wayte-a-Whyle farms in north Milwaukee, captured the blue ribbon and trophy in the team of three hunters' class, while Ludington Patten's team of three carried off second place. Third place went to a team from Mrs. Mary Llewellyn's Sunset farm, Palatine, Ill. The only time any of the cavalry entries in the show have placed was in this event when a team of three of the first squad, 14th United States Cavalry, Fort Sheridan, Ill., took fourth.

Hot Toddy Winner.

Hot Toddy, a chestnut gelding from Armin A. Schlesinger's Wayte-a-Whyle farm, carried off first honors in the hunter-not-jump class. Mrs. George Gibbs' brown mare, Bless Her Heart, took second honors while third honors went to Martha Ann, the black mare from the Duffield farm.

Two spills marred the two morning events of the show, which opened with a jumping class. Capt. Dimitri Ivanenko, Lake Forest, Ill., and W. Dirk Van Ingen, also of Lake Forest, both took spills in this event when their horses refused the hurdles, throwing their riders over their heads. Neither was hurt.

Mrs. Mary Llewellyn's chestnut gelding, Golden Sunset, carried off first honors while second honors were taken by Our Boy, bay gelding owned by Mrs. Seymour Wheeler, Lake Forest. In the lightweight hunter class, Dr. A. J. Seeger's bay gelding, U. S. Steel, took the blue ribbon, and second honors went to Ludington Patton's brown mare, Fads.

GRAND CIRCUIT RESULTS

Cleveland, O., July 7.—(AP)—The final day's grand circuit racing at North Randall track was given over to claiming races and overnight events, the program being equally divided between the trotters and pacers. The opening events, a 2:14 claiming pace, provided the most thrills for the handful of spectators, going four heats before a decision was reached. Zonite, Charing Cross, and Frisco Star each won a heat in order. In the run off between the three, Frisco Star, owned by Frank Callahan of Tiffin, O., and driven by Vic Fleming, proved the best.

Fleming made it two in a row when he took the second heat, a 2:13 pace, with Allan. Summaries:

BARCELONA, July 7.—(AP)—Joe Dundee of the United States, welterweight champion of the world, won over Hilario Martinez of South America by a technical knockout in the eighth round of a scheduled ten round bout here tonight. It was the first appearance of a world champion in Spain since Jack Johnson, former heavyweight title holder, boxed here.

TRAPSHOOTERS COMPETE.

Winona, Minn., July 7.—(AP)—Trapshooters from Minnesota, Wisconsin, Iowa, South Dakota and Canada will participate here tomorrow in the Forty-sixth annual Winona Gun club shoot.

WESTERN JUNIOR AND BOYS' TENNIS MEET OPENS AUG. 6

Youthful tennis enthusiasts of the middle west will have their fling at championship competition the week of Aug. 6 to 13, when the western boys and junior championships will be decided on the courts of the Hyde Park Racquet club, 50th street and Dorchester avenue.

In an effort to build up tennis in the Chicago area, the committee in charge has decided to make the tournament an open affair, the only restriction being as to the age of the contestants.

The boys' division will be limited to boys under 15, although those who had their fifteenth birthday on or before Jan. 1, 1928, will be eligible for that division. The junior age limit is 18, boys of that age who had their eighteenth birthday on or before Jan. 1, 1928, being eligible to compete.

Entries may be sent to Jack Byrnes, Hyde Park Racquet club, Chicago, the entry fee being $1 for each singles event, with a charge of $2 a team for the doubles.

A New Car.. A New Car Style.. A New Zenith of Low Priced Car-Luxury and Performance

New slender profile chromium-plated radiator.—Long, low bodies.—Generous room for 2 to 5 passengers, according to body model.—Luxurious deep upholstery and appointment detail.—New "Silver-Dome" high-compression engine, for use with any gasoline.—Smooth speed up to 60 and more miles an hour.—Chrysler light-action internal expanding hydraulic four-wheel brakes—no other car of this price possesses this feature.

CHRYSLER PLYMOUTH

All Chrysler research, engineering and manufacturing have been inspired by the fundamental motive of giving ever greater quality and value for each dollar of car cost. Public recognition of this principle, in four years advanced Chrysler from 27th to 3rd place in sales in the N. A. C. C.

With a new product—the Plymouth—Chrysler is the first to give, at so low a price, the advantages of performance, riding ease, dependability and full adult size which characterize fine cars of higher price.

The Plymouth assures in the following exceptional advantages the full measure of quality and value to which buyers of low-priced cars have long been entitled—

Smooth speed up to 60 and more miles an hour and Chrysler acceleration given by the new "Silver-Dome" high-compression engine, with which you can use any gasoline; comfort and roominess of far costlier cars; luxurious interior finish; smartness and style equal to the most beautiful; rugged strength to assure the long life and economy of operation so vital to the buyer who would conserve his outlay; the safety secured only by internal expanding hydraulic 4-wheel brakes; and such high-priced features as body impulse neutralizer, air-filter; shock absorbing spring compensators, all-rubber engine mounting, and full balloon tires.

The new Chrysler-designed and Chrysler-built Plymouth is so revolutionary an advance over other low-priced cars, it is such conclusive evidence that the past year's strides in the science of manufacturing have multiplied the purchasing power of the motor car dollar, that you will surely want to see it and drive it.

And above all, you must see its beautiful lines and finish, and stretch at ease in its deep-upholstered, full adult-size bodies, to comprehend how completely the Plymouth surpasses cars heretofore sold under $1000.

See it. Ride in it. We believe you will discover there has never been a car anywhere near its price that can approach the Plymouth for power, pick-up, smoothness, easy handling, safety, quietness and roominess—nor that can equal it in beauty and style.

MOTORS — TRAFFIC — HIGHWAYS

AMERICA'S ROADS FAST AND SAFEST, BRITISHER SAYS

Lack of Hedgerow Beauty Is Pointed Out.

Lacking the scenic and historic appeal of the hedged highways of England, American roads are vastly superior in every other respect, in the opinion of a leader of English motoring thought now touring the United States. The "openness" of the American road permitting high speed travel with a degree of safety that is unparalleled in England, is one of the most impressive features of the United States network of highways, he declares.

"The roads of England," he says, "are with the partial exception of two or three main arterial routes, shut in, lined with walls or hedges, narrow for the most part, winding usually. In America the great highways stretch for miles ahead, devoid of blind corners, intersected by cross roads only at intervals that are to be measured in miles."

Day's Limit 150 Miles.

In England, the motorist's view ahead usually is no greater than 100 yards and even in this limited area of unobstructed vision, hedge or wall hidden lanes are likely to pour their traffic onto the main thoroughfare at any moment, he declares, adding:

"Driving in England thus demands a greater vigilance, a more constant nerve strain, than it does here and the distance that a man covers in a day and the average rate of speed at which he covers it are in consequence liable to be lower than in America.

"A hundred and fifty miles a day represents the maximum distance that the Englishman can undertake with real comfort, and if he has averaged more than 20 miles an hour over that distance, he has done well. On the superb concrete roads in the neighborhood of Los Angeles, at any rate, as well as on such highways at U. S. No. 30, 200 miles a day is a mere bagatelle, and an average speed of 35 miles an hour can easily be maintained.

"Road surface also plays a prominent part in this state of affairs. I should say that in the proportionate number of fairly good roads in each country, England is ahead of America; but we have only a few miles of highway that can compare with the American concrete thoroughfares. We are constructing them, but roads cost money, and a country that in the last months of the world war was spending at the rate of over $40,000,000 a day has been in no position these last few years to disburse large sums on highway construction.

Villages Hamper Speed.

"And even had it been possible, I do not know that Englishmen would welcome an extensive series of concrete speedways over the country. More of them than we have now we certainly need, but, after all, in so compact a land there is not that same necessity for maintaining high road speeds that exists in a country of vast distances. And the typical English road, as it now stands, is a thing of beauty.

"It is true, of course, that the motorist in a hurry is apt to curse the fact that at every two or three miles of highway he will pass through some village in which school children, policemen, dogs, farm laborers and all the usual population of an overcrowded country will demand a reduction of speed. But on the other hand, if the decision rested with him, he would not see abolished in the interest of increased road efficiency that huddle of red roofs around an ivy-covered church that was standing when King John signed Magna Charta, any more than he would replace with a level concrete structure that hump-back canal bridge made of stone that was quarried when Elizabeth was queen—even though both entail dropping temporarily to 10 miles an hour.

Wide Highways Needed.

"The English road is, generally speaking, as efficient as the plan of the country will allow—save always that we do greatly need a few wide, concrete speedways, constructed without the slightest regard for scenery, that will link up London with the industrial cities of the north, the great majority of which, incidentally, are nearer London than is St. Louis to Kansas City.

"The standard of motor driving in America appears to me to be high. I have not had so much opportunity of observing it in this district as I had in California, but certainly in Los Angeles the car usually seems, like some up to date centaur, a part of the driver himself.

Auto Taxes High.

"This series, no doubt, from the constant practice that Americans, and especially Californians, obtain in driving. In England, motoring is still a pastime for the reasonably well to do, for the hire purchase system (installment plan) has not been developed to anything like the extent it has in America. An annual motor tax of $5 per horsepower, on top of all the other taxation under which England is at present staggering, makes the intending car owner reflect again; and in any case far shorter distances and the very effective railway network that covers the country make a car far less of a necessity than it is in the United States.

Still Luxury in England.

"A by-product of these conditions is that the English motors are still somewhat of a luxury, and a larger proportion of them are chauffeur driven. The general appearance of the cars one meets on the roads are apt to be more spick and span than that of the American machines that are owner driven, and used for practical business rather than for pleasure.

"A sight, too, that is more rarely met with in my country than here is that of a woman driving a car, while her husband sits beside her in the front seat. Many women, of course, drive cars in England, but when a man and a woman are riding together it is the man who nine times out of ten does the driving.

"But an examination of this question would take me outside the realms of motoring—and probably out of my depth at the same time."

WHAT CHICAGO AIMS AT FOR RADIAL ROADS

Widened radial highways extending from Chicago to a distance of 100 miles out into the surrounding region are being sought in a movement fathered by the Chicago Motor club, and which has been received with much enthusiasm by the public, highway officials and public officials of both parties. An idea of what is being done along this line in other communities is pictured in the views taken in the vicinity of Los Angeles and of Syracuse, N. Y.

U.S. GOVERNMENT SCHEDULES 1928 HIGHWAY WORK

Plans 20,000 Miles for Season's Improvement.

Improvement of the state and federal aid highway systems under the supervision of the highway departments of the several states will go forward during the season now opening with the construction of more than 20,000 miles of surfaced roads and about 8,000 miles graded and drained.

The statement was issued by the American Automobile association and is based upon reports received through the federal bureau of public roads. The national motoring body says that highway construction in 1928 will at least equal and probably exceed the highest mark recorded in any preceding year.

Vast Upkeep Effort.

State reports also indicate that at least 240,000 miles of the total of 288,000 in the state highway systems will be maintained this year under the supervision of the highway departments—a fact which will assure the traveling public of the maximum degree of road service.

Funds estimated as available for expenditure during the year by the state highway departments are about 25 per cent greater in total amount than similar estimates indicated at the beginning of last season. It is declared practically certain that the funds available to all state highway departments for construction and maintenance of roads and bridges will exceed $750,000,000, and local revenues, expendable by county and local authorities, will swell the highway total to upwards of $1,300,000,000.

Work by the Counties.

Details are not available concerning the work to be done by county and local authorities.

It is anticipated that the year's work under state supervision will result in the construction of nearly 9,000 miles of hard surfaced pavements, upwards of 12,000 miles of less expensive surfaced roads, and 8,000 miles of roads adequately graded and drained.

NEWS AND VIEWS

The new Chrysler—built Plymouth, along with two new Chrysler models, the 65 and the 75, that have been shown to the public during the last three days at the Coliseum, are quite dressy and novel in many respects. The new Plymouth, the corporation states, is the most powerful and roomiest car in the low priced field. This car is priced around $700 f. o. b. Detroit. The new Chryslers embody many daring changes in design, with the added claims of greater speed and smoothness in operation.

Studebaker has just announced the first showing of their 1929 series, led by the President Eight. According to the company's announcement, "irresistible feminine appeal has been added to masculine power in all the cars." In the new models are incorporated many refinements both in mechanical construction and design, the most revolutionary being the adoption of roller bearings for spring shackles.

Zac Dunlap, general manager of Durant activities in Chicago, led a fleet of 114 new Durants from the company warehouse last week, the parade being escorted by a squadron of motorcycle officers. This is the second big driveaway of Durants that has occurred in the last month.

Keeping space with the [illegible] being established nationally by the Graham-Paige Motors corporation in production and sales, the [illegible] company, Chicago distributors, [illegible] up another better than a million dollar month in June.

Supplementing the 18,000 mile guarantee recently announced on Inland heavy duty tires, the Inland Rubber company of Chicago has gone still another step in advance by offering a pledge of a year's service on these tires, free from all charges for repairs.

The new 1929 Moon-Aerotype models are now on display in Chicago. The line consists of the 8-80, 8-75, and [illegible] Royals and the 6-72 Standards and the 6-60.

W. E. Butler, president of [illegible] Motors, Inc., Chicago distributors for Reo automobile, announces the appointment of G. H. Paddock as wholesale manager of his company. Mr. Paddock has been associated in the automobile business in Chicago for many years, the last four of which were with the Watson Stabilator company.

Oklahoma Exempts Tourists from New License Tax

Oklahoma's requirement that motor vehicles entering the state for business or commercial purposes must be licensed in that state does not interfere with the regulation allowing [illegible] days for cars from other states, when they are used for pleasure or touring purposes.

The Automobile Club of Oklahoma advises as to the status and offers every inducement to motorists to visit that state.

MOTORS — TRAFFIC — HIGHWAYS

DETROIT FINDS 40 FOOT ROADS ARE ECONOMICAL

Last Longer and Speed Up Traffic.

BY PUTNEY HAIGHT.

Detroit, Mich., July 7.—[Special]—The extent to which the Wayne county road system in the Detroit area has been transformed from a network of narrow, two lane highways to a system of 40 foot four lane arteries and double 40 foot super-highways is not only discouraging, but almost overwhelming to one who plods along in the slow motion picture of traffic as presented in Cook county.

The 20-foot road is obsolete in fact in the Detroit area and has been obsolete in theory since 1920.

"Roads of the 20-foot standard are too expensive for Detroit under present day traffic conditions," was the comment of Edward N. Hines, member of the county road commissioners, and for twenty-two years the leading spirit of that body.

Heavy Traffic Ruinous.

He pointed out that heavy traffic on narrow roads tears them to pieces in a comparatively short time while double or triple the traffic that can be carried by a narrow road, may be poured over the wider surface indefinitely without injury to the pavement.

"There may be occasions when opening new territory, that this county will lay short 20 foot service roads," he continued, "but they will be built on grading that will carry a forty foot surface, and the added 20 feet provided as traffic grows and demands it.

"In Wayne county we consider the narrow road merely as a feeder. Feeders develop into traffic arteries, and then we widen."

Mr. Hines is not given to boasting, but he declines to let the statement that Cook county leads the country in road building, with its 580 miles of concrete highways, go unchallenged.

"There are now 496 miles of concrete roads in Wayne county," he said, "and that is hardly the half of it.

"Over 150 miles of this is 40 foot road or wider. Fifty miles or more is double 40 foot roadway. And it upon the basis of 20 foot unit width and should be credited with over 700 miles.

No Holiday Processions.

"Not only that, but these 700 miles are so laid as to provide for fast and safe traffic movement. The wide roads reach destinations. We do not have the old funeral processions on Saturdays, Sundays and holidays. People who drive cars can drive about over the week end as freely as commercial traffic travels about on week days.

"We have completed thirty railroad grade separations and have fifty more to be built. We are to separate the grades of the highways intersecting our superhighways, and we are constructing bridges not only at the width of 40 feet for roadways, but constructing them so that they may be widened without loss of the original investment.

"This highway development has been going on for twenty-two years and of course is in a more definite state of development than similar work is elsewhere. Yet we do not feel that we are keeping pace with the growth and development of motor traffic nor with the possibilities for the development of the city into an area of decent-ralized dwelling facilities, which, of course, is the humanitarian phase of the gift made the world by motor car progress.

Wide Roads Necessary.

"The Detroit area could not exist in its present state of prosperity if its roads were twenty foot pavements. Our area has a population of 1,800,000. What, then, must be the strangling effects of arteries of such widths in areas like Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, Chicago, Boston, and New York? After waiting for years, these areas are proceeding now, but the necessity for facilities is such that many expedients must be adopted.

"In our radial system of nineteen super-highways we have been working on 204 foot rights of way for years, and also for our 120 and 84 foot intermediate roads. Today we are getting dedications at the rate of a mile a week, and eventually all will be as planned.

"The important thing, however, is that we have not waited for complete rights of way before providing facilities required for today's traffic. We build 40 foot road where it is needed, and two 40 foot one-way arteries as we get the ground to proceed with. If we waited for full width of continuous rights of way we would be no further along than some of the other regional districts.

Fastest Traffic in U. S.

"As a result motor traffic in the Detroit area is faster than at any other locality in America. We have no speed laws in Michigan. The commonwealth recognizes the fact that high speed is not dangerous on wide highways, though any velocity of travel may be dangerous on narrow roads.

"Our wide road history goes back to Gov. Woodward and Gov. Cass, who laid out 200 foot roads for the city. The designer of Grand boulevard, which today is an indispensable inner belt, was James E. Reynolds. At the time he promoted the highway, far in the country he was referred to by the newspapers as 'Jamesereynolds' and treated as a joke. Today his memory and works are revered.

"Incidentally, every unit of the current road system in Wayne county is being planted with elms and maples. Already 250 miles of roads are bordered with trees, and every mile of new improvement includes the setting out of trees. Our road investment is about $48,000,000, and while it may be that the system can be tied by some community in the world, we feel certain that it can't be beaten."

New Automobile Tunnel Cuts Ferryboat Rates

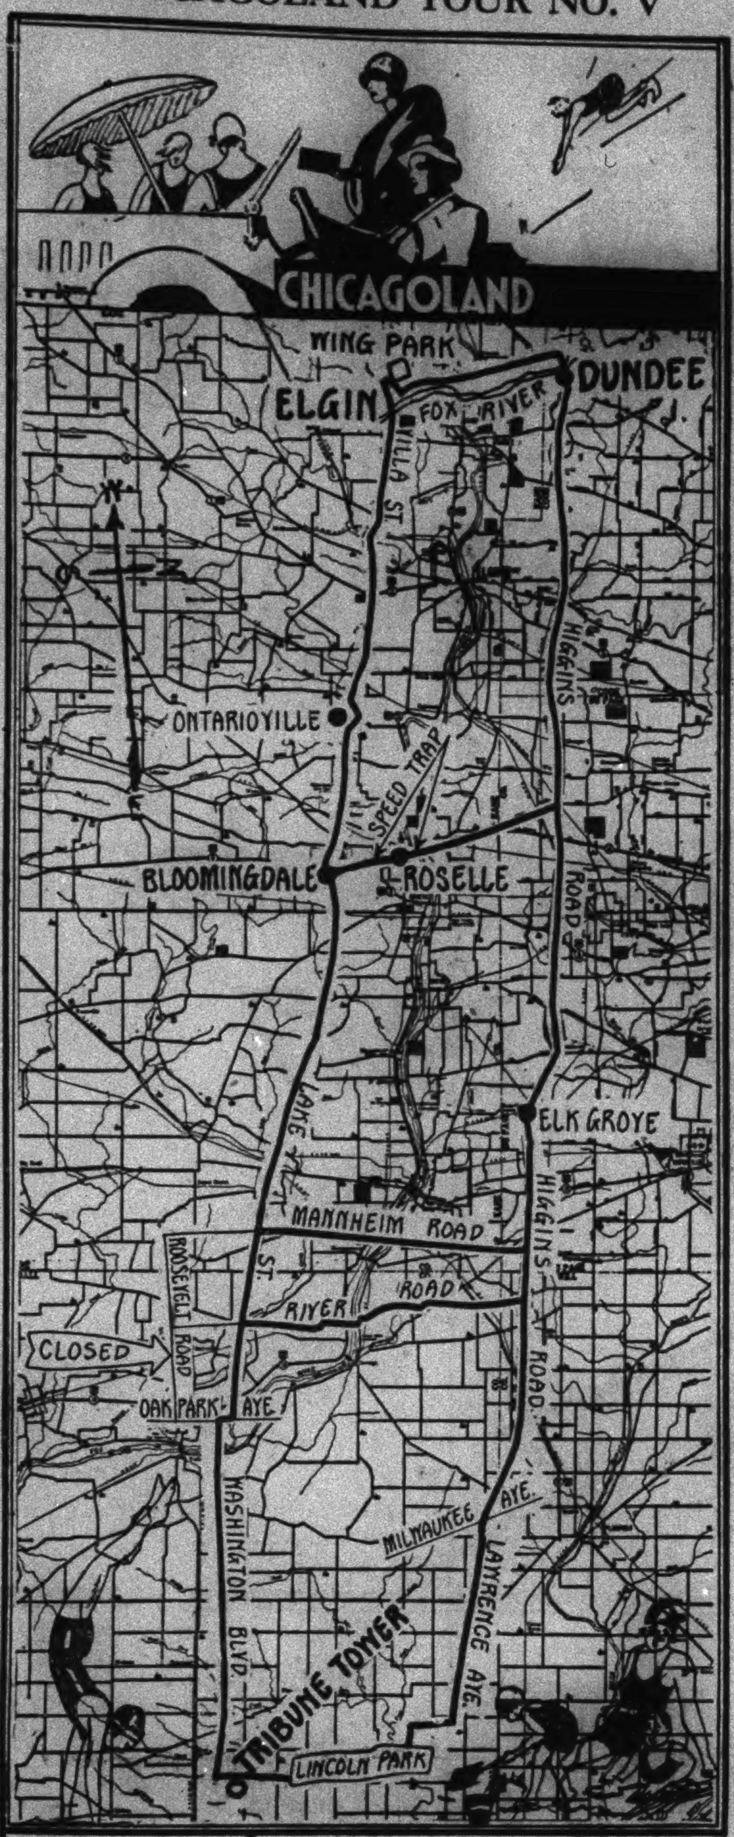
CHICAGOLAND TOUR NO. V



Today's suggestive Chicagoland tour is just a two hours' drive from Tribune Tower to Wing Park, Elgin, a distance of 40 miles and all paved. In the park is a fine swimming pool and a number of swings for the children. There are acres of beautiful shade trees under which you can enjoy your basket lunch. If the children would like to see the big brown bear, the elk, monkeys, eagles, etc., take them to Lord's park, which is on the east side of Elgin.

VOICE OF THE TRAFFIC

FOR WIDER RADIALS.

Peoria, Ill., July 7.—A reflection of thought on wider radial highways in seven directions from Chicago, is furnished in the following article from our Transcript a short time ago. The subject is so well considered that it should interest all who hope for adequate highway facilities. It follows:

"Chicago Motor club activities suggest that Peoria might find in that organization a capable ally in a campaign to construct a superhighway from Chicago to this city via the Illinois river. For the present, the Chicago Motor club seems to be interested chiefly or solely in 40-foot roadways within a radius of 100 miles of Chicago. There are special reasons, however, for a 200-foot superhighway between Chicago and Peoria, with room for speedways and local lanes in both directions. Such a plan has been earnestly advocated by Col. Robert R. McCormick, editor of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE, who two years ago told a group of local business men that with little effort Perioa could be made "the Atlantic City of Illinois," and that with a superhighway connecting Chicago and Peoria, thousands of motorists would take the scenic route to this city.

"Col. McCormick doubtless was looking a little ahead of the average motorist in projecting a 200 foot highway through the state, yet with the development of trucking and the handling of a vast tonnage of building and other supplies by motor, the 40 foot roadway may soon become as inadequate as are the 18 foot and 20 foot roadways today.

"In any case, Peoria should cut in on the proposal to extend the 40 foot Joliet route to this city. Through the influence of the Chicago Motor club and kindred organizations, traffic out of Chicago undoubtedly will be encouraged to take 40 foot highways in preference to narrow roads. Indeed, such encouragement would be scarcely necessary as motorists naturally seek wide highways. Although many Peorians stand ready to argue that Rockford has no chance to lead the downstate municipal league, it will be conceded that with a 40 foot roadway to Chicago, via Lake street highway, Rockford would have a distinct advantage over Peoria.

"Northern Illinois counties are already hopped up over wider highways. Kane, Du Page, De Kalb, Kendall, Will, and Lake counties are coöperating with Cook in road improvement. The vast population of Chicago is demanding wider pavements and is getting them. Soon there will be a demand for wider highways to Springfield. Unless Peoria acts quickly and lays down a barrage of publicity in favor of the river route, a superhighway will be constructed to Springfield via Bloomington, which is almost on a direct line between Chicago and the state capital.

"The superhighway is developing in all parts of the county. Under modern traffic conditions, the 20 foot roadway is already obsolete. Motorists find neither pleasure nor profit in risking their lives, and property while bucking trucks and busses on narrow pavements.

"The Illinois river is one of the great scenic assets of Illinois. Peoria is the only sizeable city abutting it. We are already on the air map. In time, we shall become the barge distributing center of Chicago. It is therefore important that we shall be on a superhighway connecting first with Chicago and later with Springfield and St. Louis.

"No city is any greater than its facilities for moving persons and freight. We may depend on it that Rockford will soon have a 40 foot roadway into Chicago. It is therefore up to Peoria to 'sell' the Chicago-Peoria superhighway to Chicago, intervening communities, and the state government." D. B. M.

INDIANA INTERESTED.

Laporte, Ind., June 26.—Recommendation and advocacy of the widened radial highways should and no doubt will receive the support of all communities in what is designated as Chicagoland. Laporte has supported the movement for the greater Chicago district.

There should be another artery into Chicago from northern Indiana besides the congested Dunes. There should be more general use of the Lincoln highway. Another approach to Indiana from Chicago would undoubtedly bring the stretch of Lincolnway through northern Indiana into greater use.

You may be interested to learn that we are striving to secure another roadway from Michigan to go through northern Indiana so as to handle travel to and from Chicago. Such a highway branching off from New Buffalo west will relieve the travel now going through that section of the dunes that acts as the neck of a bottle between Gary and Michigan City. Lincolnway between Dyer and South Bend is not being traveled as extensively as in years gone by due to trafsively as in years gone by, due to traffic going through Indianapolis. It would seem to the interests of Chicago and northern Indiana that further use be made of Lincoln highway.

OTTAWA JOINS UP.

Ottawa, Ill., June 25.—In regard to the committee on the proposed radical road widening project; be advised that B. S. Jordan, as chairman of our chamber of commerce road committee, has included this item in his program and will be very glad to work with all the agencies interested in this movement. We have taken the matter up with the Peoria association of commerce and will be glad to keep abreast of developments in and around Chicago.

NEW MODELS ARE PLANNED BY MANY MANUFACTURERS

Summer Demand for Cars Beats Expectations.

Detroit, Mich., July 7.—[Special.]—Midsummer demand for cars continues to be considerably ahead of what manufacturers and dealers expected it would be, considering the fact that many new models are to be announced before the real fall campaign is opened. The importance of new models as a means of stimulating the automobile industry cannot be considered lightly or be underestimated. New models mean increased sales, a fact that the trade has long since learned, but there are many problems to be faced whenever the changes in models are made. One of them, and the principal one, is the disposition of earlier models by dealers who may be over stocked.

This problem, to a great degree, is still unsolved, but is worked out by the various manufacturers and dealers in their own ways. It is not customary for producers to announce new lines until cars are obtainable by the public. But changes have to be made regardless of the fact that purchasers who have recently bought the of models will feel that their cars will depreciate substantially as soon as the new model is brought out. This, of course, is a fact, an unfortunate one and one hard to eliminate. Style may be affected but not mechanical qualities, but the buying public is loath to sacrifice the former for mechanical perfection. As a matter of fact, there is probably but little to gain in purchasing a new car each year, while there is much lost in the unused mileage that is discarded in the old model

Stand Up Five Years.

But regardless of this fact, a large percentage of automobile owners will continue to replace their cars yearly, and a still greater number who will make replacements every two years, notwithstanding the well known fact that present day cars are built to "stand up" for at least five years, especially if they are not abused by their owners.

Present indications are that manufacturers who will make new models will get them on the market at the earliest possible moment, and at the present time several announcements are expected to be made in the near future. Competition is gradually tightening in every price field, and when the new lines are first introduced by one producer, others follow in rapid successison.

New Standards Proposed.

It is a noticeable fact that cars are more sturdy, better equipped and better to look at than ever before, while the price trend continues downward, and it is the engineers' problem to build better cars for less money.

At the summer meeting last week of the Society of Automotive Engineers, forty new automotive standards were proposed. Of most popular interest were the proposed standardization of 18 balloon tire and rim sizes to greatly reduce the existing number. The engineers also condemned as antiquated and unreasonable the demand of various states for the installation of two separate brake mechanisms on automobiles, despite the presence of four wheel brakes. It was this requirement that delayed Ford in the mass-production of his new Model A and forced him to make a decided change in the brake system of the car before it could be sold in some of the states.

Motorists of this country last year footed a large operation and maintenance bill, in fact it totaled approximately five and a half billion of dollars. The average spent by each motorist was $229, which amount did not figure depreciation into account. According to government statistics the average life of a passenger car is seven years, but a large percentage of them die much earlier. The general average cost of operating an automobile is shown to be $365 per year, or just $1 per day.

Average U. S. Motorist Buys 482 Gals. of Gas

Last year saw the consumption of more than 10,500,000,000 gallons of gas, valued at more than $2,500,000,000. That averages 428 gallons for every motorist, and he spent about $120 to get it.

NO COPPER TO GUIDE THEM

No alteration of the traffic confusion at Lake Shore drive, the outer drive, and Sheridan road has been made, though two heavy streams of traffic are thrown against each other every morning and evening, with the problem of getting across left to individual drivers. There are many narrow escapes, for frequently two determined drivers are pitted against each other and cars are jockeyed and jumped about like game cocks, to the amusement or frenzy of other car occupants.

BUSINESS MUST CATER TO MOTOR, SPECIALIST SAYS

Neglect of Facilities May Alter Central Districts.

The radical changes in business organization which are taking place in every form of American business life are having a profound effect on the use of real estate, according to David Whitcomb of Seattle, speaking before the National Association of Building Owners and Managers at St. Louis recently.

Accessibility, he said, is the most important factor in business centers.

"It means far more than preventing the cutting off of existing access. It includes arterial highways, downtown garages, traffic regulations and enforcement. It involves adequate sidewalks, automobile facilities, faster surface cars, and rapid transit.

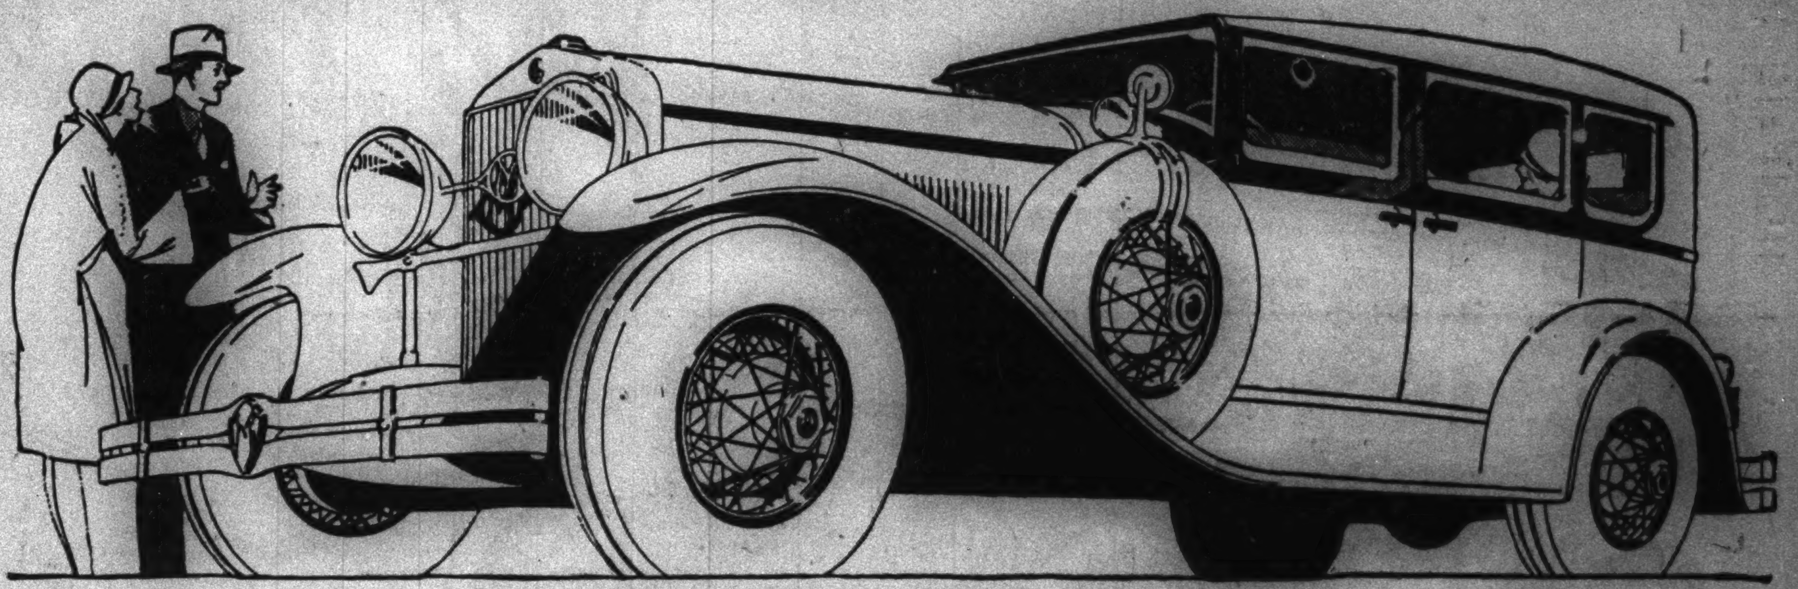
"It may mean subways and elevated railroads and separation of street grades. It means city planning, not done to detour nuisance traffic out of our central business district, but to provide easiest access to the district from every part of the city. This requires public action.

"The most revolutionary factor in urban transportation today is the automobile. Dire prophecies have been made as to its powers for good and for ill. As it affects business districts today it can be either a help or a detriment, according to the provisions made for it.

"Provide no attractive arteries for its use, rely on curbstone parking for its storage, and its owner can easily be induced to transact his business in a new and more hospitable district.

"On the other hand, provide attractive, high speed, convenient arterial highways with grade separation and proper traffic control and a live stream of business will continue to flow to your district.

"Recognize the needs of expanding business and supply them a little ahead of their becoming serious."



ANNOUNCING THE NEW

1929 MOON-Aerotype

THE MOST DARING LINE IN YEARS

WITH AMERICA'S FIRST SELF-LUBRICATING CHASSIS (NO PLUNGER)

By STANLEY MOON

HERE'S the most daring, most different, most radical car in years, crammed with new ideas, packed with new power. It's the new Moon-Aerotype for 1929 creating a new class, and distinctly a new style. ¶ Come, see this great car today. And expect to be surprised, for Aerotype is the foremost all-new feature automobile of the moment. ¶ Come in and have America's first Self-lubricating Chassis explained—not a "one-shot" system, not even a "two-shot"—the Aerotype lubricates itself automatically. Now, any car without this feature is simply out of style, out of date. ¶ See the New Aerotype French Bodies fresh from the studio of the reigning Paris designer; see the beautiful New "Ile de France" Interiors; see the New Bulged Belgian-type Fenders of heavy steel—one Aerotype fender alone costs as much as an entire set on the average car. ¶ Then get the facts at the wheel. See what the 6-72 and 8-80 do on the hills. Note the pull of the real High Compression. Not until you drive one, will you realize that Aerotype brings something brand new in automobile performance. In truth, it brings an adaptation of the highest development in aircraft practice, an original concept that required over two years for Aerotype engineers to perfect.

JULY marks the production of the two-millionth automobile by Willys-Overland. This event happily coincides with the culmination of the greatest 6 months in the company's 20-year history.

Production during the half-year just completed greatly exceeded the entire output of 1927. This unit volume now makes Willys-Overland the industry's third largest producer.

The reasons are plain:—

In the 4-cylinder Whippet the public is getting a light car value absolutely without parallel. Roomy, stylish and beautiful bodies; a dependable engine of tremendous power; BIG 4-wheel brakes; silent timing chain; full force-feed lubrication, and many other features offered only in much higher-priced cars.

The new Whippet Six is the world's lowest priced 6-cylinder car . . . and its surpassing quality is a matter of common knowledge. So true is this, that demand has always exceeded production.

Its extra powerful engine is equipped with 7-bearing crankshaft, Invar-strut pistons, and silent timing chain. Its liveliness and speed capacity are a revelation to owners. Its dependable 4-wheel brakes provide the necessary safety in modern traffic.

The Willys-Knight Standard Six offers the exclusive advantages of the patented Willys-Knight double-sleeve-valve engine at the lowest price in history. The Willys-Knight Special Six and the Willys-Knight Great Six complete this masterly line of highest quality motor cars offering features and advantages enthusiastically praised by more than 325,000 Willys-Knight owners.

Rosenwald Plans Model Flats for Colored Chicagoans

PINEAPPLES AND PISTOLS BREAK REALTY VALUES

Peaceful Folk Quit Gangster Areas.

BY PHILIP HAMPSON.

GEORGE C. OLCOTT.

Political hoodlums who go after votes with pistols, bootleggers who stifle competition and give authority to sales talk with pineapples and machine guns, and other lawless elements levy a heavy toll on property owners in the localities in which they operate by driving away respectable people, thereby causing realty values to drop, according to a statement issued by George C. Olcott in connection with the publication of Olcott's Land Values Blue Book of Chicago for 1928, just off the press.

Decreases in property values far offset the political favors dispensed by petty politicians and baskets of foods and other doles given by racketeers at holiday seasons to earn for themselves the designation of being "regular guys." Peaceable citizens leave the districts haunted by this type of gentry for "more quiet sectors," as they were saying some ten years back over France way.

And not only do these districts suffer losses of residents and small tradesmen, but industries, particularly those employing female help, are loath to be located in them because of the frequent trouble.

Values Up to $100,000,000.

This much for the relation of crime to the city's real estate, which, taking Chicago as a whole, does not cut such an important figure. And now for the more important, if less spectacular, information contained in Mr. Olcott's statement.

Land in the city is given an estimated total valuation of $3,538,750,000, an increase of $100,000,000 over last year.

As for these land values, which a couple of years back were moving upward at a dizzy pace, during the last twelve months they have shown a tendency to occupy a more logical position.

The same easy money which helped the recent bull stock market has had its effect in real estate. For easy money plus mounting realty values caused property owners to build to meet assessments and high taxes. The result was that some districts were over built and in these localities bankers are withholding funds for further operations until the situation is eased.

Apartments Replace Homes.

Some old single family residential sections of the city, such as Rogers Park, Edgewater, Lake View and Hyde Park, are fast being built up with tall apartments and hotels, but they are too large to see the disappearance of all the fine old residences standing in them for many years to come.

Mr. Olcott finds that rents are about the same in all parts of the city; in fact flats far west get as good prices as those in the shore sections.

He finds the price per foot for land zoned for tall residential buildings averages from $750 to $1,000; for three story apartments having extra good transportation facilities from $400 to $500; and for ordinary districts $200 to $300.

Loop Tends North.

We shall glance over Mr. Olcott's reviews of certain specific districts. In the downtown section he finds that whereas a few years ago building operations and values tended south from Madison street the trend is now northward due to the Michigan avenue and Wacker drive improvements. The most notable advances have been in the northwest part of the business district in erstwhile low priced street sections. Prices in the North Michigan avenue section average ten per cent over last quotation. Major improvements continue.

Along the north suburbs rises in shore holdings caused activity westward. In Evanston few homes were built in the older sections but the west found activity. Niles Center, though it has not reached the position promised for it, has excellent prospects of becoming a fast building and growing section, Mr. Olcott finds.

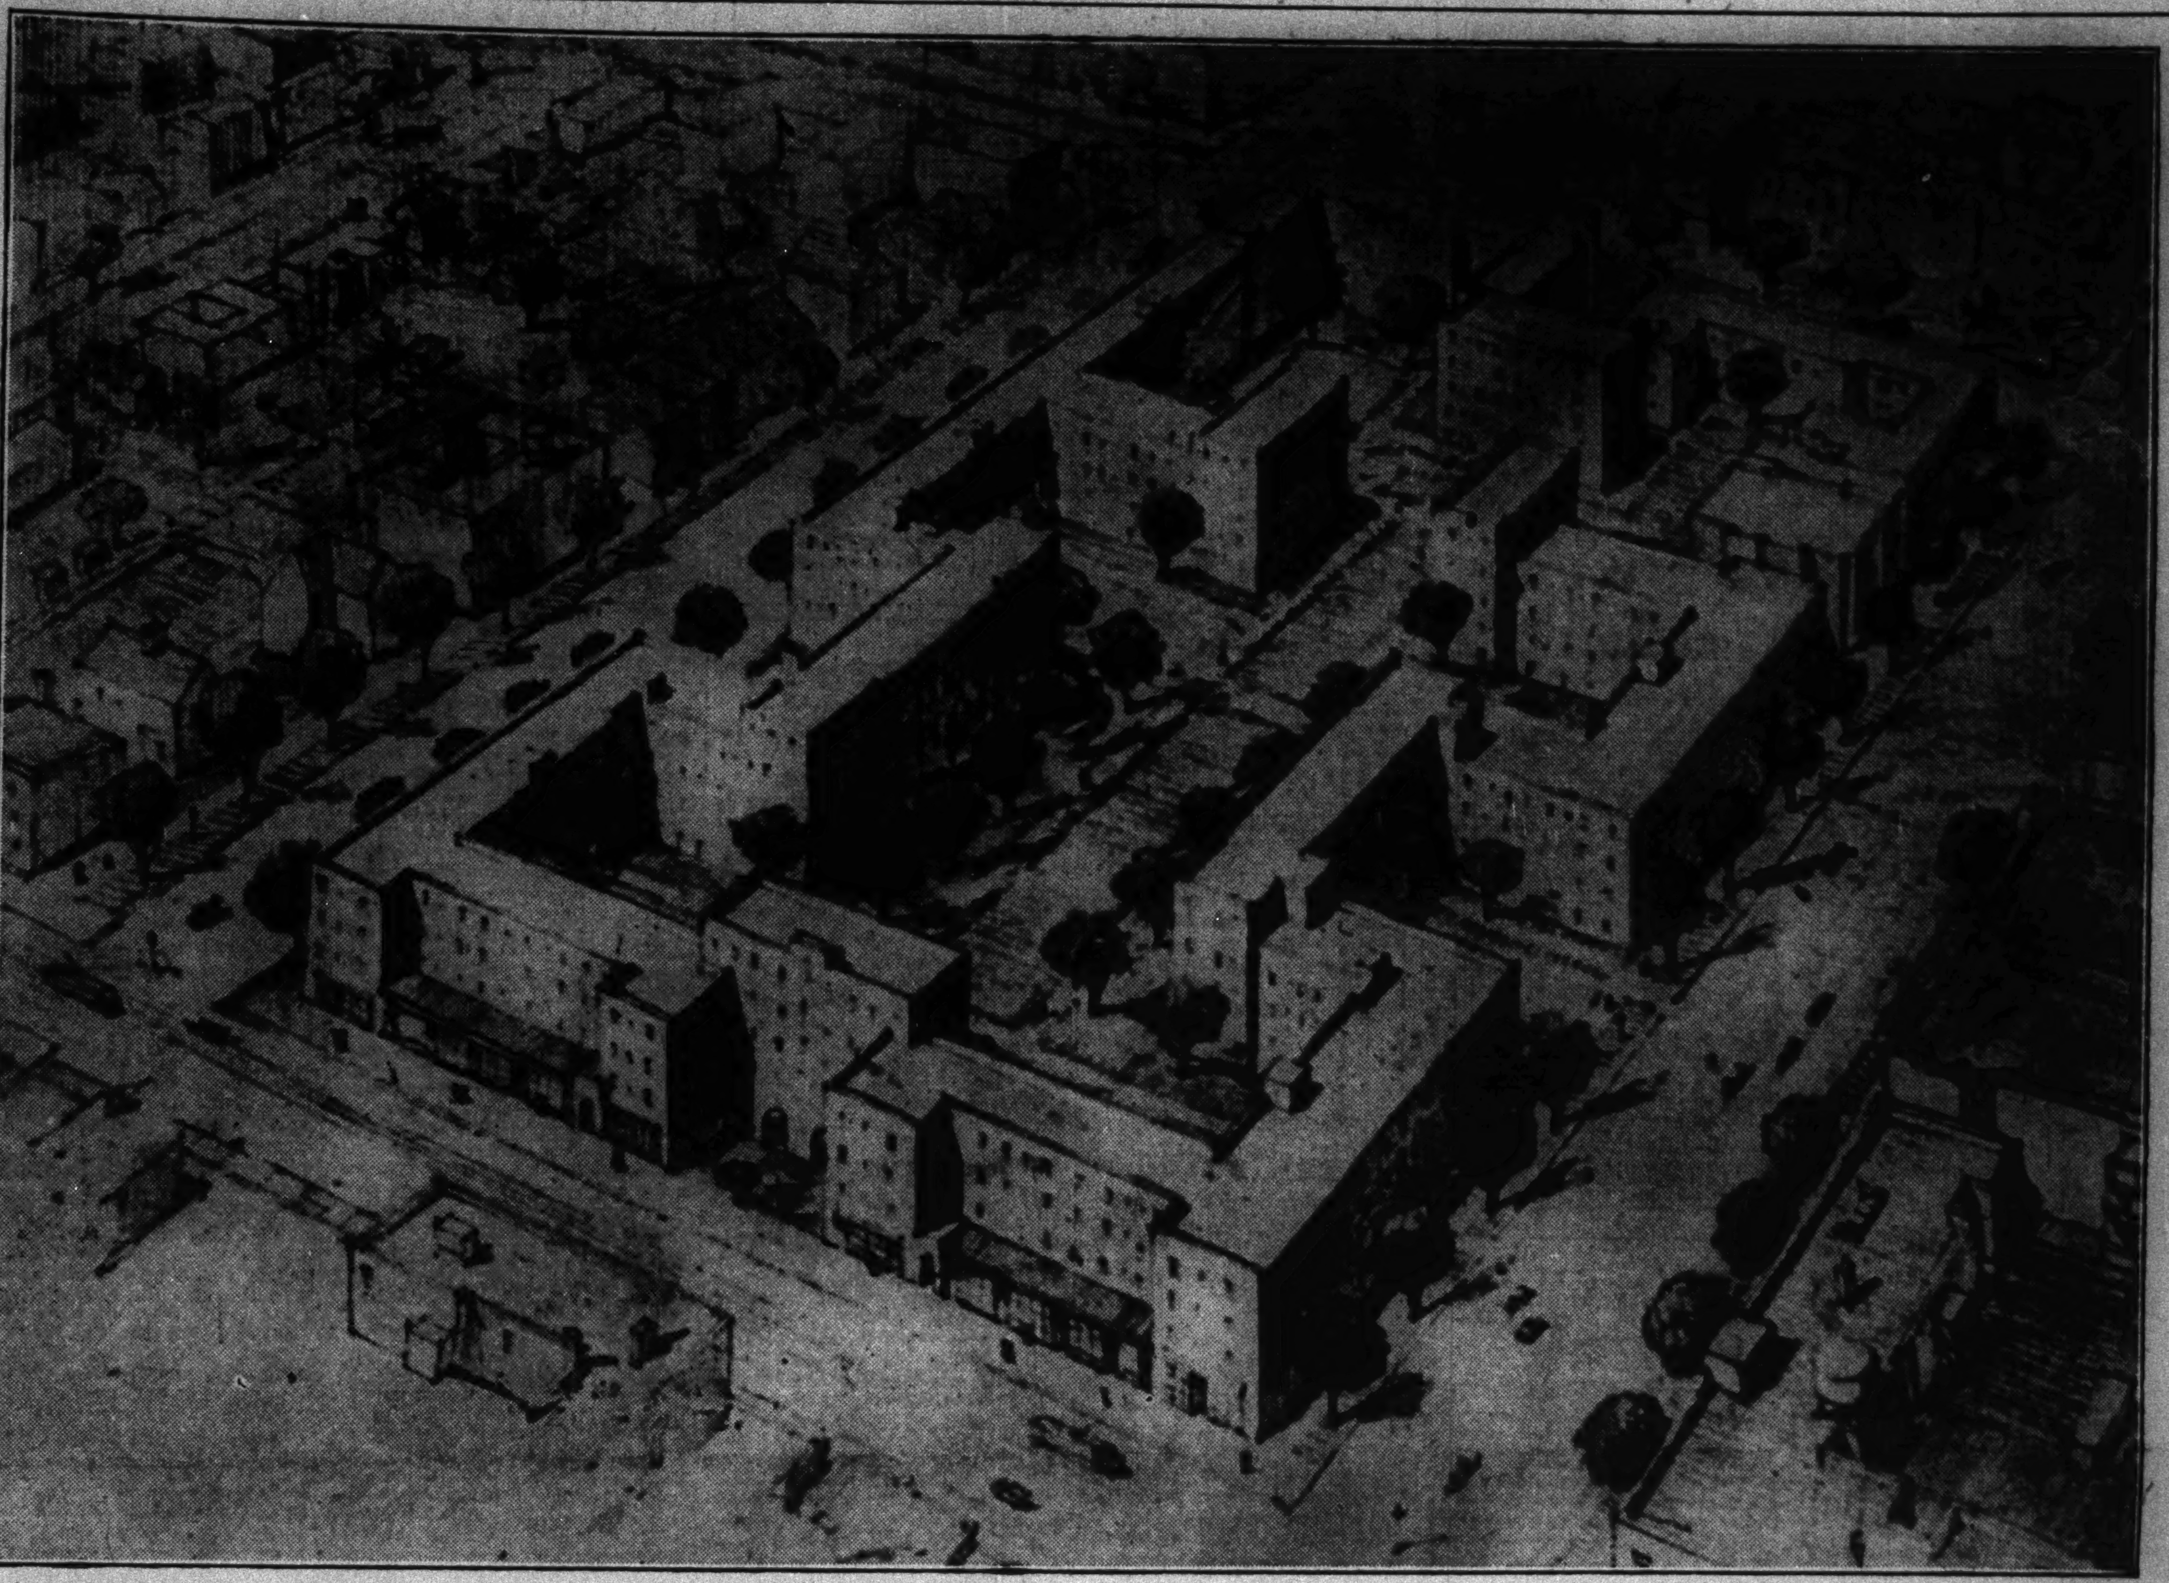
Rogers Park is gradually changing from a one family to a kitchenette apartment and hotel neighborhood. Edgewater finds many tall buildings being erected east of the elevated, with owners of riparian rights profiting considerably. Albany Park is practically filled up, with the principal movement in business property.

South Side Advances.

Uptown is going ahead in a business way, fast warranting the claim it is the best business section outside the loop, Mr. Olcott says. The Lincoln park district east of Broadway and north of the park holds the attention of big builders and promises to be the most densely populated part of the city.

The 39th and Cottage Grove avenue district is taking on new life with the world's fair in the offing. In Hyde Park values have risen to high peaks with mammoth hotel and apartment projects under way and announced. And 63d and Halsted, a strictly business district, continues to [illegible]

BIG HOUSING PROJECT FOR 400 FAMILIES



The above picture is a preliminary study of the $2,500,000 housing project for 400 families of Chicago's colored population to be erected in the block bounded by South Michigan avenue, South Wabash avenue, 46th and 47th streets. The architects are Eugene H. Klaber and Ernest A. Grunsfeld Jr., aided by George C. Nimmons of Nimmons, Carr & Wright, all of Chicago. No attempt was made in the sketch to include architectural treatment, the bare outlines of the huge building being shown merely to depict the general shape of the structure and its layout. Details are given in the adjoining column.

WILL COVER AN ENTIRE BLOCK ON BOUL MICH

Investments Will Be $2,500,000.

BY AL CHASE.
[Real Estate Editor.]

JULIUS ROSENWALD.
[Blank & Stoller Photo.]

Four hundred families of Chicago's ever growing colored population are to be provided by Julius Rosenwald, chairman of the board of directors of Sears, Roebuck & Co., with what is believed will be one of the finest and best planned model apartment buildings in the world. It will represent a total investment of $2,500,000 and will cover an entire city block bounded by South Michigan avenue, South Wabash avenue, 47th and 46th streets. It's to be called the Michigan Boulevard Gardens.

Details of this important housing project were made public yesterday by E. E. Brown, vice president of the First National bank, chairman of the committee in charge. He states that it will be a four and five story fireproof building erected around a large central garden courtyard of nearly three acres, with every room in the 400 apartments having outside light and air. Most of the bedrooms will have what even many of our most expensive skyscraper flats lack, cross ventilation.

This pretentious project will be the second largest of its kind in the world, being only surpassed by the Paul Lawrence Dunbar apartments for colored residents in the Harlem district of New York City, erected by John D. Rockefeller Jr.

Planned by Chicagoans.

The Michigan Boulevard Gardens are being planned by Eugene H. Klaber and Ernest A. Grunsfeld Jr., Chicago architects, with the aid of George C. Nimmons of the local architectural firm of Nimmons, Carr & Wright, who is chairman of the building committee. Henry Wright and associates of New York, international authorities on housing, are acting as consultants.

The four hundred apartments will range in size from three to five rooms, all with bath. More than half will be four room suites. Owing to the size and attractiveness of the proposed garden in the center of the block, which is to be elaborately landscaped, apartments overlooking it will in many respects be more desirable than those facing the streets. They will be away from the noise, dust and odors of the heavy motor traffic prevailing on those thoroughfares.

The building will be of face brick on all walls so that it will be as attractive architecturally from the garden quadrangle as from the boulevard or other streets. Another point which might be copied by some of our apartment house builders to advantage, is the attention paid by the architects to the rear wall and roof treatment. There'll be no unsightly straggling back stairs to mar the attractiveness of the walls overlooking the garden. Neither will there be the usual galaxy of penthouses, tanks, etc., scattered over the roof. These all will be hidden.

Not a Charitable Enterprise.

"Mr. Rosenwald definitely objects to this being considered a charitable enterprise," said Mr. Brown. "The apartments are to be rented at a price to yield at least six per cent on the investment and at the same time provide improved living conditions at a considerable saving in rents.

"The aim is to prove that better homes than they now can afford, may be had by families of limited means with a fair return to the owner. This experiment, Mr. Rosenwald believes, will demonstrate that large scale projects can be profitably undertaken in various sections of Chicago for any group."

This means, it is understood, that if this project is successful, as Mr. Rosenwald believes, it will be followed by others similar in scope and size to care for other densely populated districts of Chicago.

Says Project Is Needed.

"The Michigan boulevard site was selected," said Mr. Brown, "chiefly because the need for housing among Negroes is more pressing than in any other section of the population. At present, a large proportion of the colored residents of Chicago is living in apartments formerly occupied by whites. Most of these flats are too large and too expensive to be occupied by only one or even two families. The result has been overcrowding."

The directors in charge of the project are: E. E. Brown, Dr. Otho F. Ball, E. J. Buffington, F. Bruce Johnstone, B. F. Lindheimer, George C. Nimmons, George Richardson, Donald Riley, Julius Rosenwald, Hugo Sonnenschein, Lloyd Steere, Paul Steinbrecher, Alfred K. Stern, Lawrence Stern, Frank Sulzberger, Charles H. Swift, and Willoughby G. Walling.

The purchase of the site was negotiated by Joseph K. Brittain, former president of the Chicago Real Estate board. The attorneys were Sonnenschein, Berkson, Lautmann & Levinson.

Work is expected to start within a few months with the expectation of having it ready for tenants by the spring of 1929.

Novel Court for Evanston Flat Building

Construction is to start shortly on another de luxe apartment building in Evanston—the one for today being located at the southwest corner of Noyes street and Sherman avenue. It's to contain forty-nine flats of four, five, and six rooms, with some of the apartments having two bathrooms.

This building, designed by Architects Cable & Spitz, will be of the court type and will occupy a site 165 by 200 feet. Like many other apartment structures now under construction, it will be of English architecture.

The exterior will be of face brick, rubble, half timber and slate. Copper downspouts will lead into old fashioned rain barrels, but we doubt whether any of the water from the barrels will be used for washing the hair of the wives in the building in this sooty age.

As for the court, it will be seventy-five feet wide. It will contain a sunken garden, pools, miniature bridges, and a putting green for tenants whose minds turn to golf.

The ground floor will contain large recreation, billiard and service rooms. All the apartments will have their bathrooms and kitchens finished in colored tile.

The owner of the structure is the Dolin Building corporation. It is stated the investment will be $555,000 for land and building. Completion will be in January.

PLAN $600,000 STORE BUILDING FOR WAUKEGAN

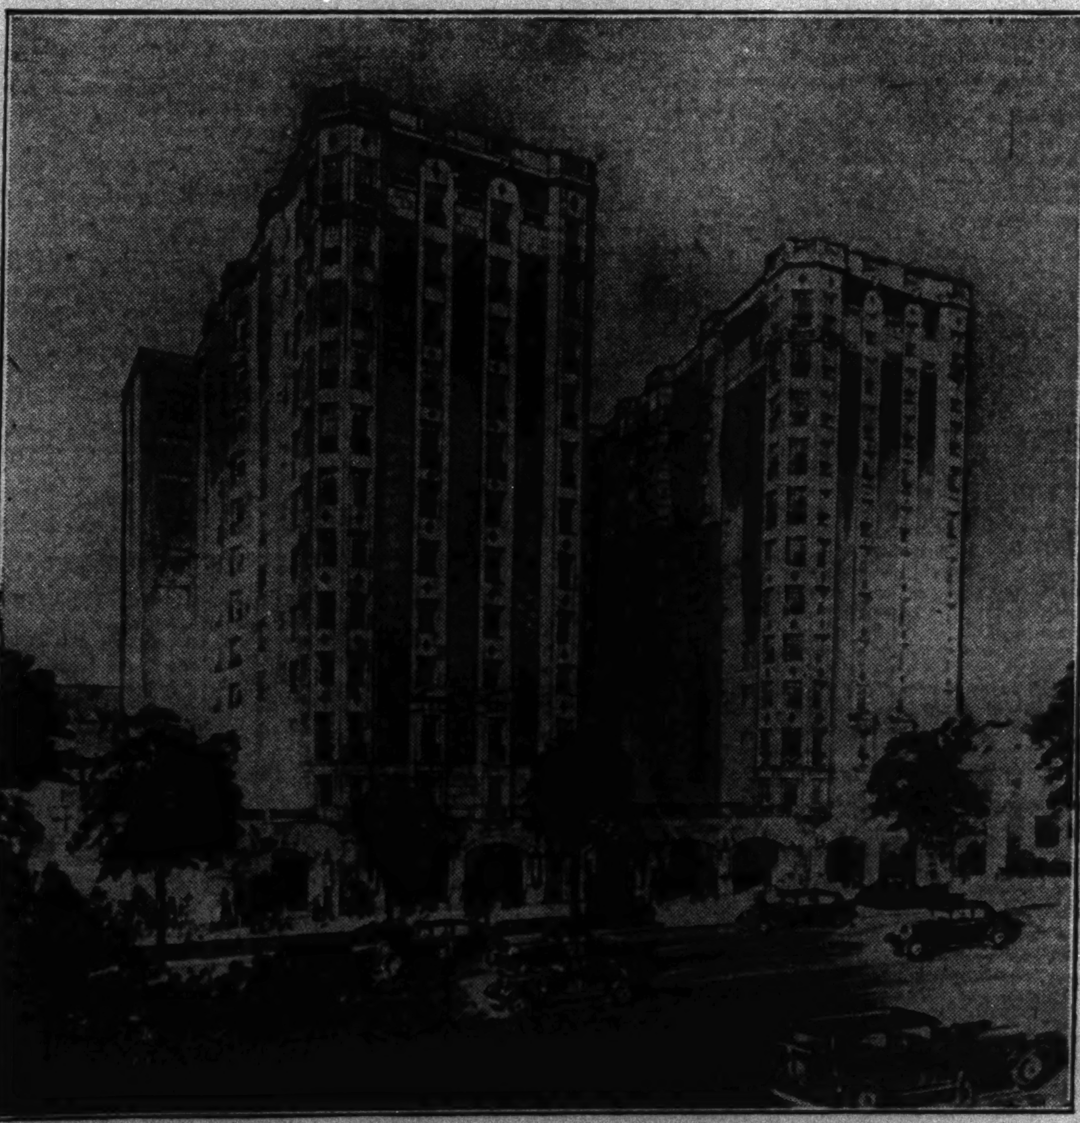
Oman & Lilienthal, Chicago architects, have designed a $600,000 five story building for Waukegan and work is scheduled to start at once. It will house the Rubin department store and will be erected at 15-19 South Genesee street, adjoining the Schwartz furniture store. It will have a seventy foot frontage and a depth of 138 feet, with provision for future development of the rear lot.

The design is modern with a green, gray and gold color scheme. The building will be flood lighted. An island type of show window construction will be used, running back approximately twenty-six feet and providing 194 feet of frontage.

The architects, who designed the Eastgate and St. Clair hotels in Chicago, state that the new Waukegan department store will be completed about January 1, 1929.

RISING AT 5240 SHERIDAN ROAD



Huszagh & Hill designed the above building, which is under construction at 5240 Sheridan road, opposite the Saddle and Cycle club. A feature will be an attractive roof treatment. The structure will contain 220 apartments. Stanley Green drew this picture.

Owners to Beautify Roof of Tall Edgewater Flats

A bit of commendation seems to be in order for the builders of Edgewater's latest skyscraper apartments. For with an announcement that work has started on a twelve story structure at 5240 Sheridan road comes a promise that all tanks, elevator machinery and other paraphernalia usually scattered about the top of a structure in unsightly penthouses will be contained in decorative inclosures harmonizing architecturally with the building.

This fits in with the general trend toward making the city's newer buildings attractive from all aspects and in this day of air travel roof treatment is occupying an important place in the minds of designers.

Huszagh & Hill drew the plans for the structure, which is to be of French architecture of the period when Napoleon Bonaparte was having things his way. It will be of red pressed brick, with a considerable amount of limestone trim. Green granite inserts and lead applique ornament will further enhance the decorative effects.

The structure is to represent an investment of $2,500,000 it is stated. It will be of the court type, occupying a lot 150x150 feet directly across from the Saddle and Cycle club and the south annex of the Edgewater Beach hotel.

On the ground floor there is to be an elaborate lobby conforming in design with the architecture of the structure. This will include a main promenade, or gallery, a lobby proper forty feet square and two side lounges. All will be decorated in the period of the empire. A black and gold color scheme will be had through the use of ebony marble and bronze ornamentation.

Besides the lobby the ground floor will have six large shops.

The upper floors will be divided into 220 apartments of two, three, four and five rooms each. Many of the living rooms will have fireplaces. All the bathrooms will be finished in colored tile and of course the apartments will have the latest in equipment.

A feature of the structure will be a solarium on the roof facing toward the lake. This chamber is to have large plate glass picture windows overlooking Sheridan road.

The owner is the 5240 Sheridan Road Building corporation, of which Milton S. Plotke is president. Incidentally it was in this district that Mr. Plotke began his building operations years ago with two and three flat structures. Financing is by the Huszagh-Musson company. Completion is scheduled for next May.

AUTO FIRM TO HAVE $300,000 WEST SIDE STORE

Community Motors, Inc., purchased from Belle I. Magee 76x128 feet of vacant at the southwest corner of Madison street and Lavergne avenue, on which they will start construction shortly on a two story building to contain salesrooms and a service station. L. E. Russell designed the structure, which is to be of Indiana stone and pressed brick. The design will be similar to other buildings owned by the company. Holton, Seelye & Co. are builders. The investment will be about $300,000 and completion is expected by late fall. A. H. Gruetzmacher of the E. E. Baldwin Agency and Loan corporation was broker.

Philadelphia Firm Leases Shop at 132 East Delaware

Ross & Brown report that the ground floor of the 900 Michigan Avenue North Building is now completely rented, the last lease having been taken by Mrs. Franklin, Inc., of Philadelphia on the store at 132 East Delaware place. The Quaker City firm, which deals in women's town and country gowns, has taken a five year lease and expects to open Nov. 1. Herbert McLaughlin of Ross & Browne was broker.

40 PER CENT OF FLATS AT 5000 EAST END SOLD

Carroll, Schendorf & Boenicke announce that forty per cent of the apartments in the twenty-story "co-op" at 5000 East End avenue have been sold. Recent purchases in the structure are B. H. Drennan; Ralph Kennedy, secretary and treasurer Triangle Automobile company; H. E. Brundage, electrical engineer; A. H. Parks, electrical engineer; Mrs. S. E. Baumgardner; Mrs. Mary B. Sutton; V. D. Simons, industrial engineer; H. A. Washburn, president Messinger Paper company, and Guy J. Bunting, vice president Illinois Central railway.

CABINET FIRM ACQUIRES SITE FOR ADDITION

The Mansfield Cabinet company of 983 Cicero avenue has purchased 175 feet of vacant at the northeast corner of Cicero from Gios and Gios for an undisclosed consideration. The purchasers will erect a large addition to their factory. Catino Brothers and Carl A. Gundersen were brokers. Richard Hummer was attorney for the buyer.

REPORT LEASES IN SHOP SECTION OF PALMER HOUSE

M. D. Kirk of Ross & Browne reports the following firms as having taken shops in the arcade, second and third floors of the shop section of the Palmer house at State and Monroe: Hanisch & Yost, furriers, 3,000 square feet on the third floor; Yeschek, Inc., glassware, second floor; Brown-Robertson company of New York, prints and etchings, second floor; Dane Kremer, importer European peasant dresses and embroidery, arcade; Lea Traxler, infants' wear, third floor.

HIGHLAND PARK MAN PURCHASES 40 ACRE ESTATE

George W. Rossetter of Highland Park bought from J. F. Doyle of Libertyville a forty acre tract located on Old School road, four miles west of Lake Forest, for a reported $40,000. The land is situated on a ridge said to be the highest point between the Des Plaines river and the lake and lies about a half mile west of Mellody farm—the former Armour property—and a half mile east of the Insull holdings. Mr. Rossetter plans to have the property developed as an estate.

NEW AUTO FIRM RENTS BUILDING ON MOTOR ROW

Walter J. Felten, Inc., a company recently incorporated to handle the sale of De Soto automobiles, has leased from the Chicago Motor Car Company, Inc., the three story building at 2430-32 South Michigan avenue, containing approximately 25,000 square feet. The building, which is owned by Dr. Walter S. Barnes and Mrs. Lucille R. Bigelow, is being extensively remodeled. The De Soto car is a new automobile being manufactured by the Chrysler company. Sayers & Rainey were brokers.

HOME BUILDERS' DEPARTMENT

TWO BUNGALOWS OF GOOD DESIGN FOR NARROW LOT

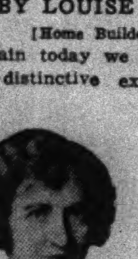
Architecture Is Varied, Floor Plans Same.

(Two exteriors of a five room home, adaptable to the same floor plan. Architect, J. T. Hetherington, First National Bank Building, Chicago.)

BY LOUISE BARGELT.

[Home Builders Editor.]

Again today we see more original and distinctive exterior renderings, both for the same floor plan of the typical five room bungalow. These are designed to appeal to the vast number of city home owners who are anxious for an attractive house on a narrow plot of ground; one which is as economical to build as possible and yet has in its exterior lines an artistic appearance.



LOUISE BARGELT.
[Hutchinson Photo.]

This floor plan, which is more or less a "stock floor" plan, possesses the distinct merit of economy and compactness. And yet the wall outlines, the window spacing, the roof pitch and shape are all deserving of interest.

It will be noted that the two houses have practically the same floor plan. There is fitness and charm to both of the roofs. Every house deserves a good roof. Just as no one woman can be called smartly dressed if her hat is shoddy and unbecoming, so no roof can be pleasing to look at if the material, the color, and the form are not correct.

Has Asphalt Shingles.

The English house has a roof of asphalt shingles. These are durable and fireproof, as they are made of felt saturated with asphalt. These shingles may be obtained in a great variety of colors.

Asbestos shingles cover the roof of the Brittany cottage. These, made of asbestos, rock fiber, and cement, under heavy pressure, are not unlike slate in appearance. They are absolutely fireproof, obtainable in attractive colorings, light in weight, and vastly enduring.

These two houses are not so dissimilar in style and spirit that they cannot be built side by side on the same street without striking any jarring note.

Material for Brittany House.

Materials and equipment for Brittany cottage:

Exterior walls—	Common brick, painted white.
Roof—	Asbestos shingles.
Basement walls and floor—	Concrete, painted white.
Heating—	Hot water, thermostatic control.
Kitchen—	Electric ventilating fan, electric refrigeration, breakfast folding unit, and built-in ironing board. Linoleum floor and painted walls.
Floors—	Oak.
Trim—	Gum.
Bathroom—	Linoleum floor, tile wainscoting, built-in tub, steel cabinet, pedestal lavatory, toilet of vitreous china.
Walls in living room and dining room—	Plastic paint allowing a finish of modified texture which can, when desired, be converted back again to the original smooth finish.
Entrance—	Wrought iron lantern and illuminated house number.
Landscaping—	Lily pool, garden hedge, foundation planting.

English House Similar.

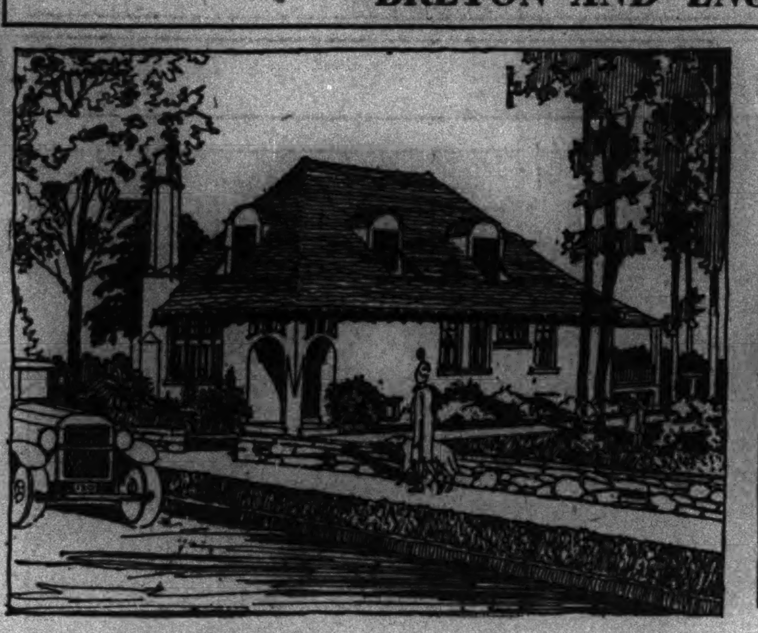
The materials and equipment for the English cottage are much the same, excepting that the roof is of asphalt shingles, the heating, hot air, the living room and dining room walls are papered and the exterior walls of face brick.

It should be observed that future development of the attic is possible through the employment of the steep roofs and the nicely placed dormers.

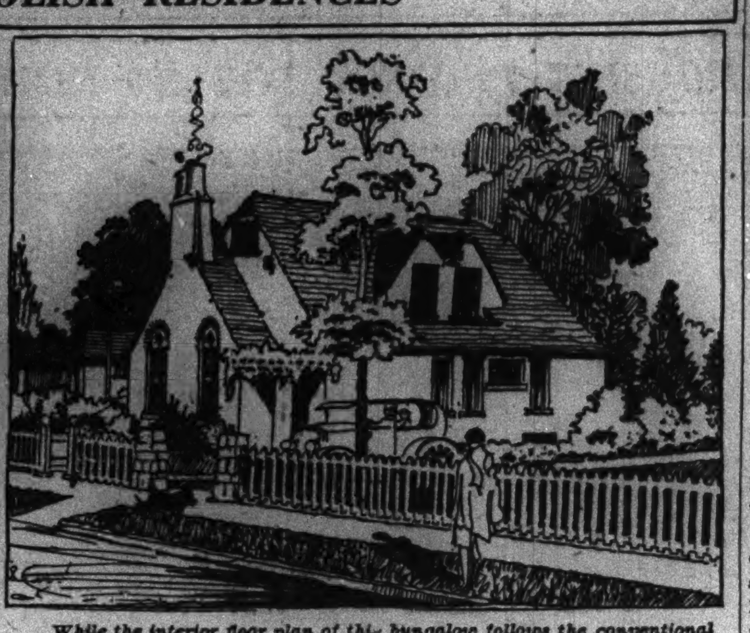
Attic Insulation Helps Make Home Cool in Summer

For summer coolness in your home, attic insulation acts much like a refrigerator. As a refrigerator is insulated that the heat may be kept out, so a house is insulated for the same reason. Besides this, the house, through insulation preparedness, is ready for winter occupancy, and the home owner is assured that a large degree of cold will be kept out when blizzard time comes.

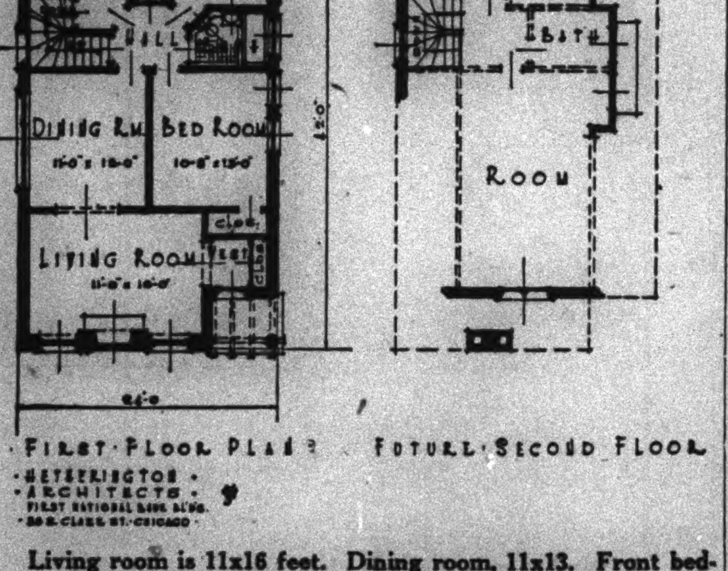
BRETON AND ENGLISH RESIDENCES



A Breton style home, differing from thousands of our so-called "stock bungalows" by its delightfully rendered exterior. Architect, J. T. Hetherington, First National Bank building, Chicago.



While the interior floor plan of this bungalow follows the conventional layout of our so-called "stock bungalows," its English exterior lifts it from the level of the commonplace. Architect, J. T. Hetherington, First National Bank building, Chicago.



Living room is 11x16 feet. Dining room, 11x13. Front bedroom, 10.8x13. Rear bedroom, 9x9.6. Kitchen, 9.6x8.6.

WHEN PLANNING HOME REMEMBER YARD PLAY AREA

Sand Piles, Slides Will Save Lawns.

BY HOMER GRANT.

It is not possible for all parents, even though they live in their own home, to afford a playroom just for the children. Present building prices are sometimes prohibitive, however, ideal such space provision may be.

But it is possible, in most cases, to include in one's landscaping scheme, some play space which belongs to the children alone. Every house has a lot to stand on, and some small part of this lot can be given over to the youngsters.

In many cities this time of year warnings are given out by the probation officers of the courts to keep a close watch over the children during vacation period.

And every parent knows that there is no surer way of keeping the little ones at home and off the streets than by providing them with a play yard "all their own." Children after all, need so little to amuse them. With half a chance they will amuse themselves, day in and out.

Ground of Own.

I heard a woman say lately, "We are not going to try to do anything with our grounds till the children get older. They run over everything and there is no use trying to have a nice lawn or flower beds or anything else."

Well, that certainly isn't a logical viewpoint. A lawn isn't half as much fun to play on from the child's point of view as a sand pile, or a flower bed doesn't offer the inducements for real sport that are found in a slide or a swing or a playhouse.

No reason really why the grownups should not have their pleasure from a velvety lawn and pretty flowers and the children find theirs in their own play space.

Naturally the space should be far enough away from the house to give the children a little sense of privacy and yet not so far away that the mother cannot keep a watchful eye on the players.

The equipmnet can be simple.

Sand and a Slide.

An eight foot slide is safe for children from three years up and provides for little cost an endless source of fun.

Enough sand may be purchased for a few dollars to last a summer, and, if it is enclosed with boards 6 to 12 inches high, it will last well and won't scatter all over the place. If the sand pile is out in the open where there is no shade, a roughly constructed board top some six or seven feet from the ground is a good shade precaution for the very hot days.

On a playhouse one can spend as much or as little as one wants. Elaborate ones may be purchased but simple ones may be made, sometimes by the older boys in the family, from some old lumber, a few nails and shingles and perhaps some discarded blinds for windows. It is amazing how much may be done with a little material and a little ingenuity.

In the old days there were trees to climb, wood sheds to play in, creeks to wade in. But so many of these old time joys have passed. The trees perhaps—in a new suburb—have just started to grow and must be treated carefully, indeed. The lawn is new and cannot stand trampling on. The garage has a car in it and is no place for a bunch of small boys to use hammer and saw.

Swing Is Enjoyed.

The swing with seats is another playtime feature always enjoyed. Especially if there are no trees large enough to support an old time rope and board swing.

A sand box can be easily converted on occasions into a table around which the children can sit and have those beloved tea parties which help to pass the summer afternoons when the weather is hot and the strenuous playing of the morning has proven a bit tiring to even the tireless youngsters.

There are also small tables with a covering umbrella, miniature affairs, in imitation of the "grownups'" mushroom umbrella and table effects.

And then there is the tent—a joy to all boys and not an unattractive addition to the garden and lawn area of the home either. There are khaki tents and tents in colors, but whatever their color they are a real delight to the children in the family.

A Period of Play.

Vacation is a period when play habits are indulged in all day long. Important habits, these, for while play is the most natural instinct in the world it should not be left to take care of itself entirely.

Every mother likes to know that her children are "somewhere close around" when they have all their time to themselves. There is no easier way of keeping them around, without worry or trouble on the mother's part, than by providing them with a place of their own to play in, and furnishing it with a few simple play devices.

Suggesting One Way to Decorate Breakfast Nook

One way of solving the problem of decorating the breakfast nook, which is separated from the kitchen by an arch or partial partition, is to decorate the walls with a gayly patterned paper and paint the woodwork a slightly deeper shade than that which is used in the kitchen. In this way some contrast is afforded and the character of the breakfast room is strengthened and given added vividness and life.

Lacquer Enamel Possible in Wide Range of Colors

Lacquer enamel can be obtained now in a range of colors which includes practically every tint and shade. This finishing material possesses the qualities of both enamel and lacquer, and when thinning is desirable turpentine may be used.

LOSSES TO RESIDENCE OWNERS FROM RUST RUNS TO MILLIONS

For years the losses from rust have amounted to millions of dollars a year. Many a home owner can attest the truth of this from his own personal experience in a small way. He remembers the bills he has paid for the replacement of corrodible piping, rusted screens, worn out gutters, and down spouts and hardware.

Now the trend of the times shows a tendency towards saving on these losses.

We find screens of bronze and brass piping throughout the house. Shingles are given a copper coating, hardware appears in simple patterns of brass and bronze, at least on the outside of entrance doors and decorations which are exposed at all seasons to the elements.

Home owners are figuring more and more on the basis of the ten year cost rather than the present cost. For that sort of buying is money in the pocket, whether one sells the home in a few years or lives in it indefinitely.

NEW TYPE LOCKS MAKE CASEMENT WINDOWS SAFE

By the installation of automatic locking hardware on casement windows the parents in the home are assured safety against accidents. Too often a child leans or pushes with unwise force against a sash and a dreadful accident results.

These automatic locking devices permit the adjustment of an open casement so that sufficient ventilation is allowed and yet the window can be relied upon not to open any further.

Answers to Questions on Home Owning

Stone Is Economical.

Dear Mrs. Bargelt: I have always wanted a home of stone, but am told that the price is much higher with a stone facing than other facings. Is the stone cutting process high?

H. G.

Answer — Limestone facing for homes is now economically within the reach of the owner of a moderate priced home. It may be used as a veneer over stud frame walls or over hollow tile or brick. This stone facing is supplied in sawed strips and then shipped. A stone mason or a bricklayer can break, joint and lay these strips on a wall. It is claimed that the total cost of a stone faced wall of the kind just described is not more than 5 or 6 per cent higher than when the walls are faced with other materials.

Try Sunshine Yellow.

Dear Mrs. Bargelt: I have a north bedroom and at present the paper is blue and the trim gray. The room has always been cheerless, as the sun seldom reaches it. What color would you advise to make it brighter and more livable?

S. E.

Answer: Your room, which you admit receives only the cold north light, is decorated with two cold colors. Try painting or papering your bedroom with some tint of sunshine yellow—a straw or a deep cream or a light tan or a pale yellow.

STUDY A ROOM BEFORE DECIDING UPON THE FINISH

In choosing the textural finish for the walls of one's new home there are many things to be considered, the size of the room, the location, the lighting, the furnishings, and the purpose of the room.

As a general rule it should be remembered that one can tint plastic paint a little lighter than the case would be if the finish were to be smooth and flat. This is desirable because of the fact that the plastic paint texture is such as to break up the light. Therefore, the shadows cast on the surface make it seem darker than it really is.

REMEMBER GOOD PAINT.

Those who desire to be truly economical should remember that good paint, frequently applied, points the way.

FURNITURE DONE IN VIVID COLORS IS GARDEN VOGUE

Seats Around Tree Prove Worth in Summer.

When a yard has trees, that practical and pretty bit of furniture called the seat around the tree is particularly appropriate for warm weather time.

As its name suggests it is a circular bench or it may be hexagonal, and it completely surrounds the tree. It sometimes has a back against the tree trunk on the inside of the circle, and again it has not.

If the yard has no sizable trees, a bench shaded by an arbor trellis gives a shady and serviceable spot in which to enjoy the open.

Formerly Green or White.

Formerly garden furniture was mostly green, the obvious idea being that it should match with the foliage and the grass. Or white, to form a contrast, might be used, but other shades were not "the thing."

Now garden furniture has taken on color along with pink bathroom fixtures, apple green washing machines, bright blue walls, scarlet furnaces, tinted gas ranges and colorful roofs and walls.

We see garden tables and chairs which take their color cues from the flowers which surround them, and outdoor furniture is blossoming forth in all the colors of the rainbow.

Colorful Umbrellas.

One feature which possesses much value in the riot of color it can add to the garden picture is the large sun umbrella, something like the mushroom in shape. These are so large that they can cover an entire settee or table and chairs. This umbrella can incline obligingly in whatever direction the sun may be.

Naturally, if a house has awnings, it is fitting that these umbrellas should match. Or again they may possess a color scheme entirely their own.

SIMPLE MATTER FOR ONE TO BUILD A VACATION HOME

Now is the immediate time when many people are discussing the building of a summer home, away on a spot of land near woods and water, where they can idle away the vacation days.

It is not such a task, either. One can often build from materials at hand, or one can even more easily purchase cottages all built in sections ready to erect. Doors and windows, walls and floors, so well prepared that the actual putting together of a house ready for occupancy requires only a few days.

Here's a Plaster Which Is Said to Keep Away Moths

A plaster is now manufactured which it is claimed possesses the moth repelling properties of red cedar wood and other ingredients. By plastering the closet wall with this, one insures one's valuables against the onslaughts of the moth. Not expensive, either, talking of "costs."

Advice to Home Builder, Put 'Outside Icing' in Plan

"Outside icing," specified in the blue prints of your new home, assures you great convenience, puts responsibility on the ice man for keeping your ice chamber filled, and gives you ice delivery without entrance to your kitchen.

LOOKING BACKWARD

To July 8, 1918; 10 Years Ago Today

Edwin J. Newgard, who took title about five years ago to a tract of eighty acres adjoining the Indian Hill Country club, has just conveyed the land to A. W. Shaw, Frederic A. Delano and Rush C. Butler for whom it was acquired for residential purposes for themselves. Mr. Shaw's parcel comprises about twenty-six acres, Mr. Butler's about fourteen acres and Mr. Delano's about eleven acres. The additional twenty-nine acres has been conveyed to the Northern Trust company as trustee for the joint benefit of Mr. Shaw, Mr. Butler and L. G. Walker of the Shaw-Walker company, Jackson, Mich.

FREDERIC A. DELANO.

Mrs. Clara F. Bass of Petersboro, N. H., bought from Mrs. Ellen I. Hale and Grace M. Vance the property at the southeast corner of Michigan avenue and Lake street, lot 72x69½ feet, improved with a vacant seven story building, for $251,280. This gives Mrs. Bass a frontage of 132 feet at this point.

To July 8, 1898; 30 Years Ago Today

Stanley R. McCormick will construct three six story buildings on the 168 feet of frontage in Michigan boulevard, lying immediately south of the athletic club, and will lease the properties to Gage Brothers & Co., Theodore Ascher & Co., and Edson Keith & Co. John C. Fetzer represented the McCormicks in the transaction and R. E. Ismond & Co., the lessees. The total amount in real estate and buildings will be approximately $804,000.

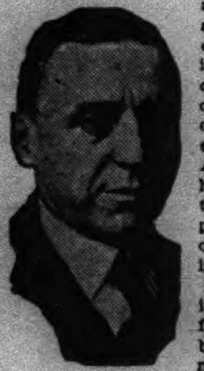
LAUDS CARE OF POOR CHILDREN IN PRIVATE HOMES

New System Is Working Well, Cermak Finds.

BY THOMAS WREN.



ANTON CERMAK.

Nine hundred human interest stories about poor children in Cook county are written annually in the children's home placing department of the Juvenile court, which was established several years ago by Anton Cermak, head of the county board, and approved by various charitable organizations.

The child placing system was founded on the belief of Mr. Cermak that a child brought up in the environment of a home makes a better citizen than one brought up in an institution. And it was on this theory that children are now boarded in private homes rather than in children's institutions.

"So well has the plan worked out," says Mr. Cermak, "that in many cases the persons boarding the child become so attached to it that the youngster is often made a member of the family by adoption.

Gaining in Favor.

"Child boarding is growing more and more in favor because of natural conditions that exist in homes as against institutions."

Judge Mary Bartleme of the Juvenile court recently appeared before the finance committee of the county board and said there was such a demand for help on the part of poor children of Chicago that $100,000 revenue would be needed this year to handle this service.

In 1923—the year the child placing system was established—the county appropriated $25,000 to finance the plan. This year it is estimated the plan's cost will amount to approximately $345,000.

Institution Crowded.

"Unemployment conditions are making it impossible for many parents to care for their children," Mr. Cermak said. "Institutions are now overcrowded, which renders it difficult for them to care for more children.

"Several associations have become interested in the subject and are aiding in the placing of some poor children in private homes. These children are boarded without cost to either the associations or the county."

SYNDICATE BUYS WAREHOUSE AT 22 EAST AUSTIN

Clarence A. Parliament sold to an undisclosed syndicate managed by Sudler & Co. the five story cold storage warehouse at 22-24 East Austin avenue, occupying a lot 50x100, for an undisclosed consideration, subject to $80,000. The property is fifty feet from the northeast corner of Cass and Austin, where the proposed Wabash avenue bridge will come to grade. For years it was occupied by Parliament & Espert, but is now leased to the Monarch Refrigerating company. Sudler & Co. were brokers. Elmer E. Jackson was attorney for the purchasers, and Frank L. Cheney acted for the sellers.

Brokers' Notes

William H. Britigan, president of the William H. Britigan Realty association, has appointed Harry R. McCoy general director of sales for his organization. Mr. McCoy started with the Britigan firm six years ago, beginning as a salesman. Prior to that he was with the International Harvester company.

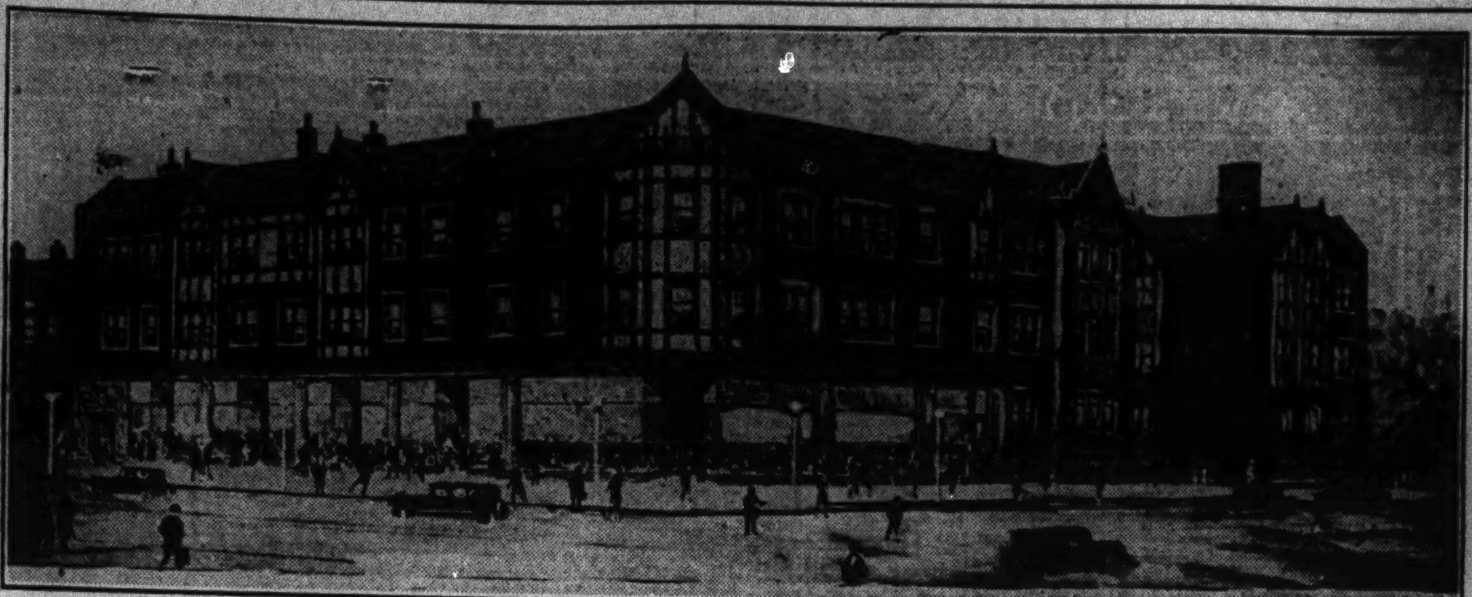
AT 79TH AND CRANDON



Kocher & Larson designed the above store and flat building, now under construction at the southeast corner of East 79th street and Crandon avenue, by Andrew Ringman, owner. It will contain five stores and thirty-three flats, and will represent a reported investment of $300,000. The site fronts 108 feet on 79th and 125 feet on Crandon. The architecture is old English. Completion is set for Oct. 1.

SOME LEASES

Harry A. Lubin of the Spaulding shops has leased for his firm the store at 64 East Madison street from the Better Value Shops, Inc., for ten years at a reported $138,000. Ross & Browne were brokers.

The Murphy Door Bed company, for some years in the Majestic building, has leased new quarters in the Madison-La Salle building at 173 West Madison, through Carl Tritschler of Hooker & Slosson.

The Rational Dollar stores have leased space in the building at the northeast corner of Lawrence and Harding from Wallach Bros. J. I. Menkin of Kaplan & Co. was broker.

George W. Prassas has leased a double store at 3254-56 Lawrence avenue, in the building under construction at the northeast corner of Lawrence and Spaulding, to the Silver Dollar Stores company for ten years at a net rental reported to be $73,200. This is the third of a series of twenty stores which this concern contemplates opening in Chicago within the next year.

The Gibbs company has leased the second floor and the rear portion of the fourth floor of the building at 21-23 South Wabash avenue from John P. Harding for ten years for a term rental of $118,000. The Brownlee Realty company was broker.

A five year lease has been closed by Stanley E. Golding, who operates a chain of men's clothing stores, on the shop at 407 East 47th street from Harry Englestein. Harry M. and Louis Englestein were brokers.

The Silver Dollar Stores, Inc., has leased another store for its chain of dollar shops, the latest being located at 6743-45 Stony Island avenue. The lessor is Eugene Abegg and the lease is for ten years from May 1 on a percentage sales basis with a minimum guaranteed rental. Krinsky, Levitan & Glassner were attorneys for the lessee and Harry Bell acted for the lessor. Benjamin C. Rose was broker.

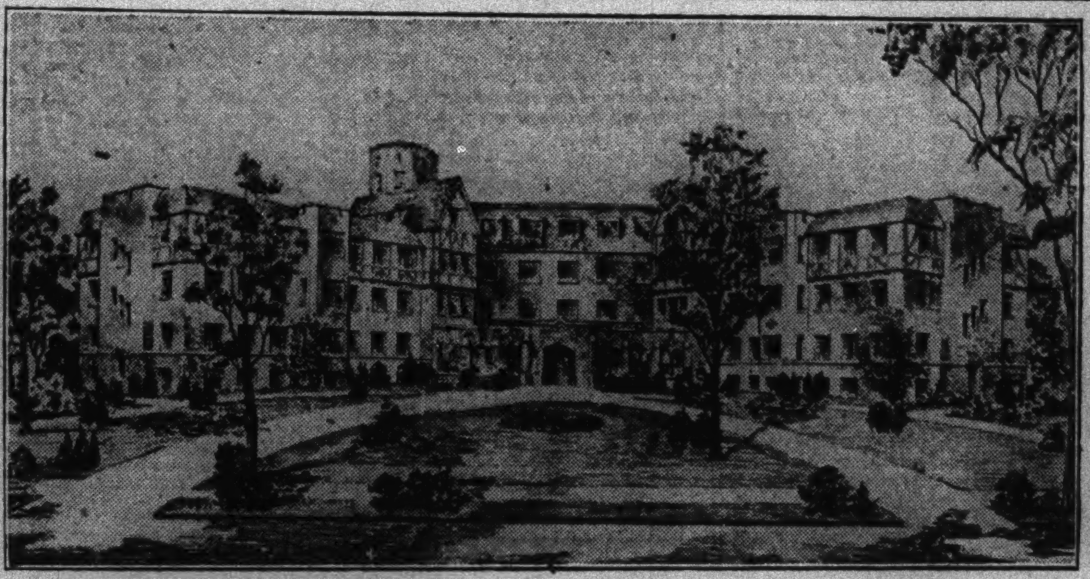
Lester Simon & Co. report having made a chain store lease for Jerome Buxbaum with Neisner Brothers, Inc., 5c to $1 stores, on the two story building at 3908-12 Cottage Grove avenue. The lease is for twenty years beginning Aug. 1, 1928, at a term rental of $180,000. This will be the firm's sixth Chicago store.

Peter D. Quigley has leased to "Scene in Action," makers of moving signs, the third floor of the building at the southeast corner of Indiana avenue and 18th street for five years at a term rental of $25,000. C. A. Sahlberg was broker.

CLUB BUYS 80 ACRE TRACT FOR 18 MORE HOLES

The Lakewood Golf and Country club, formerly known as the St. Andrews Golf club, two or three miles north of West Chicago, has enlarged its area by buying eighty acres south of the present grounds, with a quarter of a mile of frontage on the new North avenue forty foot highway now under construction. A second eighteen hole course is to be laid out according to Mitchell & Mitchell, brokers in the last purchase.

SUNSHINE FOR THE AUTUMN YEARS



Every living room in the above $250,000 Baptist Old People's home, to be erected in Maywood, will receive direct sunshine, something which even many of our super-de luxe skyscraper apartments can't match. This fireproof structure will occupy a site in the block bounded by Randolph street on the north, 3d avenue on the east, 4th avenue on the west, and Pine street on the south. The building will face south, with the wings at an angle, in order to permit the maximum amount of sunlight. E. E. Roberts and Elmer C. Roberts are the architects. The picture was made by L. B. Sugarman.

49 DWELLINGS FOR UNIVERSITY TOWN

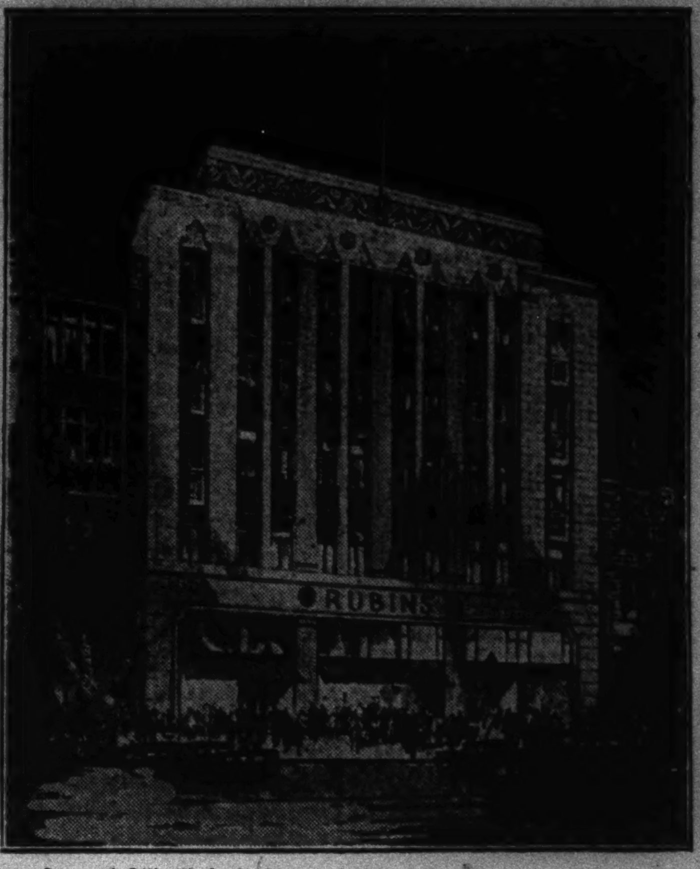
FORM BODY TO AID SOUTHWEST SIDE MERCHANTS

An organization known as the Midland Industrial Chamber of Commerce has been formed with the announced object to help the interests of merchants and manufacturers in the territory bounded by the Illinois and Michigan canal, 95th street, Western avenue and Argo and Summit. The incorporators are: James Baker, H. F. Wehrmann, William C. Dyer, L. H. Burnaby, Carl Weil, Thomas R. Nugent and E. L. Cook. James Baker, 5812 South Sawyer avenue, was elected temporary secretary.

SMITH BEARINGS COMPANY BUYS BOUL MICH HOME

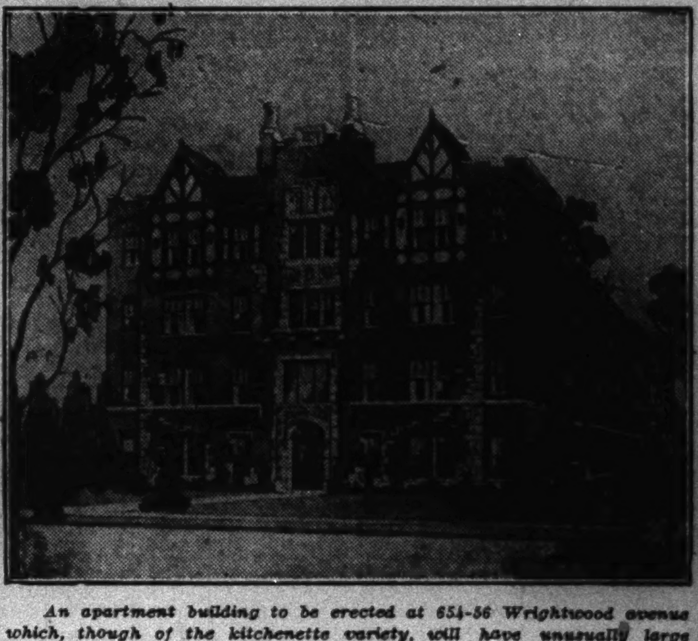
The L. C. Smith Bearings company bought from Henry Wolf the property at 2633-35 South Michigan avenue improved with a two story building on a lot 58x163 feet for a reported $100,000. The building was erected about five years ago. The purchasers paid a rental of $20 a month for their quarters in 1915. Rosenberg & Lurie were brokers. Ringer, Wilhartz & Hirsch and Aleck Bernstein were attorneys.

WAUKEGAN'S NEWEST STORE



Oman & Lilienthal of Chicago designed the above five story department store, to be erected at 15-19 South Genesee street, in Waukegan, and to be occupied by Rubin's. Charles L. Morgan made the sketch shown. Details of this project are given on page one.

IN LINCOLN PARK DISTRICT



An apartment building to be erected at 654-56 Wrightwood avenue which, though of the kitchenette variety, will have unusually large rooms. Levy & Klein are the architects. L. B. Sugarman made this rendering.

FRANK DE LUGACH BUYS 80 ACRES AT 103D-KEDZIE

Frank De Lugach has purchased eighty acres at the southeast corner of 103d and Kedzie from the Chicago Title and Trust company for a consideration reported to be in the neighborhood of $250,000. The property has frontage on 103d, 107th, Kedzie, Troy, Albany, Utica, and Sacramento. Kedzie, 103d, 107th, and Sacramento will be zoned for business and the balance for apartments and residences. The land will be put on the market immediately, as Mr. De Lugach's thirty-fourth subdivision in the Chicago district. Wolf & Lavin and John R. Gans & Co. were brokers.

GROCERTERIAS LEASE STORES.

The Loblaw Groceterias, Inc., have leased the store at 7524 Cottage Grove avenue from John L. Almcrantz for ten years; also stores at 6831 Stony Island avenue and 5343 North Clark street. Roy Anderson and Firman Thompson of H. O. Stone & Co. were brokers.

BUYS NORTH SHORE RESIDENCE.

Ben Lazard of the Lincoln Printing company bought the residence at the northwest corner of Linden avenue and Ravine drive, Highland Park, from the Foreman Trust and Savings bank, trustee, for a reported $35,000, through the Harry Goldstine Realty company.

PROMISE EXTRA LARGE ROOMS FOR NORTH SIDE FLAT

To Rise Immediately at 654 Wrightwood.

A kitchenette apartment building in which the rooms will be unusually large is a new improvement promised for 654-56 Wrightwood avenue, in the Lincoln park district.

Work is to start immediately on the structure from plans prepared by Architects Levy & Klein. It will have an especially attractive front of English Tudor Gothic design, with half timber work and gables. A decorative touch will be provided through a steep slate roof.

The building will be divided into fifty-five apartments of two and three rooms. As stated, these apartments will have extra large rooms instead of the cubbyholes found in so many buildings of this type. All the apartments will be furnished and all will have mechanical refrigeration, ventilation, and other conveniences.

It is estimated the project will represent an investment in land, building, and furnishings of $390,000. The lot is 62x200 feet. Owners are Rosen & Fischel. Completion is planned for the late fall.

CHAIN GROCERS CLOSE LEASES ON MANY STORES

Loblaw Groceterias, Inc., an eastern chain store system entering the Chicago territory, has closed leases on the following locations for periods of from ten to fifteen years:

FARM AND GARDEN

POULTRY WOMAN STORY READS LIKE MOVIE CAPTIONS

Mrs. C. D. Martin Makes Big Money on Chicks.

BY FRANK RIDGWAY.

Listening to the true story of Mrs. C. D. Martin's way of making an Iowa farm flock return a net profit of more than $4,500 a year is closely akin to reading captions of a movie scenario by a writer who'd never brought rain drenched chickens back to life but pulled his plot from an imaginary chicken farm. The play opens with Mrs. Martin planking her foot down in the middle of a contaminated chicken yard on Fairview farm near New Providence, Ia., declaring that "raising poultry on this farm was going to be done in a different way from now on." Thirteen years ago she made that announcement to the head of the Martin family and the hired hands.

Hens and roosters of her succotash flock are there in that first scene, scratching away "eating their heads off." They didn't keep records at that time, but it is a well known fact among the Martins that the flock was losing money. Like the movie caption writer, I'm going to ask the reader to let his imagination run wild on that scene, make it as bad as he wants to, and keep it for later reference.

Now jump a gap of about a dozen years and go on with the story as it is today on the Martin farm.

Only Small Percentage Lost.

This spring Mrs. Martin took 2,650 baby chicks from her big incubators and up to the present time she still has 2,600 of them, losing only 50 chicks. Not many come up to that record in handling such a large number of birds. There may be some luck in it, but it is about the same kind she had last year when she hatched 2,300 chicks and raised 2,280 of them to maturity, losing only 20 chicks.

Mrs. Martin's gross revenue from her flock last year was $7,200, returning a net profit of about $4,500. The layers in the flock averaged 144 eggs per bird.

This year the returns from the Martin flock are expected to be even more than last—$500 according to estimates based on the fact that more chickens and eggs are being sold. The hens are laying more eggs than they did last year, too.

The chickens make more clear money than any one of the other enterprises on the Martin farm of 240 acres, where hogs and cattle have reasons for making faces at biddy for her enviable record.

Expert Hired by the Year.

Oriental mystery is brought into the story at this point. From China, where doctors are paid by the year to keep the family in good health, Mrs. Martin and twenty-one other Iowa poultry keepers got the idea that it would be cheaper to employ an expert by the year to keep the flock in good condition than to wait until the birds got sick and then attempt to cure them. So for several years William H. Lapp, former head of the poultry extension department, Iowa State college, and at present director of the Poultry Research Society of America, has been supervising the health measures used on the Martin flock.

The contaminated chicken yard that was teeming with poultry parasites thirteen years ago on Fairview farm fades out of the picture. The scene of the yards today shows the Martin flock all one breed, Buff Leghorns—scratching away in freshly plowed ground. In that scene is to be found one of the chief reasons for Mrs. Martin's success. All of the yards and runs are plowed at least twice a year where the mature stock is kept on the range. The young chickens are raised on practically a new area every year.

The plan followed is to move the houses to different parts of the farm where no poultry has been kept for at least a year or more. This often means that the brooder houses are a half mile from the old birds. Cleaning the poultry houses daily is an actual practice and not a mere theory with Mrs. Martin.

Practical Methods Used.

The Fairview farm flock is the nucleus of a great poultry production industry which is being developed in Hardin county, centering around New Providence and Hubbard, about fourteen or fifteen miles south of Iowa Falls, Ia. Mrs. Martin started with high grade, well bred, healthy chickens, and keeps adding new blood by bringing in good stock from other fine flocks.

She produces eggs and chickens for the market, sells eggs for hatching purposes, and runs an incubator, turning out thousands of baby chicks each year. There is nothing mysterious or costly about her methods; they are of the kind that can be followed by any industrious poultry keeper. Her methods are so practical that she has set the example in her entire community for miles around.

This season her 7,000 egg incubator turned out 35,000 baby chicks. Proof of the respect neighbors have for Mrs. Martin's way of raising chickens is indicated by the fact that three-fourths of her sales of breeding stock, eggs, and baby chicks are made to local farmers and not more than a fourth of the business is with poultry raisers outside the county.

Efficiently Managed.

The Martin flock is efficiently managed, kept on clean ground, housed in regularly disinfected quarters, fed and watered in clean vessels, fed wholesome, scientifically balanced rations and marketed in a businesslike way. The eggs are hatched early in the spring. The pullets usually are laying by the time they are six months old. Early hatched pullets means that they will start laying earlier in late summer and early fall. The surplus males that are not to be kept for breeding purposes are big enough to be sold as broilers when prices are favorable.

In selecting eggs for the incubator Mrs. Martin uses only those that are fresh—they may begin to deteriorate rather quickly after the fifth day. Eggs weighing less than two ounces each are not used in the incubator. Mrs. Martin tries to pick eggs of about the same size. She even watches the color of the egg shell, using those that are practically free from tints. The eggs are turned daily in the incubator, and when hatched the chicks are not taken from the machine until they are thoroughly dry.

Attention to Details.

By giving attention to such fine details as these Mrs. Martin is able to produce great flocks of birds of a uniform size that will weigh an average of about a pound and a half when they are eight weeks old. Pullets that are kept for layers are watched carefully when it comes time for them to lay. In order to curtail molting in the fall, Mrs. Martin puts all of the pullets into their winter quarters before five per cent of them have started to lay.

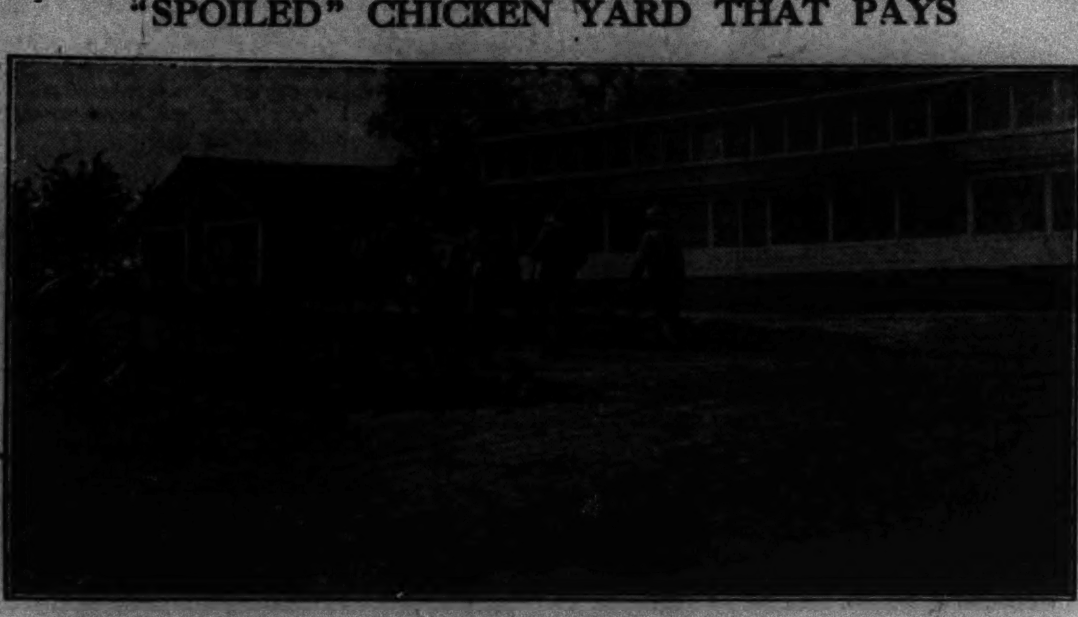
They are often allowed to run on the range, but placed in their permanent winter roosting and laying quarters soon after they start laying. The practice is followed because this poultry woman has learned that a change in surroundings, in the feed or houses may cause the pullets to molt earlier. Experienced poultry keepers know that molting keeps down production of eggs. When birds molt they stop laying.

Work Done Single Handed.

A big point in Mrs. Martin's chicken story is that she is doing practically all of the work single handed. The hired hands plow up the poultry yard for her in June and again in September, and occasionally Mr. Martin, a Shorthorn cattle breeder, gives a hand. Not many women either in the city or country have a bank account that shows a net return of from $4,500 to $5,000 at the end of the year. Mrs. Martin not only makes that much clear with her flock of chickens, but in addition she has one of the finest and most complete farm vegetable gardens to be found in the Mississippi valley.

Her income for May amounted to $1,125.45. This was the total returns from the sale of eggs and baby chicks during one month, all coming from a flock of 676 Buff Leghorn layers that produced 13,215 eggs.

"SPOILED" CHICKEN YARD THAT PAYS



PLOWING POULTRY YARD TO KEEP FLOCK HEALTHY—"Why spoil your chicken yard?" said the hired hand at Fairview farm when Mrs. C. D. Martin, New Providence, Ia., asked for a team and plow to be used in breaking up her contaminated poultry run thirteen years ago. Since Mrs. Martin has proved the value of her theory by producing enough healthy chickens to net from $4,500 to $5,000 a year, she has had no trouble in getting her chicken yard plowed twice a year.

Judges of Garden Contest To Lay Plans on Thursday

In coöperation with more than fifty garden clubs of Chicago and its suburbs preliminary plans are being made to visit the gardens entered in THE TRIBUNE'S second home flower garden contest. Judges selected by the various community and suburban garden organizations will meet next Thursday to work out the details of the judging system to be used in determining the prize winners. They will be the guests of THE TRIBUNE at a noonday luncheon in the Drake hotel.

At the luncheon it is expected the judges will decide definitely when they will make their first visit. It is generally believed that the greatest number of gardens will be ready sometime during the second week in August. The exact judging date will be announced in THE TRIBUNE in plenty of time for contestants to give their grounds and plants a final touching up before the judges come around.

Every Garden to Be Visited.

Every garden competing for a share of the $6,000 in prizes offered by this newspaper will be visited by the judges, according to the original plan used in THE TRIBUNE'S first flower garden contest last summer and announced again at the opening of the 1928 competition. The large prizes offered in this year's contest are expected to make competition among gardeners much keener than it was last year.

When the judges start their work they will visit the gardens according to zones—north, west and south. Thirty-three prizes will be given in each zone, a total of ninety-nine awards ranging from $25 to $500, or $2,000 in each division. The first seven cash prizes to be awarded in each of the three zones are as follows: First, $500; second, $275; third, $200; fourth, $150; fifth, $100; sixth, $75, and seventh, $50.

Garden Clubs Back Contest.

Only gardeners entered by May 21, 1928, are competing in the contest. Those who have failed to meet the rules of the contest will be eliminated by the judges on their first visit.

The contest is supported by garden enthusiasts throughout the entire metropolitan area of Chicago, especially those who are members of the various clubs. Members of these organizations regard THE TRIBUNE'S amateur flower garden competition as one of the major projects in their better home garden movement which during the last two years has attracted widespread attention.

REPORT OF RUST SENDS WHEAT UP TILL CORN SLIPS

BY CHARLES MICHAELS.

Black rust is being found in the American northwest and there were reports of its discovery in Canada, and while the wheat market was easier early on further hedging pressure from the southwest there was a strong rally from the inside figures, with a recession from the best figures later in sympathy with corn, and the finish was unchanged to ½c lower with July leading.

Liquidation was on in the deferred deliveries of corn with a decline of around 2c from the finish of Friday. Stop loss orders were caught on the way down, and sellers of bids had to protect themselves. The market showed a heavy undertone throughout the day and closed about the bottom with net losses of 1@1⅝c. Oats were off ⅝@1¼c and rye was unchanged to ½c higher.

Grains Lower for Week.

Buying of around 5,000,000 bu wheat abroad by Russia early in the week failed to have a lasting effect on the market, and with the harvesting of the new winter wheat crop in the southwest making rapid progress sufficient hedging pressure developed to carry values off nearly 7c from the high, and the close was 4@4¼c lower as compared with a week ago. Corn was unsettled, with July acting tight, and it gained 2⅝c for the week, with the deferred deliveries off ⅝@1⅝c. Oats lost 2@2⅝c and rye 3¼@3⅜c for the week. Lard finished 17½@25c higher; ribs, 42½@62½c, and bellies, 50@77½c higher for the week.

While black rust reports usually make their appearance in the spring wheat area about this time of the year, the wheat market showed a somewhat oversold condition at times during the day, and there was a better class of buying in evidence on the declines and shorts also were buyers. Hedging sales appeared on all the upturns. Aggregate arrivals at the five leading southwestern markets were 569 cars for the day, and loadings on the Santa Fé railroad on Friday were the largest on record. Winnipeg was ⅛c lower to ⅛c higher for the day. Export demand was limited.

Corn Crop Growing Rapidly.

High temperatures prevailed over the corn belt, and the new crop is making rapid growth. With ample moisture in practically all sections of the belt sentiment became decidedly bearish, and with persistent local and commission house selling, partly on stop loss orders, prices declined rapidly, with December at the inside showing within ⅜c of the lowest figure on the crop. The finish was on a rally due to week-end evening up. Argentina shipped 500,000 bu corn to Canada the last week, making a total of 2,473,000 bu since April 1.

Weakness in corn and reports that cutting of new oats was under way in southern Indiana had a depressing effect on the latter grain and with scattered liquidation prices declined with September and December selling at a new low on the crop. Reports of export sales of rye at the seaboard offset to a large extent the weakness in wheat, and prices averaged higher for the day.

CASH·GRAIN NEWS

There was a limited export business in wheat at the seaboard, but a little rye was sold. Quantities were not given.

Chicago handlers sold 17,000 bu wheat, 55,000 bu corn, and 41,000 bu oats to the domestic trade, with 21,000 bu corn sold to go to store. Purchases of 32,000 bu corn were made to arrive. Deliveries on July contracts aggregated 747,000 bu wheat, 118,000 bu corn, and 10,000 bu rye.

Basis on cash wheat here was steady to 1c lower, the latter on hard winter. No. 2 red was 30@32c over, No. 2 hard 3@4c over, and No. 1 northern July price to 2c over. Kansas City basis was steady to 2c lower, with high protein showing the most decline. Minneapolis basis was firm.

Offerings of cash corn were small and the basis steady to ½c lower. No. 2 mixed 1@1¼c over, yellow 1½@1¾c over, white 1¼@2c over, No. 3 mixed 1@1½c under, yellow ½c over to ½c under, and white ½c under to ¼c over July. Spot prices in outside markets were unchanged to 1½c lower.

Cash oats basis was steady to ½c higher, with No. 2 white 16@20c over and No. 3 white 10@18c over old July.

Official receipts of grain at Chicago Saturday: Wheat, 5 cars; corn, 73 cars; oats, 8 cars; barley, 5 cars.

COTTON AVERAGES LOWER

An evening up of cotton trades for the week end resulted in a net lowering of values of 3 to 11 points in Chicago, and 1 to 9 points in other markets. Spot cotton lost 5 points in New York to 22.80c, with New Orleans unchanged at 22.60c, Houston 22.35c, and Galveston 22.40c. Liverpool was 6@7 points net lower, with sales 3,000 bales of spot cotton.

There were showery conditions in the middle belt and increased reports of weevil sent out by Memphis interests.

The government report is due in Chicago at eleven o'clock Monday, and will give an estimate on acreage as compared with last year but no figures on condition. It is expected to show around 45,000,000 acres, an increase of about 7.5 per cent. Last year's harvest was 41,905,000 acres. The condition is privately estimated at 65.3. The Memphis Commercial Appeal makes the acreage 44,261,000, an increase of 5.6 per cent up to July 1, not including acreage destroyed or abandoned prior to that period. Prices follow:

NEWS OF THE CROPS

Crop Observer R. W. Kinyon wired J. S. Bache & Co. from Mitchell, S. D.: Yankton to Olivet, Armour and here, top soil dry and stand of grain lighter. Found slight trace of black rust on sheath of small per cent of stand in about 50% of fields of ruby wheat. No black rust in bearded wheat. Development of rust depends on weather condition, yesterday and today very hot. Strong south wind saping moisture fast.

In Italy—The new wheat crop is selling freely and the propaganda committee is reporting fields as generally greater than last year.

In Prussia—An official crop report says: "That condition of the new wheat and rye crop is slightly above average."

In India—Yields have been disappointing in some sections, but weather now is favorable for soil preparation owing to timely monsoonal rain.

Monticello, Ill., says: "Barley and spring wheat is beginning to blight very badly within the last few days."

Minneapolis, Minn., says: "Black rust reports came from Cando, N. D., also from Comefrey and Norton, Minn. Some bad reports on red rust came from Springfield, and a sample of flax from southern Minnesota showed red rust bad.

Reports from Regina, Sask., to the Winnipeg Free Press says that more than $500,000 damage was done to the crop in the grand coulee, Bulyea, East View, near Moose Jaw, north of Mortlach and Stony Beach districts today by a hail storm. In the Bulyea districts severest was done to crop in a territory three miles wide by 12 miles long. In some sections losses were about complete as the result of hail. Southwest of Regina a little hail fell with no damage.

HAY MARKET STRONG

Demand for hay exceeded the offerings, and the bulk of the business was at the outside of the quoted range, with a higher level of value expected within a few days unless there is an increase in arrivals. Receipts, 16 cars timothy, and 2 cars rye straw. Prices follow:

WORLD'S GRAIN MARKET NEWS

With the annual black rust scare started in the wheat market, there is naturally a nervous condition. Reports from Minnesota, South Dakota and North Dakota, within a short distance of the Canadian line, also claims of rust being discovered in Canada, gave wheat shorts a scare, resulting in covering, and at the same time brought in a lot of new buying by the pit element. The latter, however, lacked confidence in rust being serious and mostly unloaded at the close. Trade sentiment in all is bearish.

In the face of the largest movement of wheat in the southwest there are a few people in the trade who are moderately bullish. They say that indications are of prices getting to an export level and of a good business being consummated, which, it is claimed, should offset the extreme bearishness of the trade in general.

Outside of a bullish situation in July corn, there is a bearish pit sentiment and the open interest has increased. In the face of this, however, a local trader who has been bearish announced at the close that he covered 1,000,000 bu short September as he expected to be away for three months.

"The brilliant Canadian prospect and apathetic bear speculation have recently been the dominant factors in wheat," says J. F. Griffin of J. S. Bache & Co. "It is not unreasonable to assume that the present prospect in producing countries, notably Canada, is at its maximum and that based upon all experience the Canadian promise will not be maintained. This country cannot possibly raise within 100,000,000 bushels of last year which would give us a theoretical maximum exportable surplus of 100,000,000 bu. European prospects for wheat are mixed and in some sections very poor."

High temperatures over the middle west with oats, barley and spring wheat in a critical stage, is creating apprehension as to damage from blight, the grain being more susceptible to injury because of recent excess moisture.

Local showers are predicted for the week over the entire agricultural region with temperatures normal or above. This is what is especially needed for forcing corn along.

"Outside of our large stocks of wheat one of the weak features is that no one is short in our wheat market," said a Winnipeg message. It added: "We are afraid to sell short for fear of black rust. Cannot find any export business."

GOOD TRADE IN MEATS

Interest in the provision trade centered mainly in bellies and short ribs with packers the main buyers of futures. Cash trade was good and the market firm. Future deliveries of bellies closed 2½c to 10c and ribs 22½ to 25c higher.

Trading in lard is limited with practically no fluctuation and the close unchanged to 2½c higher, the latter on July and December. Liverpool was unchanged to 3d higher. There were no exports of lard or meats. Shipments of meats and lard for the week were light, but exceeded last year's. Prices follow:

KISS REGULATING, IT SEEMS, IS NOW GOVERNMENT JOB

BY HARPER LEECH.

The American people will hear something about their government and its relation to business over the radio this year and read a bit about it in the papers. But they will be given the impression that we have one system of government.

Louis Ludlow has well said: "We have in Washington the great departments of government, through which all the executive functions would be transacted under the scheme of the fathers, but while these are ten in number we also have more than forty commissions, boards and independent establishments that have reached out in all directions and usurped government functions."

Including, Mr. Ludlow might have said, many functions that few believe are government functions at all.

Professors of the so-called science of sociology and other endowed logothetes, who necessarily view modern life from the side lines and who from their manner of life are incapable of sensing the importance of free competition and individual initiative, tell us that this expansion of government by indirect means is a necessary consequence of the social transformations caused by modern technology and industrialism.

The pedagogues as usual put the cart before the horse—even as grammarians seem to imagine that they make the languages they analyze. The historical view discloses that modern industrialism and the progress of technology were in fact caused in part by the withdrawal and abstention of governments from just such functions at the close of the feudal era.

Where that withdrawal and abstention were most complete, as in America, industrialism made most progress and has also made marked progress toward satisfactory solution of all its by product social problems, where it has not been hampered by the new American mandarinate.

Mr. Ludlow tells us that the new mandarin form of government, that has grown up like poison ivy on the oak of constitutional government, cost during the fiscal year of 1928 about $500,000,000. He says that the appetite for attending to other people's business grows with what it feeds upon and that these independent government boards and commissions impose a thousand forms of paternalism upon the people. He asserts that these bodies have at least 10,000 employés who might properly be included in the espionage class. The commissions and boards have more spies snooping into the affairs of the American people than Washington had soldiers when he won our freedom at Yorktown.

There comes to this desk from the government printing office a pamphlet called "Trade Practice Conference for the Motion Picture Industry." It is interesting. Most Americans probably think that federal censorship of moving pictures is still a political question—a moot question at that.

In fact it has already been established by indirection. While the orders, stipulations, agreements, etc. imposed by the federal trade commission, even with the consent or coöperation of the industries affected, may not have the full effect of statute law, every lawyer worth a retainer fee knows that laws originate just that way. The federal trade commission and such bodies are in fact making laws just as the Roman emperor, Justinian, added the "Novels" to the code of ancient laws he had compiled.

The American people are today living under a vast network of such quasi laws, and history shows few instances of successful escape by peaceable means from such systems.

For instance, the moving picture industry is now bound by a sort of consent fiat not to show "excessive kissing, particularly when one character or the other is a 'heavy.'"

Can you beat that? Of course it's perfectly nice and proper. In truth a great many of the stipulations and agreements in this "trade conference" pamphlet are not only salutary, but necessary to commercial survival in a [illegible] country like this. If the agreements were not observed, the police or vigilance committees would attend to the matter. But when did the people of the United States ever authorize the federal government or any part of it to supervise screen osculation?

Armour & Co. Review Finds Pork Active, Prices Firm

Armour & Co. in its review of general packing house trade conditions says: "Pork products generally continued to show the way in strength and activity among major packing house lines this week. The market for smoked meats gave evidence of being in the strongest position in several years and movement this week was excellent at strong to higher prices. Dry salt meats also were very active and strong, with the underline firm. Beef prices showed some strength. Live lamb prices moved slightly upward, while dressed lamb trade did fairly well at just about steady prices. Veal was steady to strong."

Roumania Pins Grand Cross on Ford for Achievements

Detroit, Mich., July 7.—[Special.]—The Grand Cross of the Order of the Crown of Roumania was conferred on Henry Ford today in recognition of his achievements in industry, social and international relations. The citation was read by Andrew [illegible], secretary of the Roumanian legation at Washington, in the presence of several Ford Motor company officials, Roumanian consular officials and friends of Mr. Ford.

23 Planes on National Air Tour Wing Way Over Texas

Fort Worth, Tex., July 7.—[U.P.]—Twenty-three airplanes of the national air tour continued westward today with a noon stop scheduled at Waco, Tex., and a night stop at San Antonio. Today's flight will complete the first week of the tour. The planes have covered nearly one-fourth of their scheduled 6,300 mile tour.

Chicago Bank Stocks Show Diverse Moves

Price movements in the local bank stock market were again irregular and features few in number last week. A good demand was in evidence for Continental National Bank and Trust company and National Bank of the Republic, and the shares of each institution advanced 10 points for the week, the former at 550 to 555, and the latter at 545 to 548. Central Trust company of Illinois forfeited a portion of its previous advance, receding 5 points to 528 bid, offered at 538.

Union Trust scored a 5 point improvement, changing hands between 824 and 830. Bank of America was unchanged at 395 to 400, as was First National at 794 to 798. There was little interest in either Illinois Merchants or Foreman National. Illinois lost 5 points in selling at 900, and Foreman declined 5 points to 815 bid, offered at 820. Offerings of Peoples Trust and Savings at 640 again failed to attract buyers at better than 625. Chicago Trust rose 5 points to 472, but little interest was displayed on the selling side.

Greenebaum Investment Rises.

Greenebaum Sons Investment was the most prominent in the miscellaneous group; transactions were recorded at 565, an increase of 20 points for the week. A better tone was noted in Hart Parr common and sales ranged between 47 and 49½. At the close stock was wanted at 48½ with offerings at 49¼. The preferred was dealt in at 100. Chicago Daily News common continues active; it rose 2 points to sales at 64. It was off a point at the close, with stock wanted at 61½. The preferred was fractionally higher at 101½ to 102½. Interest again appeared in Continental Steel common, and it improved 3 points to 33 bid, 34 asked.

Creamery Package common held well and at 38 bid 40 asked was 2 points higher. Moderate improvement was noted in the Federal Electric issues—the common advanced 5 points to sales at 39 with limited offerings at 40; while the preferred scored a 3 point gain, changing hands between 98 and 99. Interest was renewed in Dolese & Shepard and trades were recorded at 148. Economical Drug class "A" sold at 31. The common was wanted at 7½, with offerings at 8½.

Record of Other Issues.

Sixty-four was bid for Elgin National Watch and offerings were at 65½. Godchaux Sugar was traded in at 42, up 2.

Attention in the McCord Manufacturing shares seems to have dwindled. Offerings at 10 failed to interest buyers at better than 9½ for the common; while the debenture shares were wanted at 18 and the "A" preferred was quoted at 70 to 72. National Gypsum preferred sold between 66 and 68. The common was wanted at 27 with offerings at 28. New England Public Service common on a fair volume of trade was pushed up to 80 bid.

Sales in Raytheon Manufacturing ranged between 29 and 32. At the close stock was wanted at 32 with offerings at 32½. Northwestern Yeast continued in supply at 200 without attracting buyers. Early dealings in A. E. Staley were made at 262, but it later declined to 255. Additional stock was wanted here, but sellers were uninterested. Van Ess Laboratories continued in demand and bids of 13¼ failed to bring out stock cheaper than 13½.

Washington, D. C., July 7.—(AP)—A final valuation of $50,400,000 was fixed for the Virginian Railway company today by the interstate commerce commission as of June, 1916. An additional figure of $2,865,000 was allowed for the Virginian Terminal Railway company, owned by the Virginian system.

The Virginian company, in protesting the commission's figures, estimated that the actual cost of its property on the date given was $50,845,000 and that considerable additional sums should be added to this total as the cost of financing and refinancing expenses during construction. Most of these plans for additions to the valuation figures were disallowed today in the commission's final action.

Youngstown Steel Mills Will Expand Operations

Youngstown, O., July 7.—(AP)—Steel mill operations in the Youngstown district next week will show a marked improvement, according to operating schedules made public today, sending thousands of men back to work and bearing out executives' predictions that the summer slump will not be so pronounced this year as in 1927. Schedules will be resumed at 70 to 75 per cent of capacity.

Independent steel production will show a gain of two open hearth furnaces; sheet mills will have one of the best weeks this year with 114 of the 127 independents operating and strip mill operation will be at about 90 per cent of capacity.

LONDON MARKET RECOVERS FROM 'AIR DEATH' JOLT

BY SIDNEY CAVE.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]
[Copyright: 1928: By The Chicago Tribune.]

LONDON, July 7.—The inherent soundness of London's financial position was demonstrated clearly in the maner in which it withstood the shock of the reported death of Capt. Alfred Loewenstein, whose dramatic disappearance was in keeping with his spectacular financial career.

The close of the week saw a remarkable recovery from Thursday's exciting collapse of shares in the companies with which he was especially identified. Inflation dangers arising out of the internationalizing of many prominent industrials had been clearly foreseen here and commitments kept within the prescribed limits.

Market Drop Anticipated.

Thursday's spectacular fall was effectively anticipated and there was a flood of selling on continental bourses. Dealers marked down International Holdings and Hydro-Electrics severely. The former, which closed at $215 Wednesday, opened nominally at $135 Thursday morning, the lowest of the day being $100. It closed the week at $140.50. Hydros slumped from 50 to as low as 20, but closed the week at 40 and held, owing to sharp recoveries from the lowest points.

Aside from these two stocks, upon which speculative fever recently was centered, the effect of the financier's death exerted little more than a depressing influence—chiefly in the oil market, owing to Brussels interest—and artificial silks ended a few points below opening. A few other markets were affected to a minor extent where the approaching settlement, combined with the absence of public business, had turned prices heavy.

Market Tone Firms Up.

Next week's settlement is awaited calmly. Further spasmodic liquidation may have a disturbing effect, but the tone generally is more firm, helped by the fact that New York appears to be in a more bullish mood again. The reassuring statement issued by the advisory board of International Holdings that the financial position was sound, also steadied the markets generally.

Before Loewenstein vanished the stock exchange business already had slackened in the industrial section. The outstanding feature has been the strength of radio and cable companies' shares, due to reports, at present lacking official confirmation, that negotiations for merging all the empire cable and wireless interests are approaching a satisfactory conclusion. Marconis spurted to 68 shillings, and Eastern Telegraph shares to 248, while Radio Corporations also were much better.

Securities Group Uncertain.

The government securities section was rather uncertain in view of the American monetary situation and relapse of the New York sterling rate, following a sharp advance in the call money rate. Four per cent consolidated shares were dull, while Victory bonds eased off. India loans, however, reflected fairly good investment buying and quite an active market ruled in the recently issued home corporation and colonial loans.

Most of the good class European Sterling loans were fairly maintained, but Greek 6 per cents sagged after the recent advance, with the loans steadier. Mexican issues reflected spasmodic support on the American account. Japanese advanced, and the Chinese group was quiet.

Iron and Steel Prices Slip.

In the iron and steel section prices continued to dwindle due to lack of support, the succession of reconstruction schemes frightening away buyers. Electric issues showed a marked revival of activity, with reported significant American buying again.

Fairly heavy selling has brought down home rails to the lowest prices of the year, with support virtually nonexistant on continuing poor traffics and dividend fears.

Oils showed up better toward the close, but rubber was idle. Newspapers were dull; breweries were good; gramophones were steady; mines were inactive; and insurance shares were good.

FRENCH RENTES WEAKEN

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS, July 7.—This week's trading on the Paris bourse held no comfort for those who in the last six months have been investing heavily in French securities in the belief that stabilization would bring a tremendous rise. The slight boom that followed the stabilization decree seems to have been definitely proved abortive, with even French rentes manifestings feebleness in the last few days.

The drop was particularly marked in the 3 per cent perpetuals and 4 per cents. It is believed, however, that the weakness in rentes is only temporary, largely resulting from the liquidation of government securities by investors who suffered losses in other departments of the exchange.

Better Times Expected.

However, the prospects for five months of political stability, with parliament ready for a vacation, and the healthy condition of the budget, seem to promise better times ahead. Long term money is expected to be easier.

The weekly statement of the Bank of France revealed a slight diminution in gold coverage of the new franc fixed by law at 35 per cent. A week ago there was 40.45 per cent, and this week 40.04, despite the augmentation of fifty million francs in the gold reserve. It was revealed that more than thirty-six billion francs of the bank's reserve is composed of foreign currency, which is expected to be converted as fast as possible into gold. The bank's shares, which jumped from 23,400 on June 25 to 27,000 on July 2, have gone back to 25,210.

Market Rallies at Close.

The settlement passed off Monday without difficulty, call money averaging 5 per cent on the official market and 8 per cent on the curb. Tuesday saw the market weak and nervous due to the tension of call money in New York. Everything sagged and trading was light inasmuch as vacations have begun with many speculators.

Wednesday's calm gave way to turmoil Thursday when the disappearance of Capt. Alfred Loewenstein was reported. All his shares hit the toboggan. Tubize going the lowest. A sharp reaction set in Friday, many stocks easily reaching former levels and the market took on a calm tone and was firm to the end. All through the week banking was placid, rails were generally heavy, internationals were listless, and rubber was firm.

TOPICS OF FINANCE AND TRADE

Debits to individual deposit account reported to the Federal Reserve bank of Chicago for the week ended July 3, 1928, by 250 banks in 37 leading clearing house cities in the Seventh federal reserve district, aggregate $1,563,280,000, an increase of 6.9 per cent compared with a week ago ($1,466,504,000). Compared with the corresponding week of last year ($1,532,111,000), an increase of 2.4 per cent was shown.

The dividend of 14 guilders recently declared by Royal Dutch company, as a final dividend for 1927 on the ordinary shares, is equal to $1.87 a share on each New York share, payable by the Equitable Trust company on Aug. 3, to holders of record July 22. The recent dividend of 3 shillings by Shell Transport and Trading Co., Ltd., is equal to $1.45 on each American share, payable July 23, to stock of record July 16.

Shipments of motor cars and trucks from the plant of Dodge Bros. in the United States and Canada for the first six months of the present year totaled 121,327, compared with 107,115 in the first six months of last year, a gain of 14,212 unts, or 13.3 per cent. Export shipments of cars and trucks for the first six months showed a gain of 17.9 per cent over the first half of last year. June export shipments were the largest in the history of the company and were 79 per cent greater than in June of last year.

Eastern fabricators are anticipating an active market for structural steel in the third quarter, with substantial tonnage likely to be placed this month, says Daily Metal trade. One interest estimates 150,000 tons of shapes in prospect. The larger structural steel fabricators in the Chicago district are booked to capacity for 30 to 60 days.

Efforts to obtain a spirit of coöperation among executives of leading oil companies have produced a healthy improvement, said Richfard Florian, president of Western Oil and Refining company. "They have learned to consider the industry as a whole, rather than from the point of view of their individual companies. More attention is being paid to the conservation of oil."

Little River, Okla., oil operators have voted to have the Oklahoma corporation commission change its proration order to a new plan which would not limit drilling and would allow the field to produce a specified amount daily, probably 125,000 brls and allot pipe line outlet on the basis of one-quarter of the proven acreage and three-quarters on the potential open flow.

Sugar Institute, Inc., calculates total meltings of fifteen refiners in the United States for the half year at 4,897,578,810 lbs, against 5,810,964,639 lbs from Jan. 1 to July 2, 1927.

Imports of raw silks into the United States during the month of June totaled 45,090 bales, compared with 52,972 bales in May, and 43,800 bales in June of last year, according to the Silk Association of America. Stocks at the end of the month totaled 41,137 bales, compared with 42,083 bales in storage at the end of May and 37,024 bales at the end of June of last year.

Steel producers in the Youngstown area expect better average business than a year ago. Schedules of iron and steel companies in the district will be resumed next week at 70 to 75 per cent of capacity.

Steady demand for apparatus from the industrial field featured the market for electrical equipment last week. Buying by power companies was fair, considering the season of the year, with some good orders for cabde for thansmission service, the Electrical World reports.

At a Pan-American Western Petroleum company stockholders' meeting in Los Angeles directors of the Richfield Oil company were elected to the directorate of the Pan-American Western company. Newly elected officers were J. A. Talbot, president of the Richfield company, president; C. M. Fuller, John McKeon, J. F. Wallace, and E. Younge, vice presidents; R. W. McKee, secretary-treasurer; R. M. Sands, assistant secretary; John Mooney, assistant secretary-treasurer, and A. H. Stemler, assistant secretary-treasurer.

Midland Utilities company has purchased the Otterbein Light and Power company of Otterbein, Ind., which furnishes electric service in Otterbein and Montmorenci.

Interstate Railways declared quarterly dividend of 17½ cents per share payable Aug. 6, record July 20. This is a reduction from 35c quartely previously paid by the company. Iron Products corporation declared a dividend of 65c a share on the common stock, payable July 27 to stock of record July 16. A dividend of $1.37½ was paid on March 31.

Steel producers in the Youngstown area expect better average business than a year ago. Schedules of iron and steel companies in the district will be resumed next week at 70 to 75 per cent of capacity.

Heavy melting steel scrap, No. 1, is 25c a ton lower in the Pittsburgh district, sales having been made at $13.75. Dealers look for an advance in price should large tonnage orders appear, as the metal is comparatively scarce.

Shipments of the Peerless Motor Car company in June totaled 1,050 cars, compared with 1,150 cars shipped in May and 1,200 cars shipped in June of last year.

Receipts of lead in ore during May by smelters in the United States and Mexico were 75,723 tons against 66,875 in April and 78,217 in May, 1927, the American Bureau of Metal Statistics reports.

More Gold Goes to France; May Exceed $312,000,000

New York, July 7.—(AP)—Another shipment of about $12,000,000 in gold left New York early today for France. This shipment is expected to be followed shortly by additional consignments totaling $56,000,000 from the supply "earmarked" for French account in the federal reserve vaults here.

A total of $256,560,000 in gold has gone to France since the movement began last December. Should present schedules be carried out, the outflow would exceed $312,000,000. More than $81,000,000 went out in June.

N. Y. Clearing House Banks Show Increase in Deposits

New York, July 7.—(AP)—The weekly statement of the New York clearing house associations shows: Total surplus and undivided profits, $34,200 increase; net demand deposits [average], $146,021,000 increase; time deposits [average], $35,456,000 decrease; clearings week ended July 7 [five days], $7,796,549,591; clearings week ended June 30, $6,911,247,043; clearings this day, $1,248,760,465.

New Raw Silk Exchange Seat Is Sold for $5,500

New York, July 7.—(AP)—First purchase of a seat on the newly organized national raw silk exchange was effected today when J. S. Bache & Co. purchased for another the membershipx of P. P. Belford. The purchase price was announced as $5,500, a gain of $3,000 over the price of charter memberships. Mr. Belford plans to devote his time to expanding operations in the rubber exchange.

CHICAGO STOCKS SHOW STRENGTH IN ACTIVE TRADE

Chicago stocks were fairly active considering the usual two hour week end session yesterday, and several good gains were registered.

A feature of the trading was Pines Winterfront, which sold up to a new high of 123 at the close, a net gain of 4½ on the day. The largest gain was established by Kalamazoo Stove, which advanced 6¾ to 112. Godchaux Sugars hopped into the active list and finished 3½ higher at 9. Swift International and Borg-Warner each closed up a point and fractional gains were made by Zenith Radio and Chickasha Oil. Bendix "B" eased a major fraction. On small sales, Inland Wire was up a point.

Review of the Week.

Stocks closed higher and picked up in activity during the week just closed. Total sales were 278,000, compared with 231,000 in the previous week, and 119,500 in the corresponding period of last year. For the year to date there were 14,704,827 shares traded in, compared with 4,635,500 a year ago.

The biggest gains was established by Quaker Oats, which finished 27 points higher on a turnover of only 717 shares. Bendix "B," one of the most active of the period, climbed 13 points while the Indian Refining issues were pushed up 12¾ and 10⅝, respectively. Great Lakes Dredge advanced 10 points, Kalamazoo Stove was up 9 points and Borg-Warner closed 6¼ higher. Midland Steel Products worked 7 points up.

Other Sizeable Gains Shown.

Gains of more than 3 to more than 5 points were established by over a dozen issues, including Commonwealth-Edison, Standard Dredging, Zenith Radio, Bastian-Blessing, Galesburg-Coulter Disc, Public Service no par, Pines Winterfront, McQuay-Norris, Stewart-Warner, and Sears Roebuck. About thirty other stocks registered net gains of one to three points on the week.

There were few soft spots, the most important being U. S. Gypsum, which sold off 5⅛. Central and Southwest declined 2¼, while losses of a point or so were felt by Ward "A," Spiegel, May, Stern, Campbell, Wyant and Cannon Foundry, Q. R. S., Waukesha Motors, Sutherland Paper, Grigsby-Grunow, and American Ship Building.

In the bonds, traction issues featured the trading with a few good gains. Chicago Railways first 5s sold up 3 points and Chicago City Railway first 5s advanced 2½. Metropolitan Elevated first 4s gained 2 points and Chicago City and Connecting Railway 5s were up a point.

In order to effect a sufficient distribution of its "B" stock to permit listing of the issue on the exchange, Davis Industries, Inc., is offering class "A" stockholders the privilege of exchanging their shares on the basis of 136 class "B" for each 100 class "A" shares. Fractional "B" shares will be paid in cash.

Daily Business Failures Average Above a Year Ago

New York, July 7.—With the returns covering five business days only, owing to Wednesday's holiday, failures in the United States, reported to R. G. Dun & Co. this week number 357. A satisfactory comparison with last week's statistics is only possible by reducing the figures to a daily average—this week, the average is a little more than 71 per day, whereas it was about 70 last week. A year ago, when the statement also covered five business days, the total of all defaults was 313, or 44 less than during the present week.

Bank clearings this week at all leading cities of the United States total $11,542,624,000, or 14.9 per cent in excess of the amount reported for the corresponding week of last year.

June Building Contracts Set Record for That Month

New York, July 7.—June construction contracts in territory east of the Rocky mountains broke all previous records for that month, amounting to $650,466,200, the second highest monthly total on record, F. W. Dodge corporation reports. The half year's volume was $3,444,867,500, largest half year total, and 8 per cent more than the first half of 1927.

New Financing Ebbs as Rates on Money Rise

New York, July 7.—[Special.]—A combination of unsettled money market conditions and the Fourth of July holiday kept new bond offerings down to $13,148,000 in the week ended yesterday. This was by far the lowest total of this year and comparing with $114,580,000 last week and $49,695,000 in the corresponding week of last year. The offerings, by groups, of this and last week follow:

Bonds.	This week.	Last week.
Foreign	$ 3,400,000	$ 23,000,000
Industrial	2,850,000	63,400,000
State and munic.	2,798,000	21,730,000
Public utilities	1,600,000	6,450,000
Railroad	1,500,000	....
Miscellaneous	1,000,000	....
Totals	$13,148,000	$114,580,000

Credit Situation Delays Issues.

For several weeks the high money rates and the lagging tendency in the bond market have held back a considerable number of foreign and domestic offerings that had been under negotiation, and this situation was intensified on last Monday when the call money rate advanced to 10 per cent, its highest point since 1920, amid the general confusion caused by tremendous disbursements of dividends and interest, demands for currency for holiday purposes and month end settlements.

Although this was followed by a drop in the call loan rate to 5 per cent, conditions remained unsettled and the general tendency among investment houses was to postpone the flotation of new issues until a later date. New offerings of stocks contrasted similarly during the week.

Small Offerings in Prospect.

Under ordinary conditions, the total of this week would constitute an exceptionally small aggregate for one day of new financing. The largest issue of the week was a $3,400,000 loan to the Hungarian Discount and Exchange bank. Offerings throughout the other groups were correspondingly small.

New state and municipal financing scheduled for this week totals $19,452,990 as compared with $14,686,870 last week and $24,085,870 in the previous week. The largest piece of municipal financing to be sold this week will be $3,200,000 of San Francisco 4½ per cent bonds.

A small decline in governmental financing for the first six months of this year is shown in a compilation just made. The total for the period was $1,144,000,000 as compared with $1,169,000,000 in the corresponding period of last year.

Report Lumber Situation Best in Last Five Years

Washington, D. C., July 7.—The lumber movement in the first half of 1928 showed a more favorable relationship between supply and demand than existed at any time in the last five years, and the trade appears to be sanguine regarding the last half of the year, says the National Lumber Manufacturers association. The movement for the week ended June 30 continued at the high level of earlier in the year. Unfilled orders of 270 southern pine and west coast mills were 713,473,467 feet, against 752,182,482 feet for 267 mills the week before.

Consolidated Gas Proxies Assure Success of Merger

New York, July 7.—The management of Consolidated Gas company has received proxies representing more than the necessary two-thirds of voting stock, assuring completion of the merger with Brooklyn Edison company at a special meeting of Consolidated Gas stockholders on July 16. The electric properties of the combined companies will form the largest power grouping in the world in point of horsepower served, it is said, with annual output of three and a half billion kilowatt hours.

Canadian Statistics Show Rising Tide of Prosperity

OTTAWA, Ont., July 7.—Of the ten business indicators reported by the bureau of statistics as at July 1, nine show a rising tide of prosperity as compared with June of last year. Coal mining production and employment figures form the exception. Those showing progress are: General employment, pig iron production, steel production, bank debits, car loading, building permits, imports, exports, and coke production.

STOCK MARKET RESUMES RISE AS WEEK ENDS

YESTERDAY'S AVERAGES

	High.	Low.	Last.	Net chge.
25 railroads	131.88	131.01	131.22+	.47
50 stocks	191.83	190.57	191.00+	.37

New York, July 7.—[Special.]—The stock market rallied in today's week-end session from the reactionary tendencies of yesterday. The leading stocks opened higher and ruled strong throughout the two hour trading period.

Pool operations again played an important part in the strength of the market. While they did not attract much public participation, they were able to force considerable short covering by disillusioned bear traders. There was some profit taking in the second hour, but it served only to reduce early advances and did not check the upward course of prices. Trading was in moderate volume, with total transactions of 772,600 shares.

Credit Conditions Debated.

The credit situation continued to be the chief topic of interest. While the call loan rate of 5½ per cent established on Friday held over the week-end, traders were divided in opinion as to the future trend of money rates. The comparatively low rate fixed on the new government bond issue offers some assurance that treasury officials do not expect tight money.

On the other hand, the federal reserve board continues pressure against the member banks to reduce their borrowings, which would have to be done through curtailing credit for speculative purposes with the autumn commercial demand not far distant. The consensus is, therefore, that moderately firm rates will prevail for several months.

Standard Industrials Strong.

Among the standard industrials, General Motors crossed 194 for a new high on the current movement, but eased off and finished with a fractional net gain. Rumors continued that a stock dividend of 33⅓ or 50 per cent will be declared next month. DuPont, which holds a large interest in General Motors, and the other motor shares followed the leader. Hudson Motor advanced 3⅝ points and smaller gains were made by DuPont, Eaton Axle, Peerless Motor, International Combustion, and Hupp Motor.

United States Steel advanced 1¼ points on the chance that its report for June, which will be issued next Tuesday, will show an increase in unfilled orders. Midland Steel Products preferred soared 13 points and Vanadium Steel gained more than a point. Radio corporation was up 1¾ points.

Specialties Show Upturn.

Among the specialties Johns Manville jumped 6½ points on buying inspired by the continued high rate of building construction and the end of a price war prepared building material companies. Expectation of another record breaking month in mail order sales sent Sears Roebuck and Montgomery Ward up 3⅝ and 2⅛ points respectively.

Recent reports of high sales volume also benefited the chain store issues. National Tea rose 4 points, while Woolworth and Kresge Department Stores gained more than two points each.

The oil group was featured by the action of the Indian Refining issues, the preferred soaring 13 points and the common and common certificates rising 4½ and 2¾ points, respectively. Chickasha Oil gained 2½ points. But Houston Oil declined 3 points.

The railroad group was strong. The Illinois Central issues gained a point or two in response to the favorable court decision permitting sale of air rights over its Chicago terminals. Texas and Pacific rallied 8½ points and smaller gains were made by the Chicago Great Western issues, St. Paul preferred, Alton preferred, St. Louis Southwestern, Union Pacific, and Wabash.

FOREIGN TRADE IN MAY BETTER THAN YEAR AGO

Washington, D. C., July 7.—(AP)—Gains in American foreign trade for May were due chiefly to increased business activity between the United States and Europe.

Commerce department figures today dealing with the month's foreign trade disclosed that Europe purchased American goods during the month to a total of almost $17,000,000 more than like purchases in the same month last year, while the United States in return bought $5,000,000 more of European goods than it did in the same month of 1927. Exports and imports for the month for the principal world divisions, as compared with the same month a year ago:

EXPORTS.	May, 1928.	May, 1927.
Europe	188,172,013	171,773,172
North America	123,264,101	120,056,853

Oceana	5,587,114	4,389,304
Africa	6,616,897	5,271,371

Exports to Great Britain for May were $61,448,512, against $61,637,557 in the same month last year, while imports from that country were $35,031,836, against $31,469,041; exports to Germany were $32,838,268, against $31,367,102, and imports from Germany were $16,142,207, against $14,139,554. Exports to France were $18,537,593, against $18,085,801, and imports from France were $11,159,184, against $11,157,740.

SEEKS ORDINANCE FOR EXTENSION OF WACKER DRIVE

Ald. John J. Coughlin [1st] announced yesterday that he will submit to the city council at its next meeting an ordinance ordering the preparation of plans for a bond issue to extend Wacker drive from Michigan avenue to the outer drive.

Ald. Coughlin's proposed action is pursuant to Judge Hugo Friend's decision in the Illinois Central air rights case clearing the way for a skyscraper development in the district east of Michigan avenue and north of Randolph street. Previously, Ald. Coughlin has urged the Wacker drive extension several times without success. Now, he declared, it is imperative.

"With developments running into millions of dollars assured, the city cannot afford to wait longer in starting to make plans for this vital link with the business district," he said.

As a companion measure, Ald. Coughlin also will introduce an ordinance for widening and improving Lake street from Michigan avenue to the outer drive. This thoroughfare, he said, should be 100 feet wide.

Importance of Good Management.

The man who invests in stocks should realize that he is putting money into another man's business.

He is purchasing a part ownership in a business which is being conducted by someone else—usually strangers to him.

It may be a business about which the investor knows nothing.

At any rate, he has no active part in its management and no voice in its affairs or policy except the limited—usually nominal—influence represented by the proportional voting power of his shares.

When a man puts money into his own business he knows just where it is going and how it will be used.

He has active supervision of all transactions and deals in the conduct of this business.

It is something that he understands and he knows how to secure profits by careful management and efficient methods.

Why, then, should an investor put his money into another man's business without knowing that that business is under careful and efficient management?

And yet a vast number of investors purchase stocks of companies about which they know practically nothing and concerning the management of which they know less.

Many men who, in the conduct of their own business exercise the greatest care and judgment, will take the profits thus earned and invest them blindly in another man's business—in other words put their profits to work for a stranger.

The most hard headed and foresighted business men often are short sighted investors. If money is worth working for it is worth safeguarding.

It is not necessary that the investor should understand the intricacies or details of the business in which he is investing, but it is of the utmost importance that he should know that the men who conduct this business know these things and are thoroughly competent to manage its affairs with care and efficiency.

Before purchasing any security the investor should carefully investigate the management of the company into which he intends to put his money.

No matter how potentially profitable the nature of the business may be, its success depends on the efficiency with which it is conducted.

And on this success the investor must depend for profit from his investment.

DRY GOODS.

NEW YORK, July 7.—(AP)—Cotton goods firmer in unfinished goods division, some prices being slightly higher. More interest shown in bleached cottons and further small lot buying of wash fabrics reported. Curtailment of production this week so general and effective that efforts are now under way to bring about the curtailment for three weeks more. In the weeks beginning July 30, Aug. 27 [including Labor day], and Sept. 24. Raw silk steady. Silk velvets and crepes sold better for fall. Printed linens and handkerchiefs make up bulk of current linen business. Burlap steady to firmer.

PRODUCE MARKETS

Hot weather had a deteriorating effect on potatoes held in cars on track, as many cars arrived from Arkansas and the southwest in general in more or less of a heated condition. Demand was fair and prices on sacked stock lower at 50c to $1.10, depending upon condition. Arrivals were 55 cars and 337 cars were on track.

Trade in butter and eggs was light at unchanged prices. Broilers were in demand and supply light at higher prices, 32c.

The Chicago mercantile exchange will hold no sessions on Saturday during July and August and first week in September.

EMPLOYES FORM CLUBS TO SEEK RAIL BUSINESS

The 75,000 employés of the Chicago & Northwestern railroad have undertaken voluntarily a new relationship with the road's management. They have started in to organize local "go-getter" clubs in important cities and towns in the railroad's territory for the purpose of boosting business.

The employés already have organized sixteen clubs, the general purposes of which are set forth as being to bring about "more efficient operation of our railroad, through the practice of economy in the use of our time, material, and facilities, and also closer coöperation between departments, and to assist the officers."

One of the features of the clubs' work is the solicitation of freight traffic and passenger business by employés in all departments from tradesmen and others whom the employés patronize.

President Sargent says the work of the clubs is proving valuable to the management and that since the inauguration of the movement 739 suggestions, covering all phases of operation and traffic from the employés have been acted upon by the management. Of this number 63 per cent have been adopted and 15 per cent are still pending.

METALS.

NEW YORK, July 7.—(AP)—COPPER—European consumers continued to buy moderate amounts during the week for July-August shipment, while domestic business was quiet. Producers continue to hold steady at 14⅝ cents for electrolytic delivered in Connecticut Valley. TIN—Steady despite sharp reaction at London, but turned easy later and sold at lowest level of last four years. Estimated tin plate production for first half of the year figured greatest on record. LEAD—Prices held well and were not influenced by reaction abroad. ZINC—Steady and a fair consuming demand reported for July with some interest also noted for August. ANTIMONY—Dull with consuming interest estimated reduced by supply of recovered antimonial lead available.

ST. LOUIS, Mo.—[Special.]—LEAD—Firm at $6.15. ZINC—Slab, steady at $6.20.

NEW YORK CURB, BOND MARKETS SHOW FIRMNESS

New York, July 7.—(AP)—The curb market closed irregularly higher today. Week-end profit taking reduced many gains, but there was sustained buying of some automotive, mining, and industrial specialty shares.

Noranda Mines encountered profit taking at the higher levels and closed more than 4 points lower at 54¾. Leadership in the mining group was assumed by Bunker Hill, which closed more than 17 points higher at 140. Newmont, Consolidated Copper Mines, and Hudson Bay lagged.

Checker Cab, moving to a new top at 98, led the advance of automotive shares. Crock Wheel touched its previous high, 70, and Pines Winterfront A, Durant Motor, Triplex Safety Glass, and Wire Wheel made good gains.

Alabama Great Southern Jumps.

A feature of the industrial group was the 7¼ point rise of Alabama Great Southern. American Rayon Products, Warner Brothers Pictures, Niles Bement Pond, Aero Supply A, and Atlas Portland Cement also were strong.

Radio issues improved on buying encouraged by international developments looking to merger of communications companies. Marconi Wireless B and Spanish and General Receipts both touched new highs. Canadian Marconi improved fractionally.

Utilities were rather neglected, although American Light and Traction and Northern States Power A made small gains. United Light and Power A was in demand on reports of pending mergers. Oils were firmer, with Galena Signal Oil, old and new preferred, showing gains of more than a point each.

Bond Market Irregular.

Prices moved irregularly within narrow limits in the bond market today and trading was light, but there was a firm undertone and an increased demand for high grade issues.

Industrials were rather neglected and there was some week-end profit taking. Dodge Brothers 6s, Liquid Carbonic 6s, and U. S. Rubber 7½s were under pressure. Fisk Rubber 8s, Midcontinent Petroleum 6½s, Pure Oil 5½s, Andes Copper 7s, and a few others were active at higher levels.

St. Paul 5s of 2000 attracted most buying in the railroad group. Erie 5s, Northern Pacific 6s B, Denver and Rio Grande Western 5s, Central Pacific 5s, and New York Central 4½s also gained. Public Service of New Jersey 4½s again led the advance of Utilities. International Telephone and Telegraph 4½s and American Telephone and Telegraph 5s improved practically.

NORTH AND SOUTH ROADS AGREE ON LAKE COAL RATES

New York, July 7.—[U.P.]—Northern and southern railroads have reached an agreement on the lakes cargo coal rates cases after a five year controversy.

Officials of the interested roads refused to make an official statement on the terms of the settlement, but it is known that a differential of 35 cents a ton was fixed on lake cargo fuel from both northern and southern soft coal fields.

Southern roads have been holding out for a differential of 25 cents; northern lines wanted 45 cents.

The roads interested are: Pennsylvania, Chesapeake and Ohio; Louisville and Nashville; Norfolk and Western; Queen and Crescent; New York Central; Baltimore and Ohio; Wheeling and Lake Erie, and Pittsburgh and Lake Erie.

RAILROAD NOTES

Class I railroads on June 15 had 327,499 surplus freight cars in good repair immediately available for service. This was an increase of 9,129 cars compared with June 8, at which time there were 318,370 cars.

Freight cars in need of repair on June 15 totaled 147,990 or 6.6 per cent of the number on line. This was a decrease of 3,369 under the number reported on June 1, at which time there were 151,359 or 6.7 per cent.

"Although it is too early to say what June earnings will total, I believe our gross revenue and net operating income should be slightly below a year ago," said John M. Davis, president of the Lackawanna railroad. "This decrease is largely due to a falling off in anthracite tonnages, the usual decrease in passenger revenues and to a heavy maintenance program. Practically the same conditions caused a decline in May earnings. General merchandise and miscellaneous freight shipments are holding up well, while cars received from connections are running ahead of a year ago."

Locomotives in need of repairs on the Class I railroads of this country on June 15 totaled 8,850 or 14.8 per cent of the number on line. This was an increase of 429 locomotives compared with the number in need of such repairs on June 1, at which time there were 8,421 or 14.1 per cent.

Preliminary estimates for the Erie indicate that the June surplus before sinking fund charges will approximate $700,000, an increase of $300,000 over last year, when $400,000 was shown. This favorable showing was made despite a decrease in gross of $130,000 and a decrease in non-operating income of about $100,000. In June a year ago, gross revenues were $10,-[illegible], and non-operating income was [illegible].

In the week ended June 6, the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe railroad handled 37,-[illegible] loaded freight cars, compared with [illegible] cars handled during the corresponding week last year.

FINANCIAL NOTES

The treasury department announced that authorization given June 21 to purchase at the option of holders all third Liberty loan 4¼ per cent bonds tendered at 100 2-32 and accrued interest terminated as of close of business July 5.

WILD OATS
are watered by tears

THE young man who so recklessly sows his wild oats today is all too likely to see them watered by the tears of his loved ones in the future. For "Social" Diseases contracted in youth can, unless treated until a cure is certain, be the cause of much misery and suffering in later life.

Women and Children

A special department exclusively for women and children, with men and women physicians in attendance, is located at 72 E. Randolph St. Every facility is provided here for effective treatment, and the utmost privacy with the highest degree of comfort is assured.

Most of the still-born, deformed and feeble-minded babies . . . most of the cases of infantile blindness . . . most of the pelvic operations on married women . . . are due to "Social" Diseases. Likewise a large percentage of all insanity, all paralysis and apoplexy, all heart disease, kidney trouble and chronic rheumatism can be traced to these dangerous infections.

Thus every young man should give thought to the consequences before he deliberately exposes himself to "Social" Diseases. Let him pause and consider if it is worth while to risk not only his own health and happiness, but that of his future wife and children.

As for the man who is already infected, he should not permit another day to pass without obtaining proper treatment. And by this is meant the kind of treatment that only a reputable physician can give. For self treatment and the use of advertised medicines or "nostrums" is exceedingly dangerous. Such treatment may seem to help "Social" Diseases, but it allows them to spread throughout the body, where they sometimes hide for years before their destructive results begin to show themselves.

Hence the infected man who resorts to self treatment is only deceiving himself. While he thinks that he is being cured, the disease is intrenching itself more firmly in his system.

Therefore, if you know or suspect that you have a "Social" Disease, do not try to treat yourself. Go, instead, to a reliable physician, or come to the Public Health Institute. But whichever you do, be sure to continue treatment until pronounced cured by the attending physician!

Organized by public-spirited citizens NOT FOR PROFIT, the Public Health Institute offers the very best of medical treatment . . . privately, conveniently and at amazingly low cost. In fact, it costs less to be treated at the Public Health Institute than it does to attempt to treat and cure yourself.

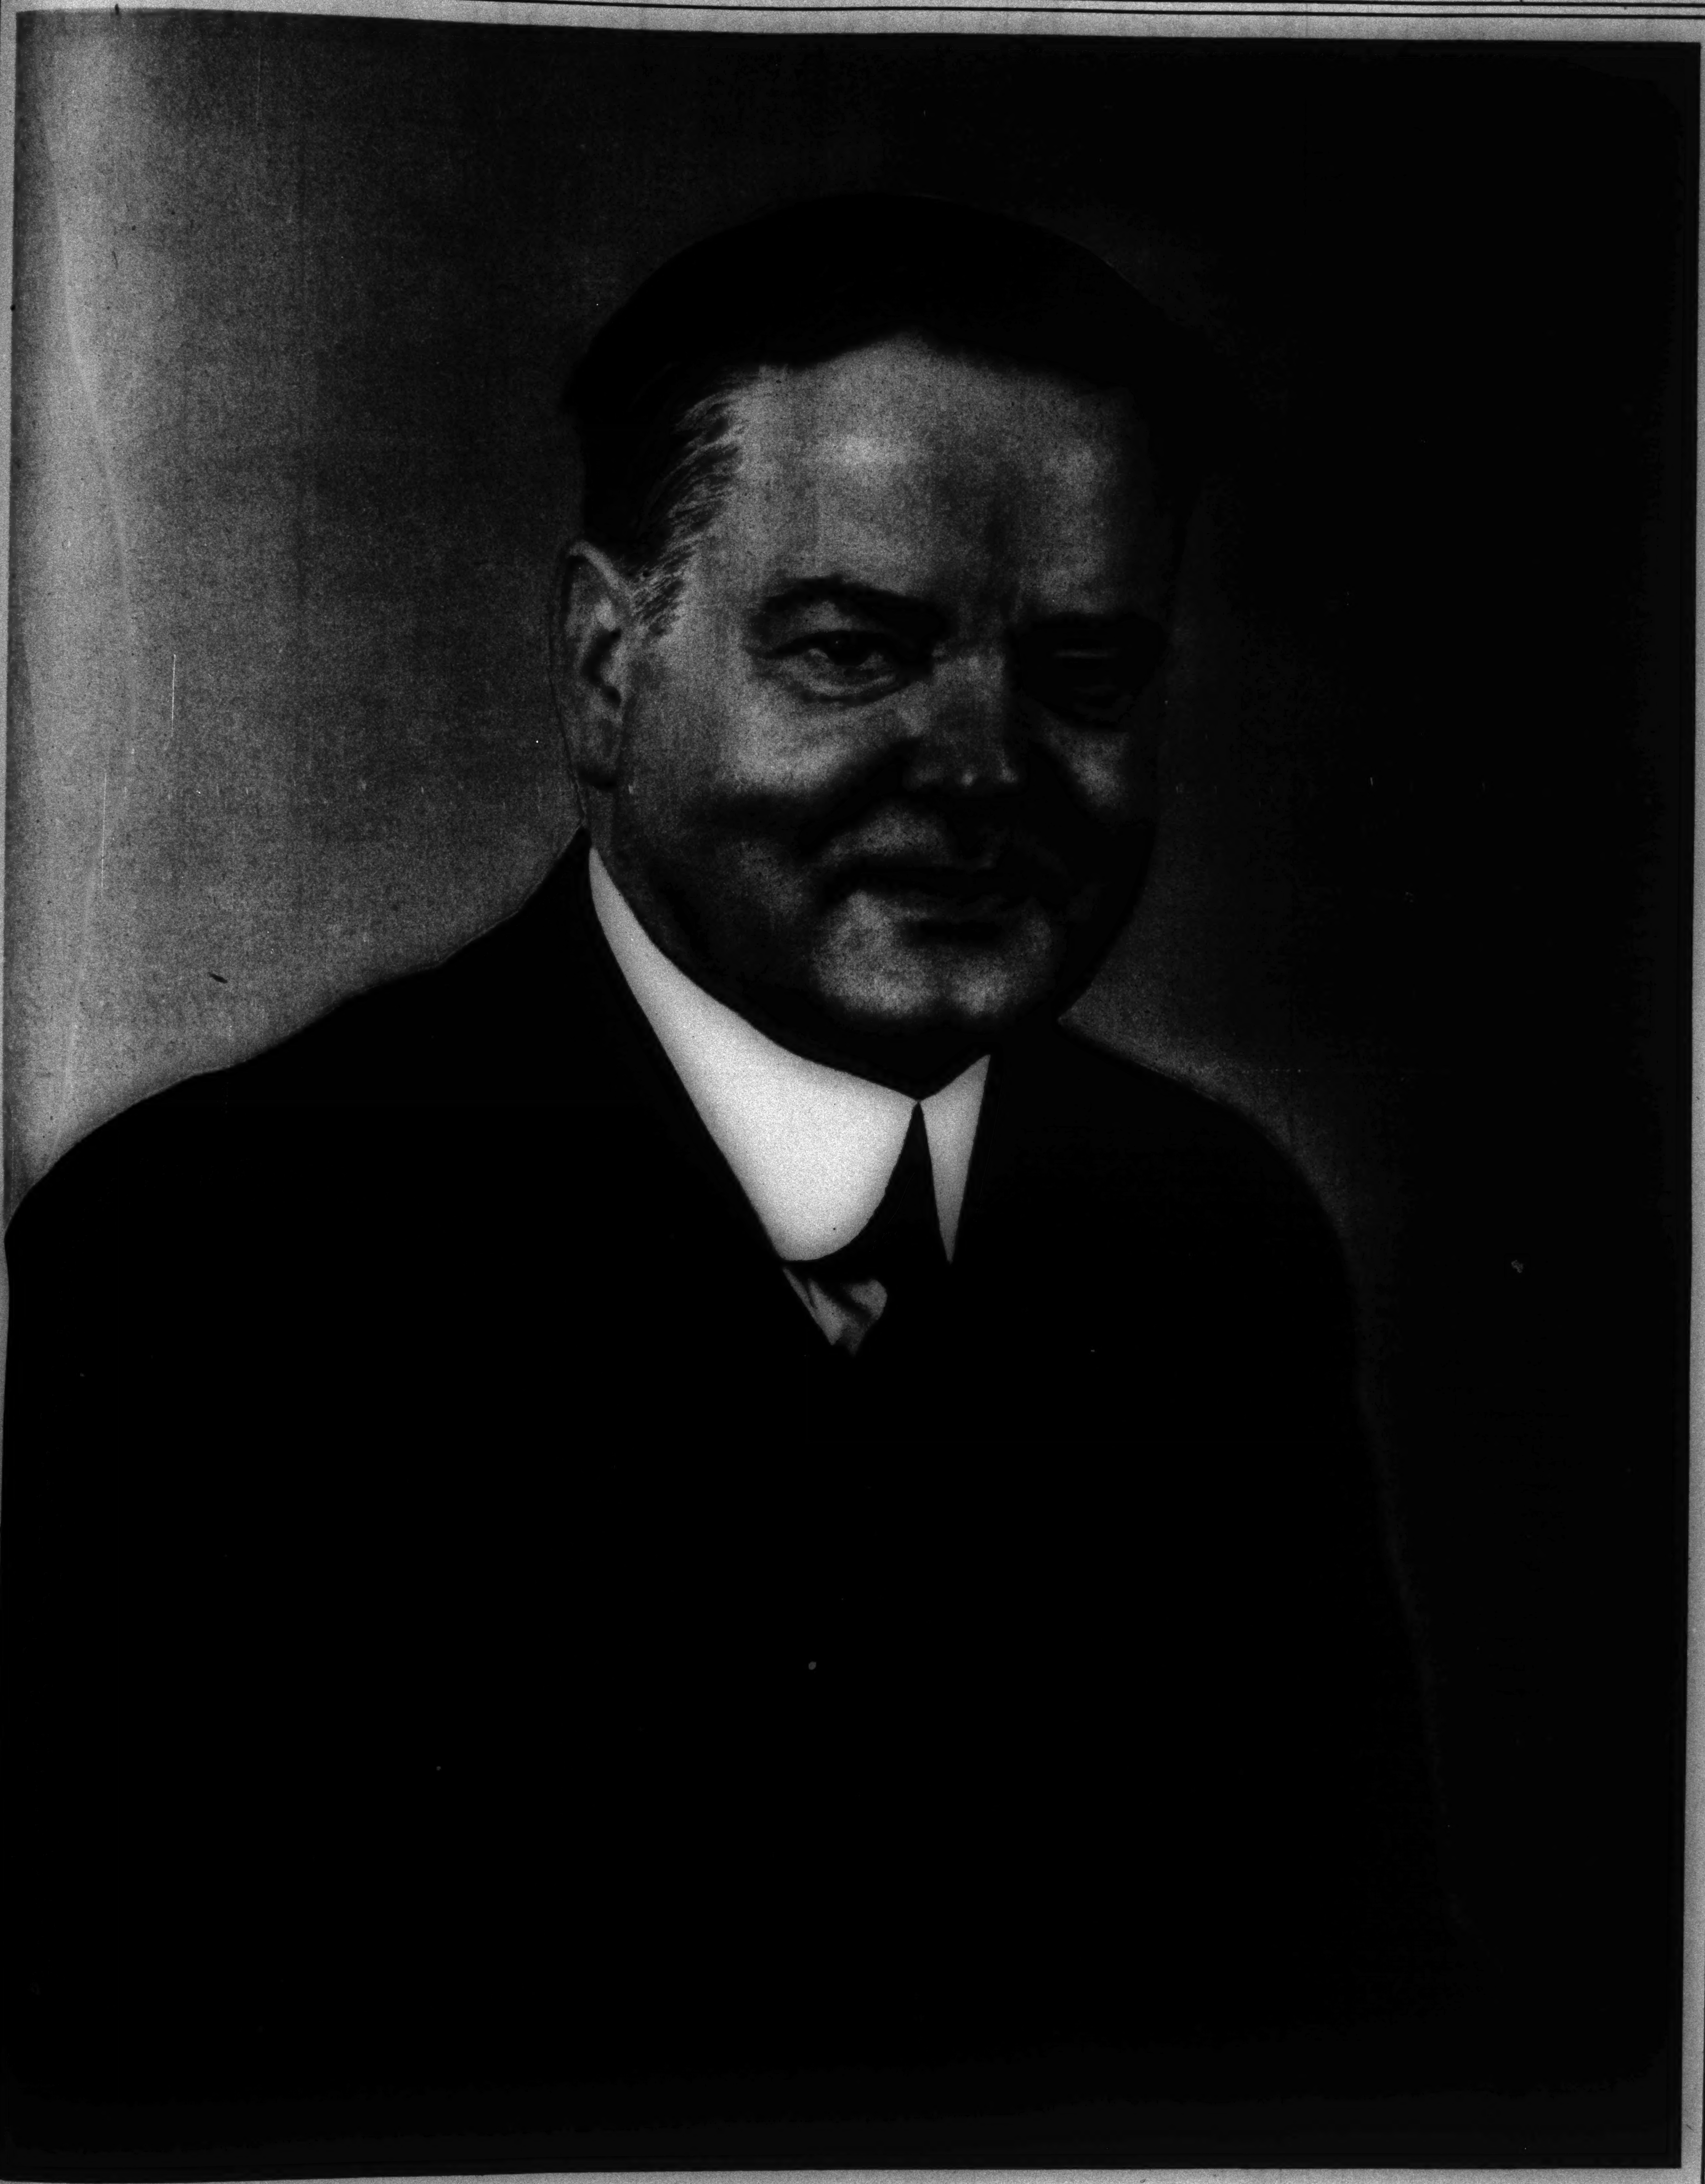
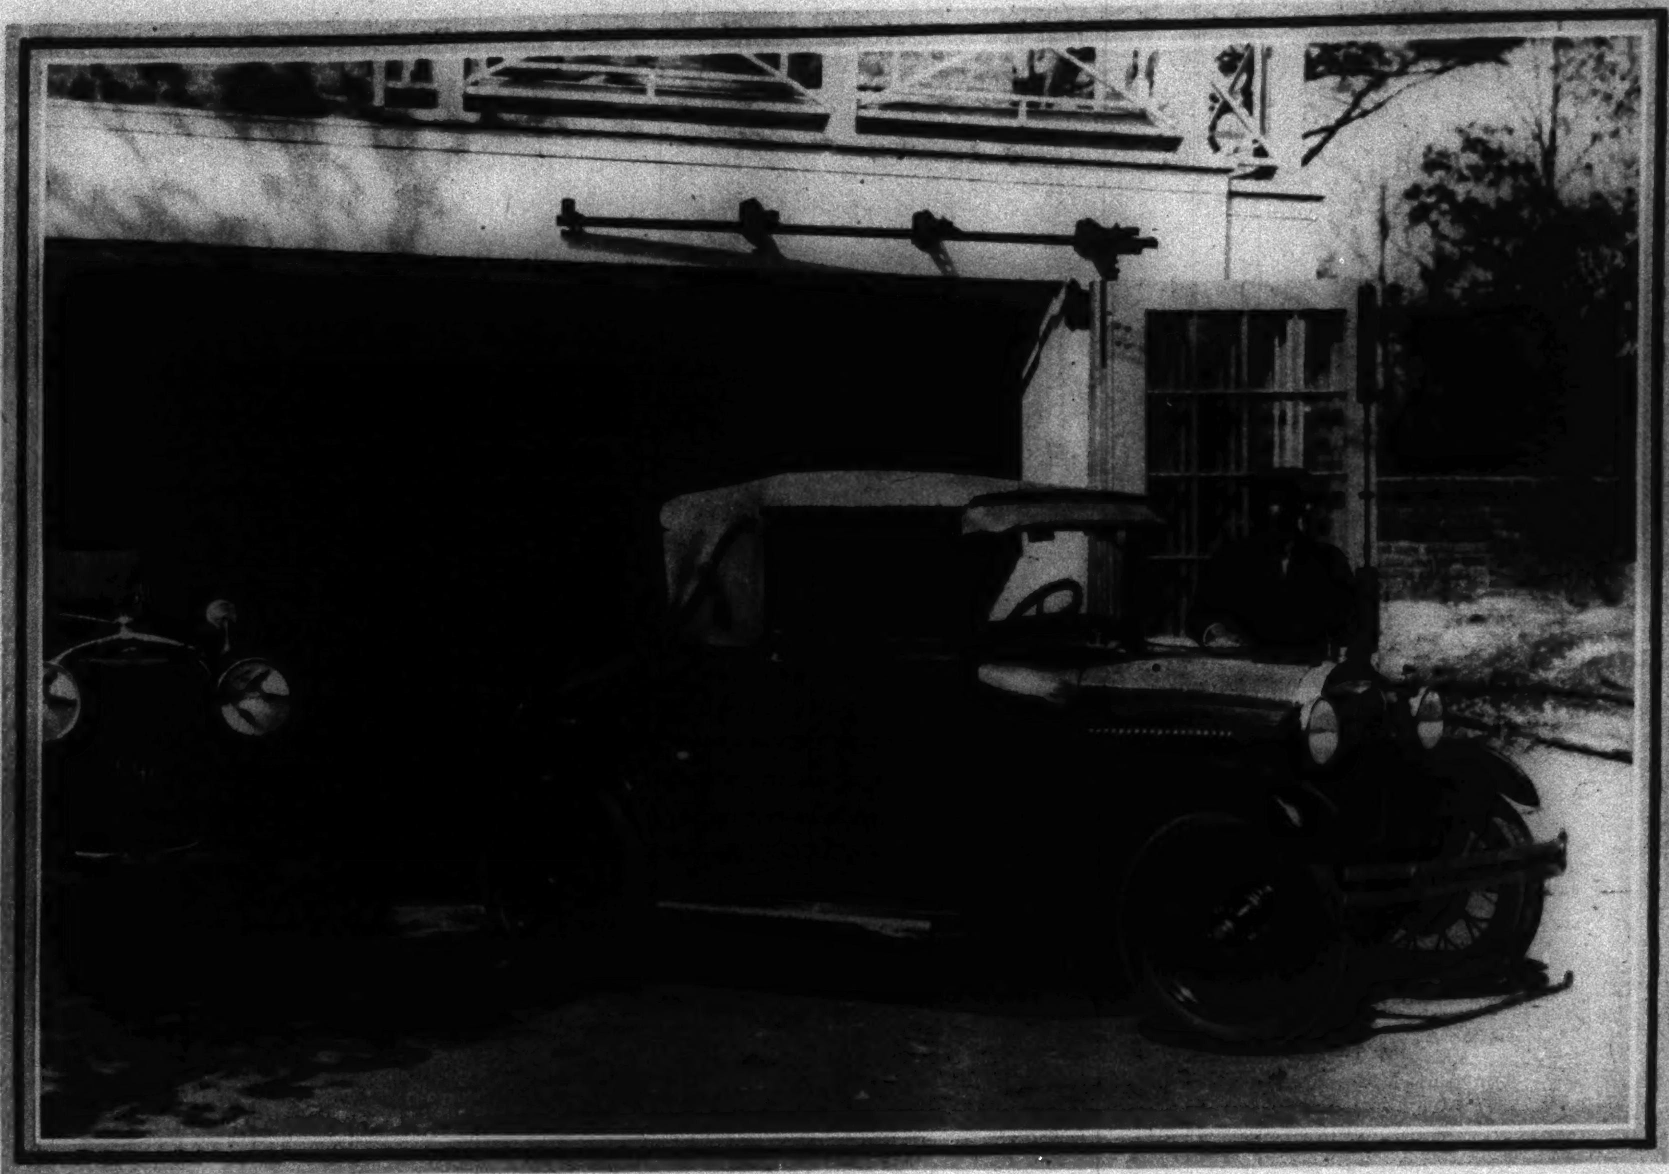
THE WORLD'S GREATEST NEWSPAPER

July 8, 1928



HERBERT C. HOOVER
Republican Candidate for President of the United States
(Color-photo by Godfrey Lundberg.)

The new Ford has been built to endure



The new Ford Sport Coupe is a great choice for the family needing two cars. You'll especially like to drive it because it's so alert and capable—so easy to handle.

Long life and economy of new model as important as its beauty, speed, safety and quiet comfort

THE remarkable performance of the new Ford is the direct result of the quality that has been built into every part.

It has beauty of line and color because beauty of line and color has come to be considered a necessity in a motor car.

Yet even more important than this outside beauty is the strength, efficiency and beauty of those parts which are on the inside—those vital mechanical parts which are the very heart of value and performance. It is well to look to this mechanical beauty when you buy an automobile.

Instantly you examine the body construction of the new Ford, its engine, its transmission, its oiling, cooling and ignition systems, you will understand some of the reasons for its speed, safety, comfort, quiet, reliability and economy of operation and up-keep.

An example of the quality that is built into the new Ford is the use of steel forgings instead of malleable castings and steel stampings. They are used throughout the chassis, except, of course, for the engine castings.

More steel forgings, in fact, are used in the new Ford than in almost any other car regardless of price.

Just what this means to every motorist is shown in the strength of the forged-steel spring perches alone. They will withstand 15,000 pounds pressure before indicating a permanent change in their structure.

Added strength, quiet and reliability also come from the number of electric weldings used in the new Ford. By the use of these weldings, one-piece parts of great strength replace those formerly made up of several parts bolted, riveted or soldered together.

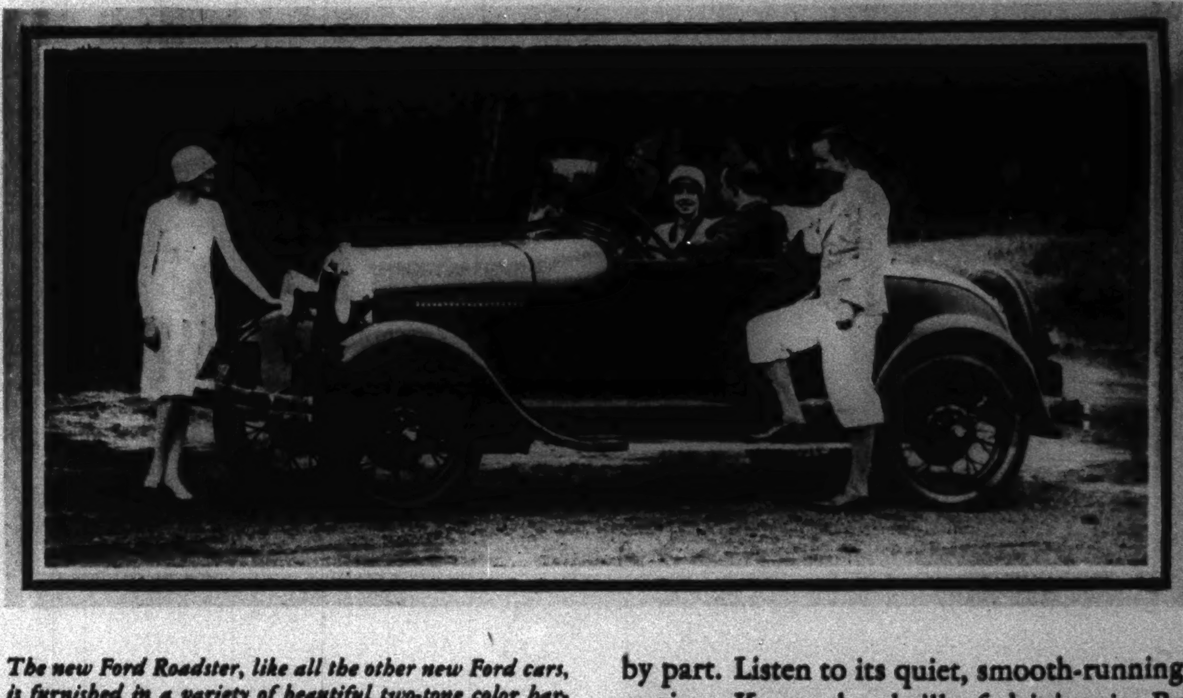
The perfecting of electric welding machines to do this work was the result of ten years of constant experimenting in shop and laboratory.

Some of the other features which show the strength and quality that have been built into the new Ford car are the steel bodies; the carbon chrome nickel alloy valves; the five-bearing camshaft; the heavy crankshaft which is statically and dynamically balanced and built to withstand a twisting stress up to 60,000-inch pounds; the aluminum pistons which were selected because of their light weight and heat-conducting qualities; the new pump, splash and gravity oil system; the standard gear shift with bronze, ball and roller bearings; the new battery, coil and distributor ignition; the low center of gravity and minimum unsprung weight which combine with the Houdaille hydraulic shock absorbers and the new transverse springs to make the new Ford such an easy-riding car; the Triplex shatter-proof glass windshield; the new steering gear which prevents road shocks from being transmitted to the hands of the driver and is unusually strong because the column and the housing of the steering gear mechanism are welded into a single all-steel unit; the mechanical four-wheel brakes; the seamless, all-steel torque tube; the new one-piece, welded, steel-spoke wheels; the three-quarter floating rear axle, and the all-steel rear axle housing.

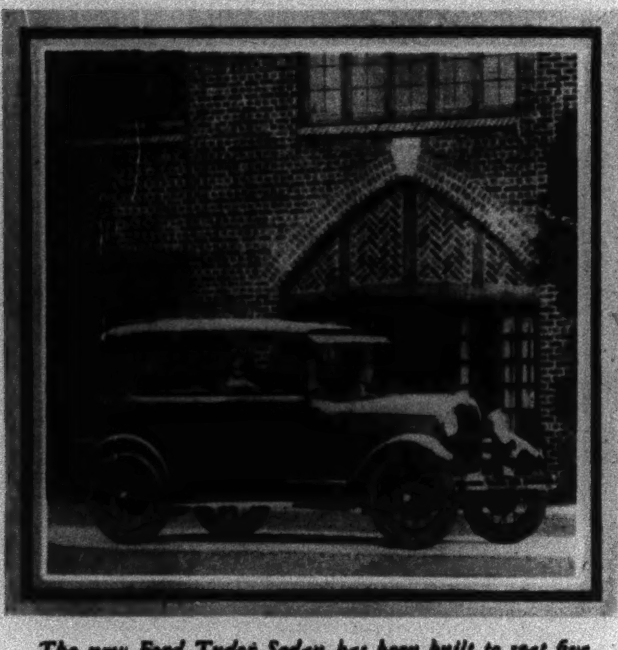
So we say to you—take a little while to see and inspect this new car at the nearest Ford showrooms. Examine it carefully, part by part. Listen to its quiet, smooth-running engine. Know the thrill of driving it. By its performance you will know there is nothing like it in design, quality and price.

The new Ford Roadster sells for $385; the Phaeton for $395; the Tudor Sedan for $495; the Coupe for $495; the Business Coupe for $495; the Sport Coupe, with wide, substantial rumble seat, for $550; the Fordor Sedan for $625. (F. O. B. Detroit.)

These prices include four Houdaille hydraulic shock absorbers, mechanical, internal expanding-shoe type four-wheel brakes, five steel-spoke wheels, electric windshield wiper on closed cars, speedometer, gasoline gage on instrument panel, dash light, mirror, combination stop and tail light, theft-proof coincidental ignition lock, high pressure grease gun lubrication, and Triplex shatter-proof glass windshield.



The new Ford Roadster, like all the other new Ford cars, is furnished in a variety of beautiful two-tone color harmonies. Triplex shatter-proof glass windshield is another feature you will appreciate.



The new Ford Tudor Sedan has been built to seat five people in comfort. Easy-riding, too, because it is equipped with four Houdaille hydraulic shock absorbers.

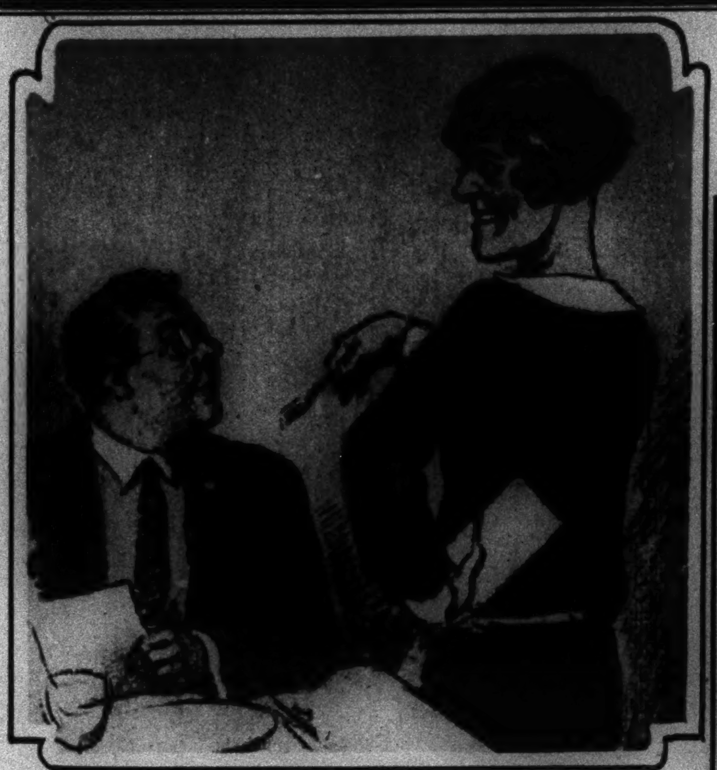
The Commercial House

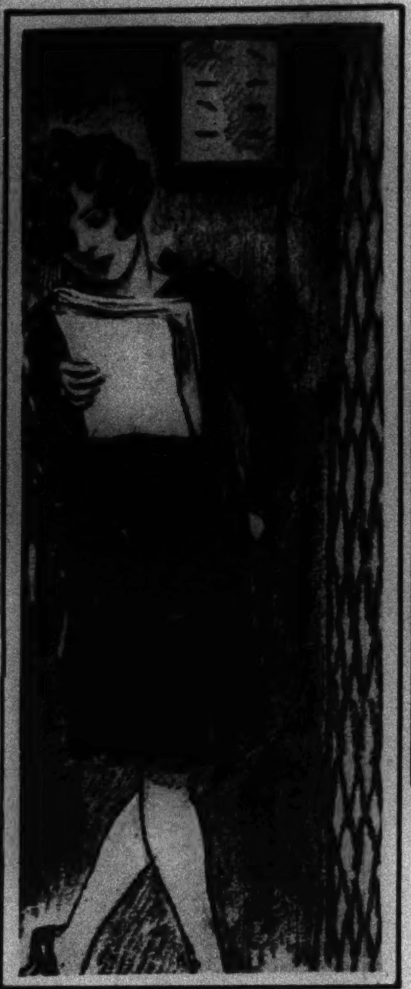
By W. E. Hill

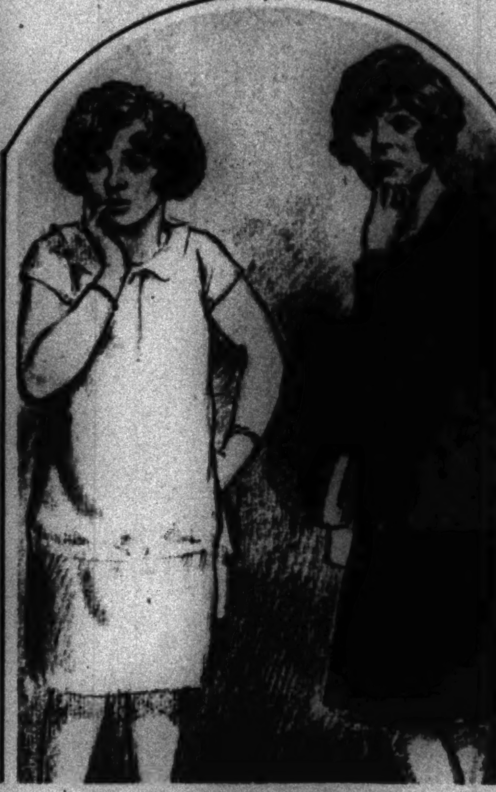
[Copyright: 1928: By The Chicago Tribune.]



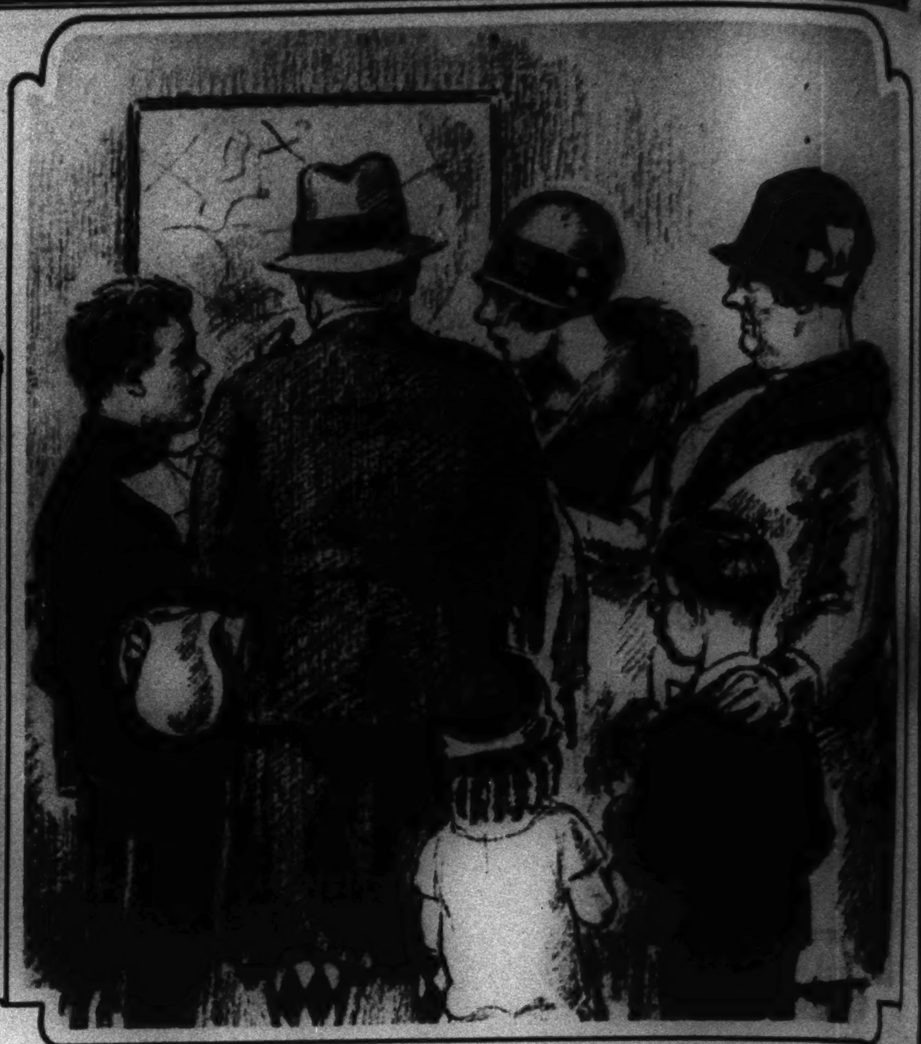
Good, clean fun. Edythe, the popular waitress of the Commercial House dining room (known of late as the Pompeian Room), knows just how to humor the traveling salesmen. Gets them over their grouches and feeling happy in two shakes of a lamb's tail—and that's pretty snappy working. This morning Edythe is making believe to hand Mr. Sultzgarber a fork, and every time he reaches for it she snatches it back. Mr. Sultzgarber is delighted.

The elevator (at right). "Leave me be, Howard!" I screamed madly; "you are a lascivious cur!" No wonder the Commercial House elevator service is not so hot this evening. Gracie, the elevator girl, is a great reader and dearly loves her "Passionate Confessions" magazine.

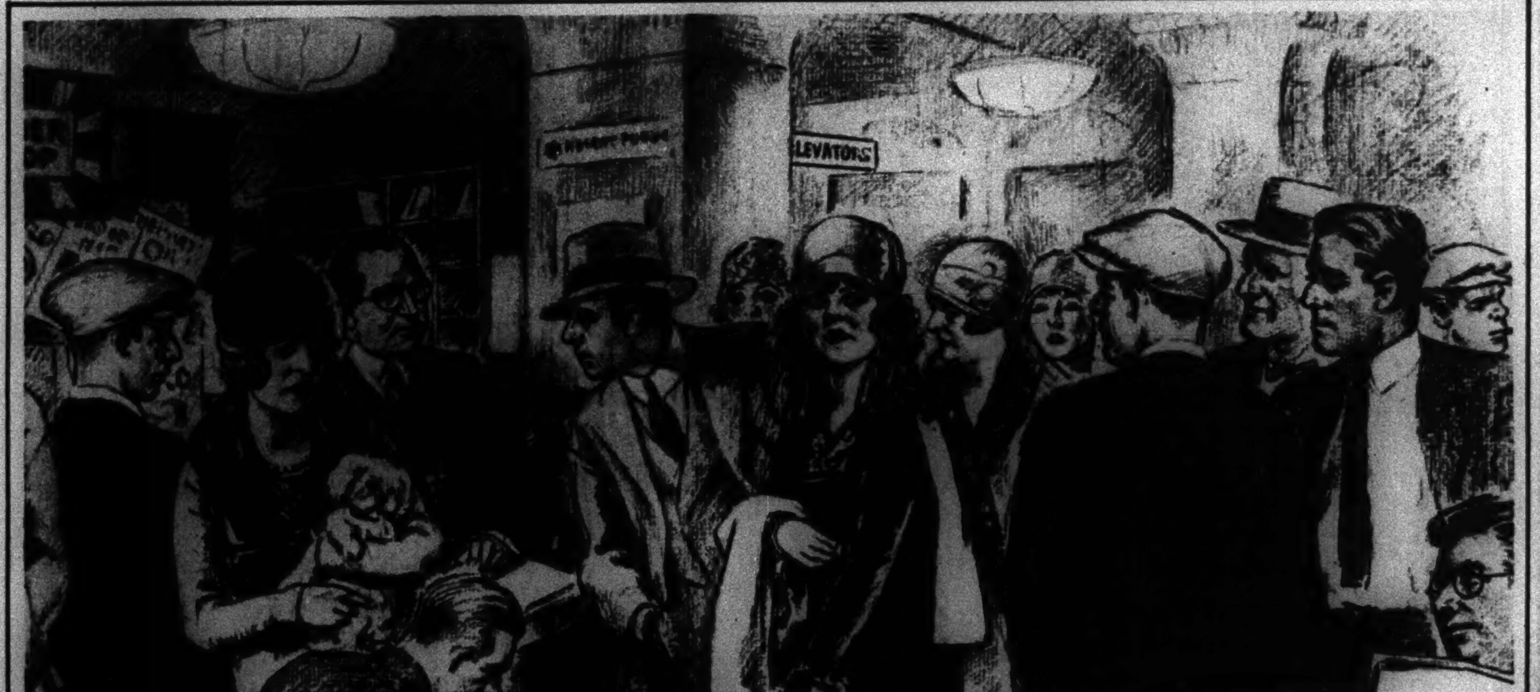




Lottie, the chambermaid, and Mrs. Noise, the housekeeper—two lovely girls as ever you'll meet—are peeking into a sample room full of the latest things in hats. They are almost crazy, what with wanting to try them on.

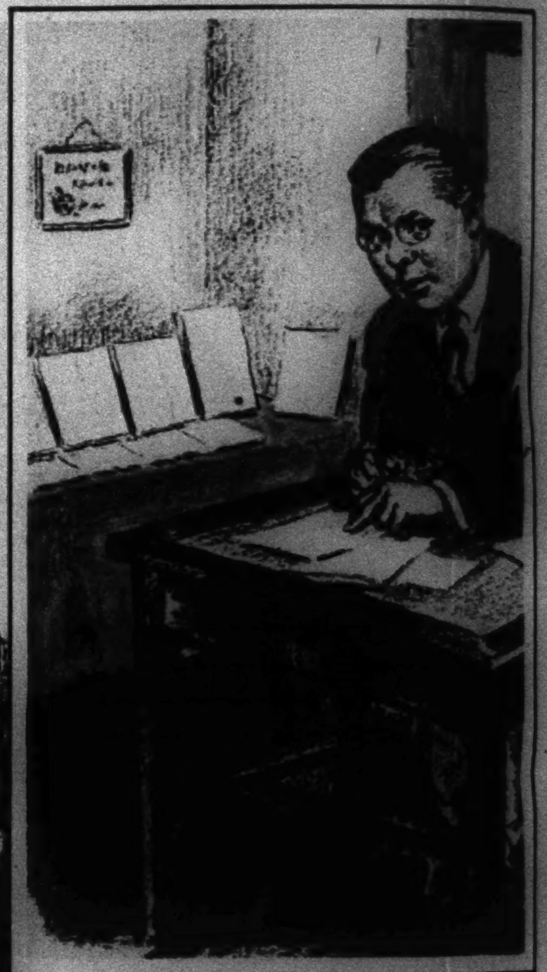


The tourists. Albert, the obliging bellhop, en route with a pitcher of cracked ice, helps the overnight tourist pick out a nice route. Albert's first aid is the longest way home with three long detours, but the tourists will be far away when they find out the extent of Albert's misinformation.

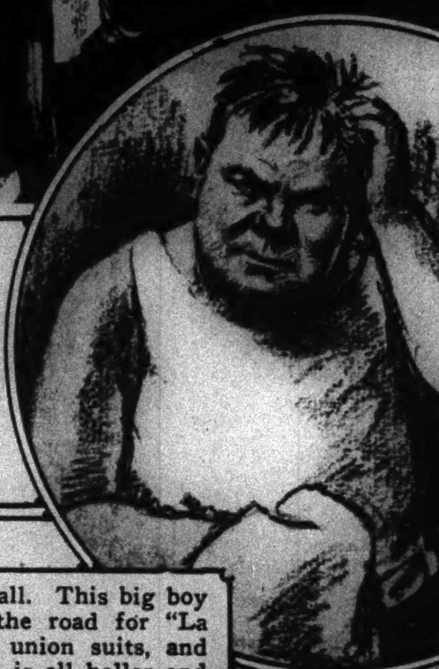


The hotel lobby. "Foibles of Folly," the big girl act from the bill at the Capitol, has just fluttered in to see what the Commercial House has to offer in the housing line. Six of the girls are going to team up with Mme. Lizette's parrot and monkey act in one room, thereby getting an appealing rate. Miss Bebe (Curly) Beeman, she with the long curls, is the vamp of the "Foibles" and hasn't taken herself to dinner since the act opened last October. Watch her. She's trying to make the visiting baseball team—entire—which is difficult, but possible.

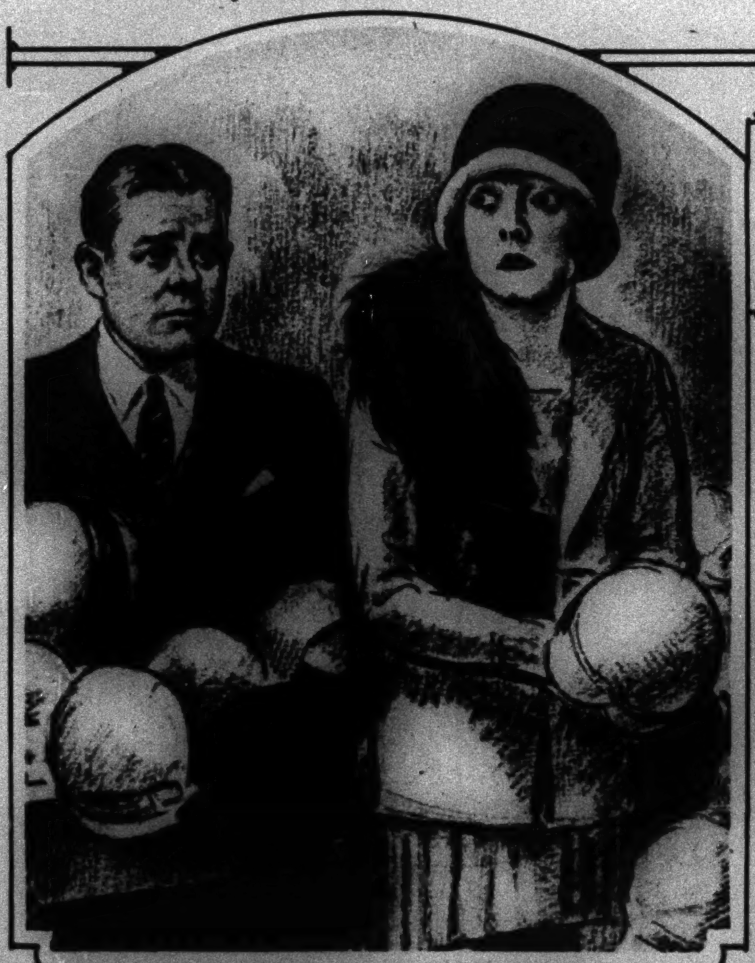
The bath girl. Hattie, although she spends her work hours in an atmosphere of ammonia fumes and roach bane, is very much above that sort of thing, and don't you forget it, big boy. She takes nobody's back talk. Hattie wears the biggest bar pin in the state.



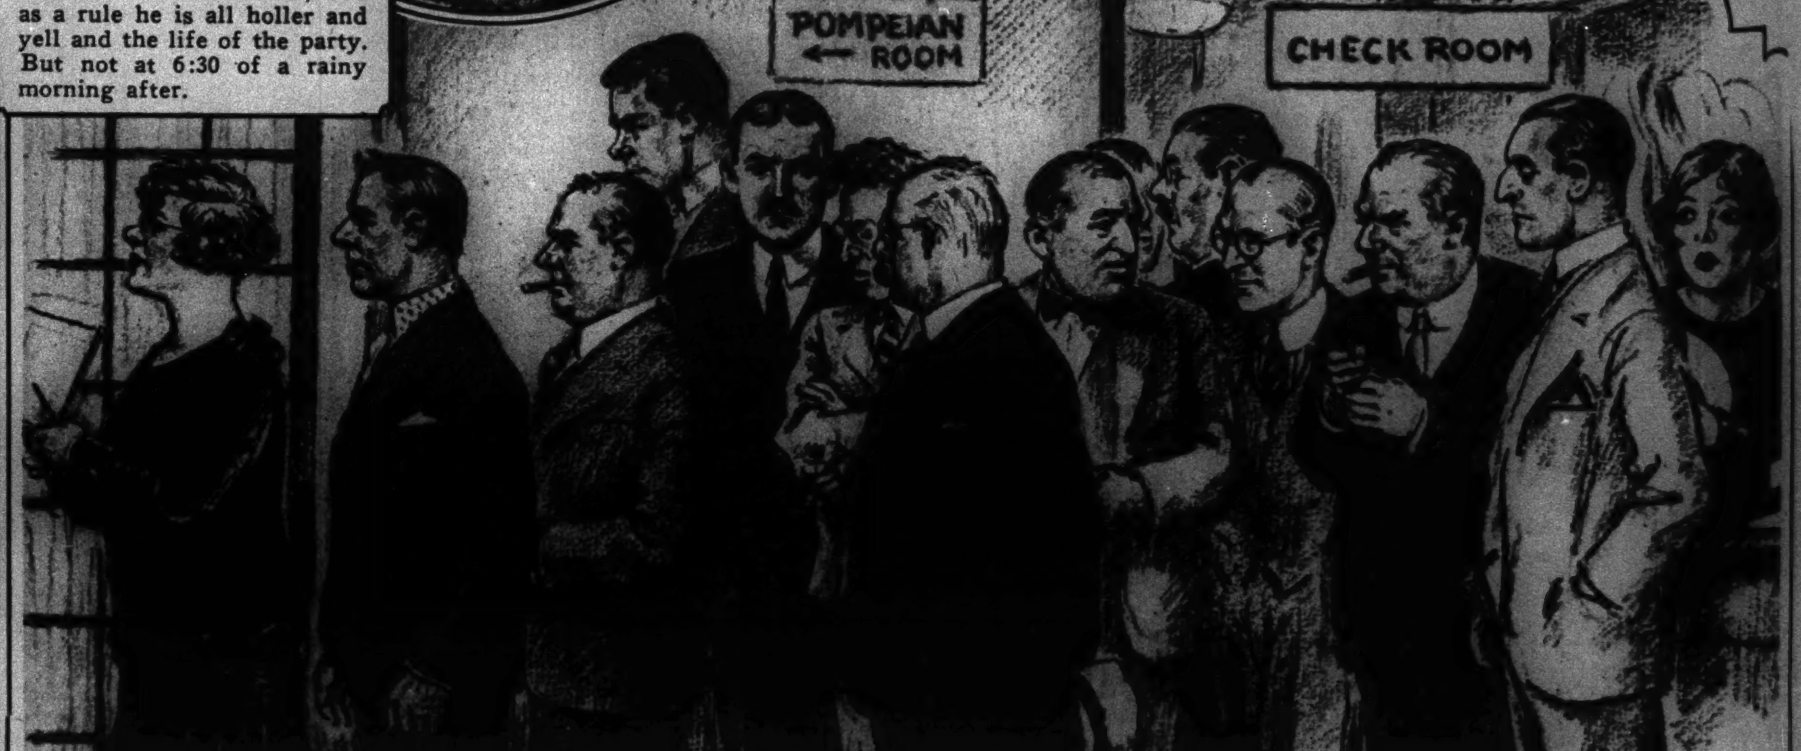
The sample room. "Yes, siree, I'm showing you a line of goods that haven't been shown to any other concern in this town!" This is what this big gift card novelty boy will hand the customers when they come to look over the swell assortment of Mother's day cards for 1929. And the birthday cards! Listen to this, will you—"Just a golden smile, and a lovelit glance, with oceans of kisses, to the most generous of aunts." This ought to go big. It's the last line that gets 'em. It sort of shows the aunt that the next move is hers.



The early call. This big boy travels on the road for "La Charmante" union suits, and as a rule he is all holler and yell and the life of the party. But not at 6:30 of a rainy morning after.



The successful salesman. Many wholesale houses pick out salesmen with big, appealing, saucer eyes that look as though some one had struck them. Lady buyers simply can't refuse a big order when the sales boy has that hurt look about the eyes.



The jury panel. Hazel, the chic headwaitress, is piloting a jury into the dining room. There's a holdover session at the courthouse. The jurymen are not so congenial, practically no two of them having a thing in common (except Mr. Dough, who works in the postoffice, and Mr. Heaney, who collects stamps), but in no time at all Hazel will, through her magnetic personality, have all hands giggling and going on like anything!

Yes ... a better way to wash dishes

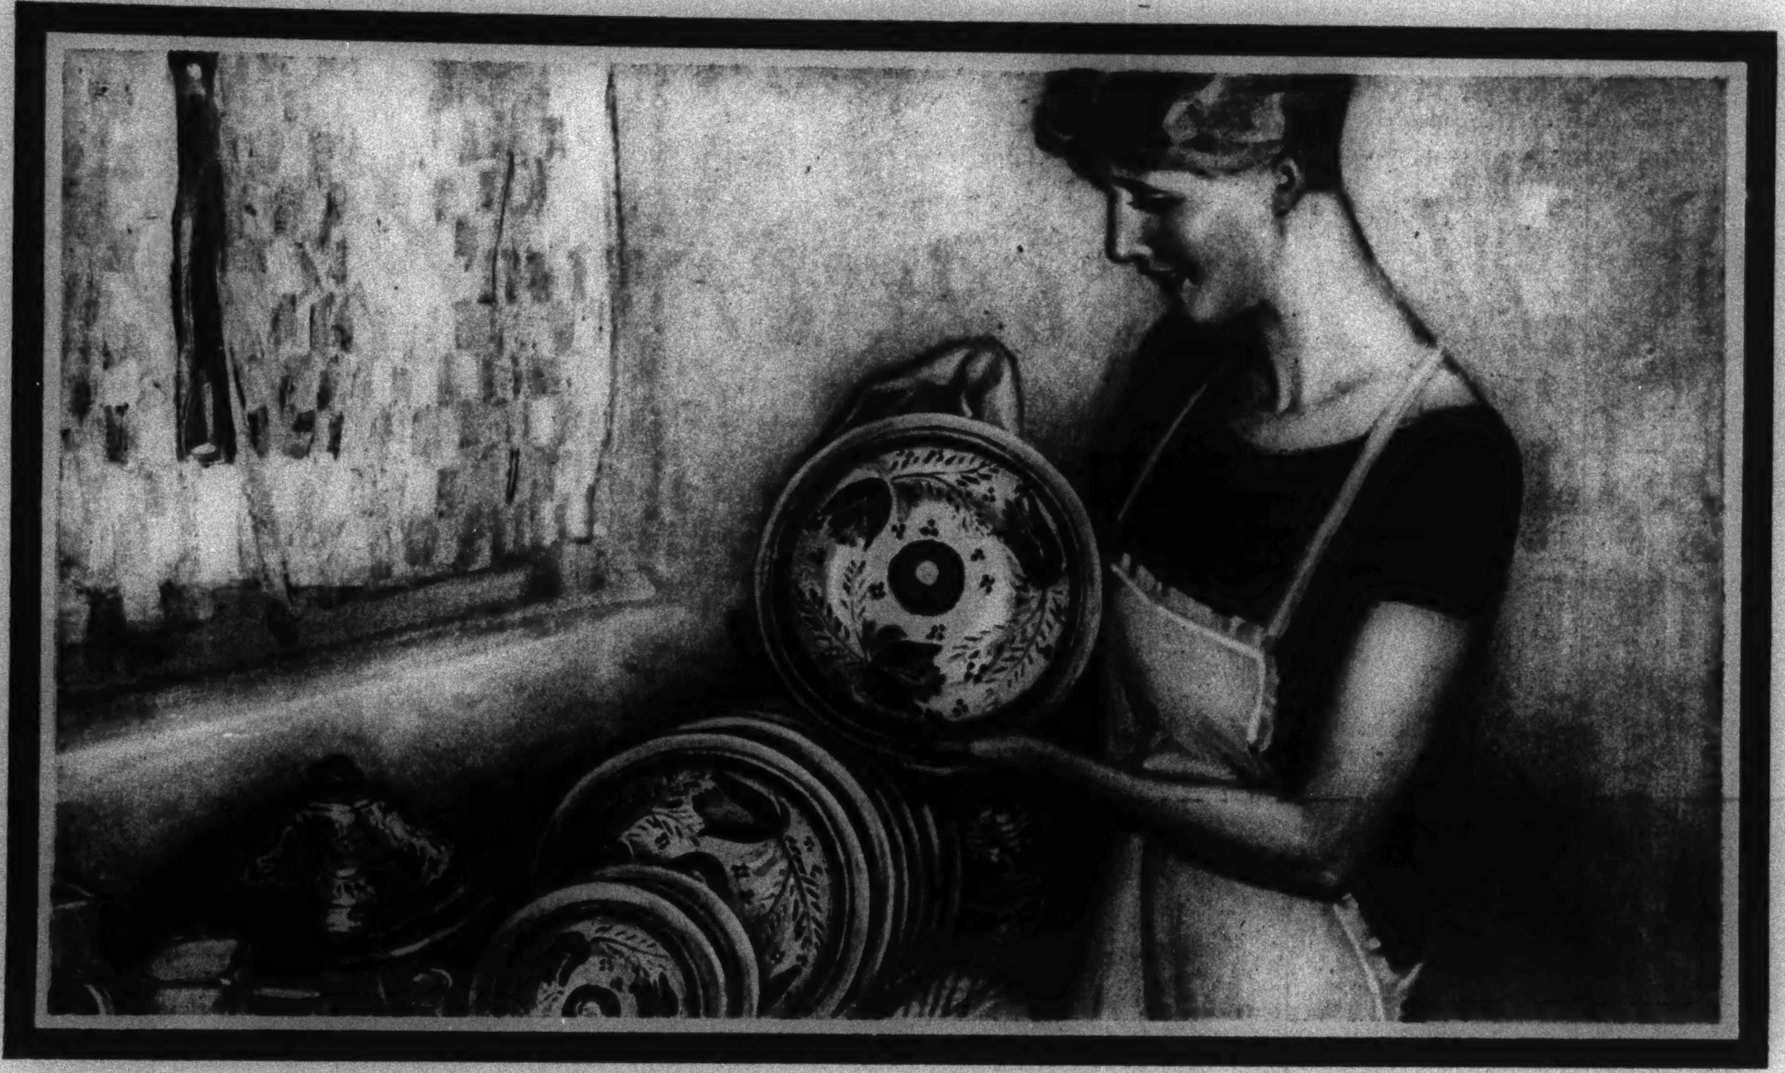
Dishes shine ... no wiping ... pretty hands safe!



WASH dishes the new scientific way—with Super Suds, the new bead-form soap which has swept from coast to coast in a few months' time!

Put your dishpan in the sink. Pour generously from the convenient, free-flowing Super Suds package. Turn on the hot water. Soap dissolves instantly.

Every woman knows how important it is to have a soap that dissolves quickly and completely.

And now—through this amazing new soap discovery—you can get a perfect soap solution in ten seconds. No other soap dissolves so fast.*

Super Suds replaces chips

Super Suds does not resemble any kind of soap you ever saw before. Super Suds is not like chips, flakes, powders. It is a new form of soap—tiny hollow beads, so tiny a dozen would cling to the tip of your finger, so frail you could crush them all with a brush of your thumb.

And because it is tissue-thin—four times as thin as chips—the thinnest soap ever made, or that can be made, Super Suds gives suds in a flash—goes to work instantly—not a particle of soap is ever wasted.

Try Super Suds in your home. Try it first for dishes. See how glassware sparkles. Silver never had so lovely a gleam. Not a trace of soapy film on china. No dish towel needed. Just hot rinse and drain. Your pretty hands kept white and smooth in spite of three dishwashings a day!

Bead Soap makes whiter wash

Many women who first discovered Super Suds for dishes say it washes clothes better than any soap they ever saw. Use it in your wash tub. A splendid washing machine soap too. One to three teacups give full, lasting suds—and no soap wasted. Makes white things whiter—saves one rinsing. Ends soap stains.

Use Super Suds all over the house—for windows, for woodwork, and for making the bathroom spick and span. Full directions on every package—and a valuable Octagon coupon, too. Save the coupons and get lovely premiums—our rebate to you!

Just ask your grocer for Super Suds—the biggest box of soap you ever saw for 10 cents

OCTAGON
Super Suds

MAKE THIS TEST

right in your own kitchen

Compare! Put Super Suds to this speed test ... A pan of warm water. Two strainers. In one a tablespoon of any chip or flake soap. In the other the same amount of Super Suds. Plunge both strainers into water. Stir briskly while you count ten. Then—lift both strainers! In one strainer—half of the chips still there. In the other, Super Suds all gone! ... quick—dissolving Super Suds saves dishwashing time, makes clothes whiter.

The Biggest Box of Soap for 10¢

FOR THE HONOR OF THE FAMILY—When baseball fans of Stanwood, Wash., wish to see a game they call upon the families of Mr. and Mrs. John Sande and Mr. and Mrs. John Wagness. Each boasts a complete nine. In fact, the Sandes, pictured above, have one left over for mascot.

PLAYED TO THE NINES are the games between these Wagnesses and the Sandes. The two teams are so evenly matched that the town title is still in dispute.

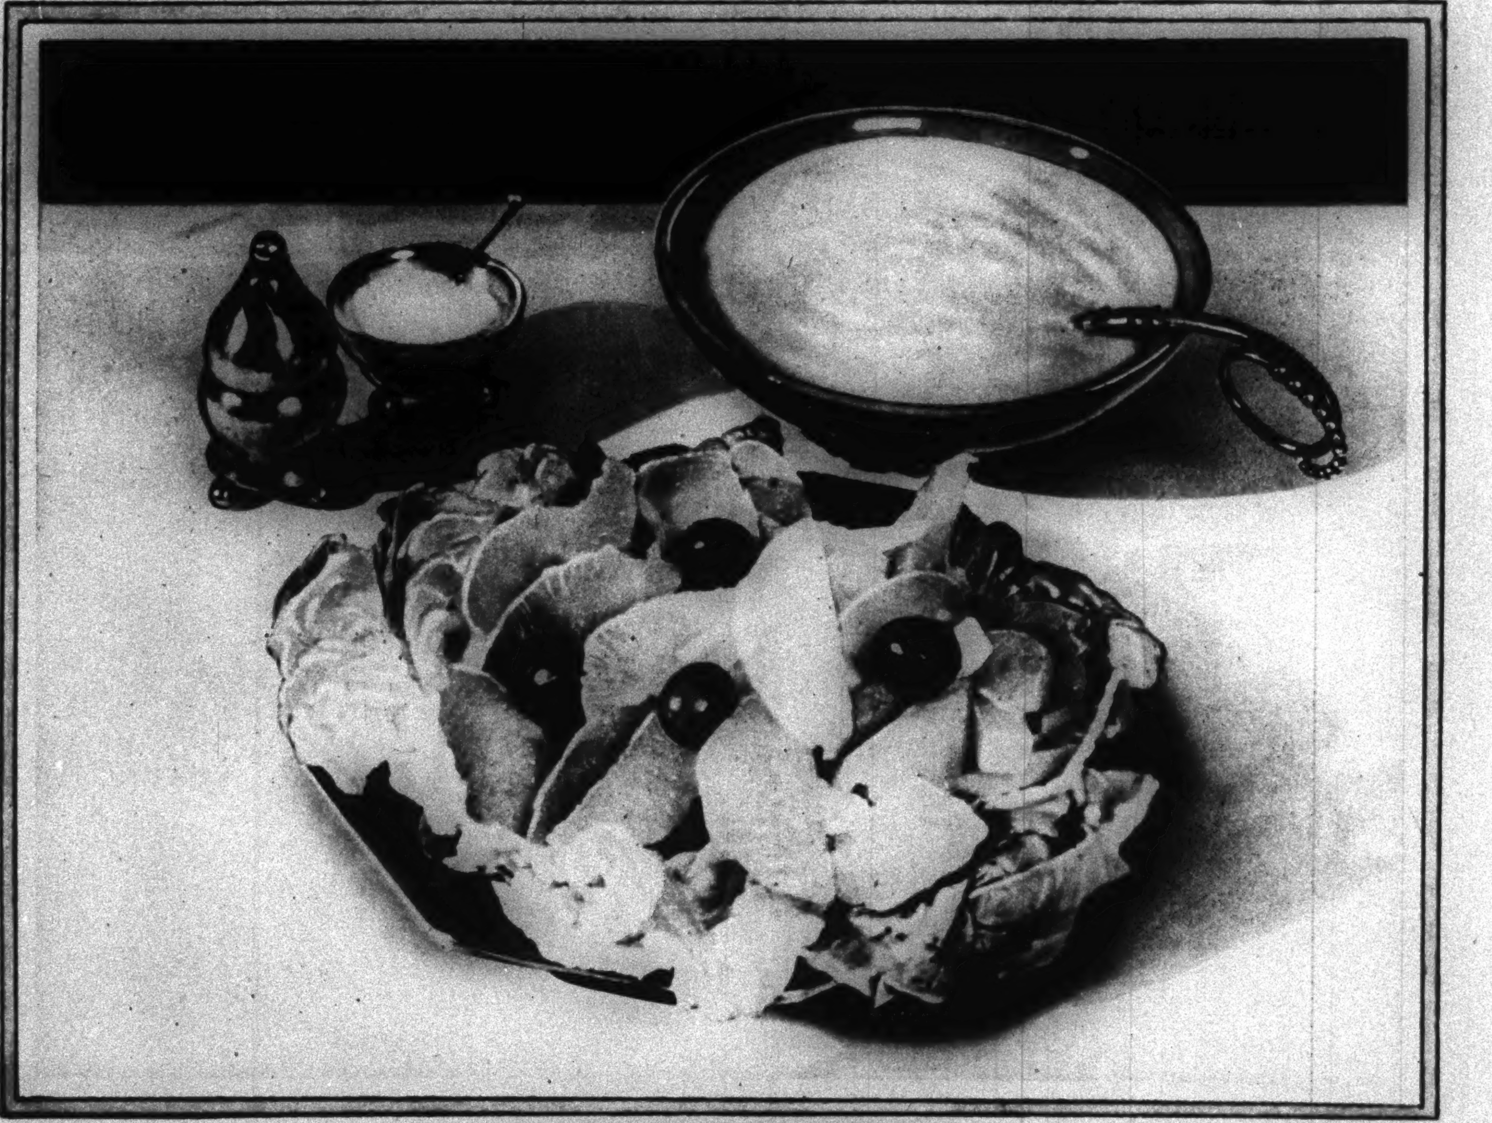
A Real Discovery
for busy housewives



AN EXPERT cook has put a little "trick" into the new Mazola Salad Dressing recipe that will amaze you—

Amaze you because it's so easy to prepare and so appetizingly delicious.

Follow the recipe shown here and you will have the most delicious salad dressing you ever tasted—a salad dressing you can not purchase in stores. Men-folks especially are fond of it.

And it's so economical—a pound costs about 20c.

Another thing—you know this Mazola Salad Dressing is fresh and pure—because you know what's in it—and you prepare it.

After you have followed the recipe above and tasted this appetizing salad dressing you will understand why discriminating housewives made popular the slogan: "Search the world over, pay what you will, you can find no finer salad oil than Mazola."

1 egg
2 tablespoons sugar
1½ teaspoons salt
2 teaspoons dry mustard
¼ teaspoon paprika
¼ cup vinegar
¾ cup Mazola
1 cup water
4 tablespoons Argo Cornstarch
(All measurements should be level)

PUT egg, sugar, seasoning, vinegar and Mazola in mixing bowl, but DO NOT STIR. Make a paste by mixing the Argo Cornstarch with ½ cup water, add additional ½ cup water and cook over slow fire, stirring constantly until it boils and clears up.

Add hot cornstarch mixture to ingredients in mixing bowl and beat briskly with Dover egg beater. Cool before serving.

THE ARISTOCRAT OF WATER-WEAR

"travelo" SWIMSUITS

Glenn Tryon, Universal star, shows us the smart simplicity of a plain-color, one-piece "travelo" SwimSuit. Attached trunks, one button at shoulder, Style M221.

"travelo" SwimSuits have proved that men and women of consequence are eager for finer water-wear. In this refreshingly new combination of color harmony, faultless tailoring, and luxurious comfort, they have found the means to avoid a commonplace appearance on the beach. "travelo" SwimSuits cost scarcely more than an ordinary bathing suit; yet comparison is almost impossible. The best store near you will gladly show you them, in sizes for men, women and children. Made by Peckham-Foreman, Inc., New York.

This clipping and $2 entitles you to six of our regular $12 per dozen Photographs. This offer expires August 5. Good for every member of the family.

No longer is it necessary to let unwieldy oars or a sluggish motor define your horizon. Johnson engineering and manufacturing skill have produced an outboard that gives wings to water travel.

With the new models for 1928 Johnson is adding another chapter of achievement to the history of outboard motoring. Greater power by far—35% to be exact—is now available for faster speeds or heavier loads. A muffler of new design tones down the motor to quieter operation. Silken smooth performance and quicker pick up are attained by the use of Lynite pistons.

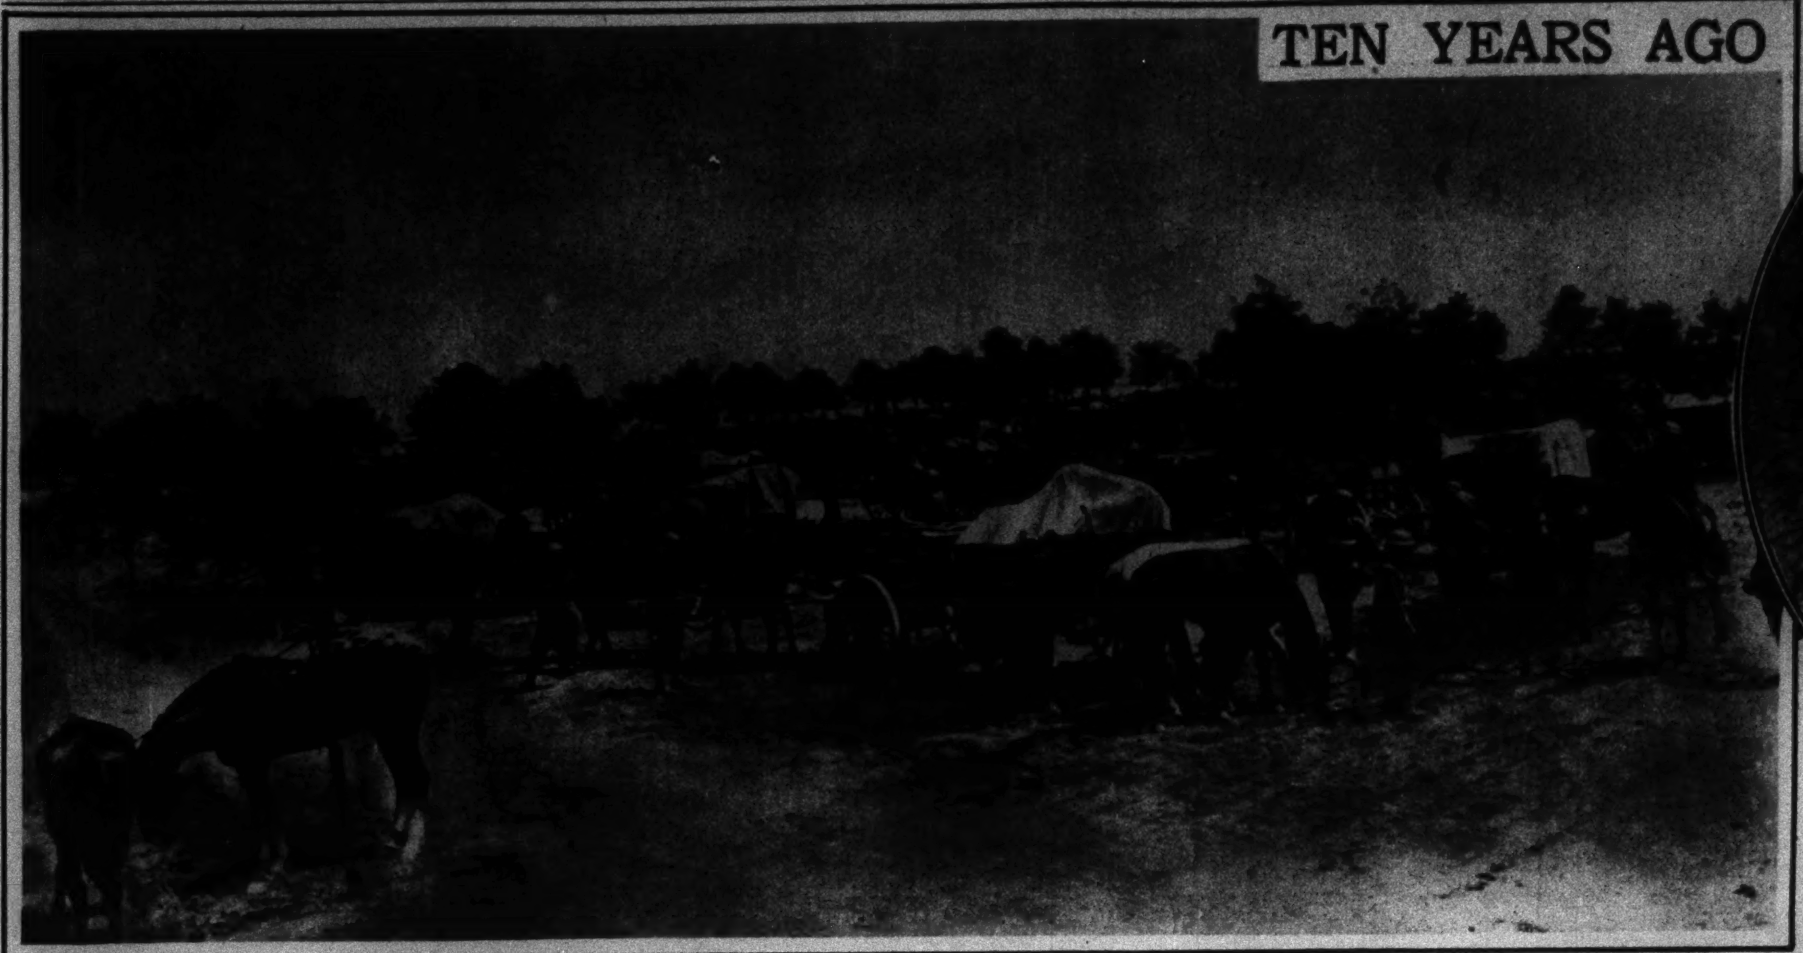
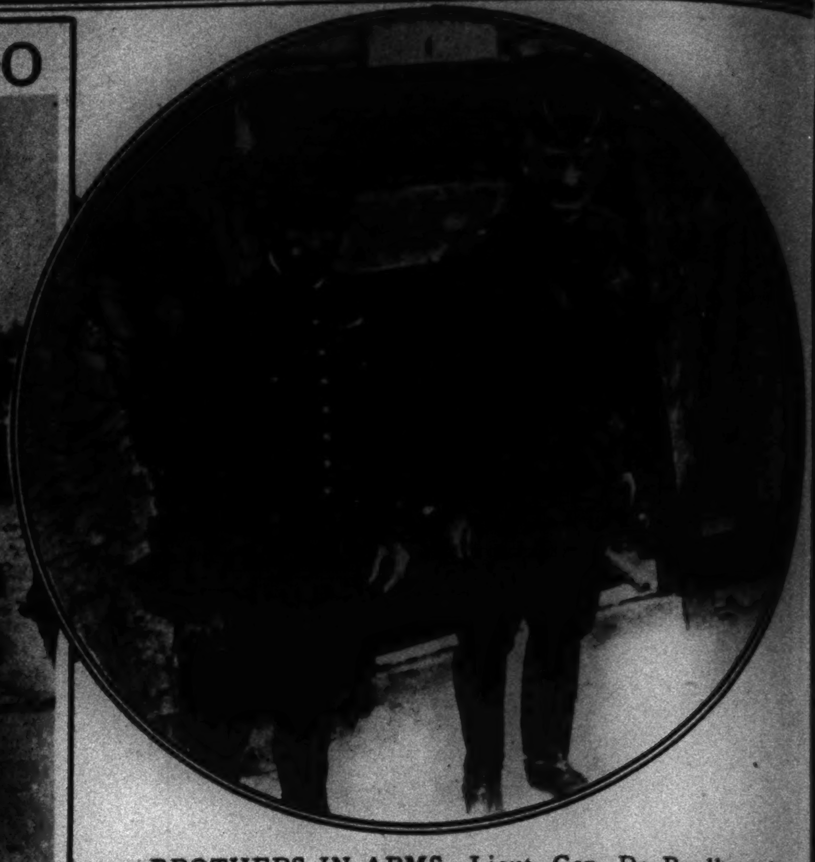
TEN YEARS AGO



SOMEWHERE SOUTH OF SUIPPES the 117th ammunition train, 42d division, was having a brief respite from its labors on July 8, 1918. Men and horses were resting at Piemont farm, near Suippes, France.



BROTHERS IN ARMS—Lieut. Gen. De Boullon of the French forces and Brig. Gen. R. A. Brown of the 84th brigade, A. E. F., at the brigade headquarters, Suippes, July 10, 1918.

WRECKAGES OF WAR—The 165th and 166th infantry regiments were billeted in a forlorn-looking town west of Suippes on July 10.

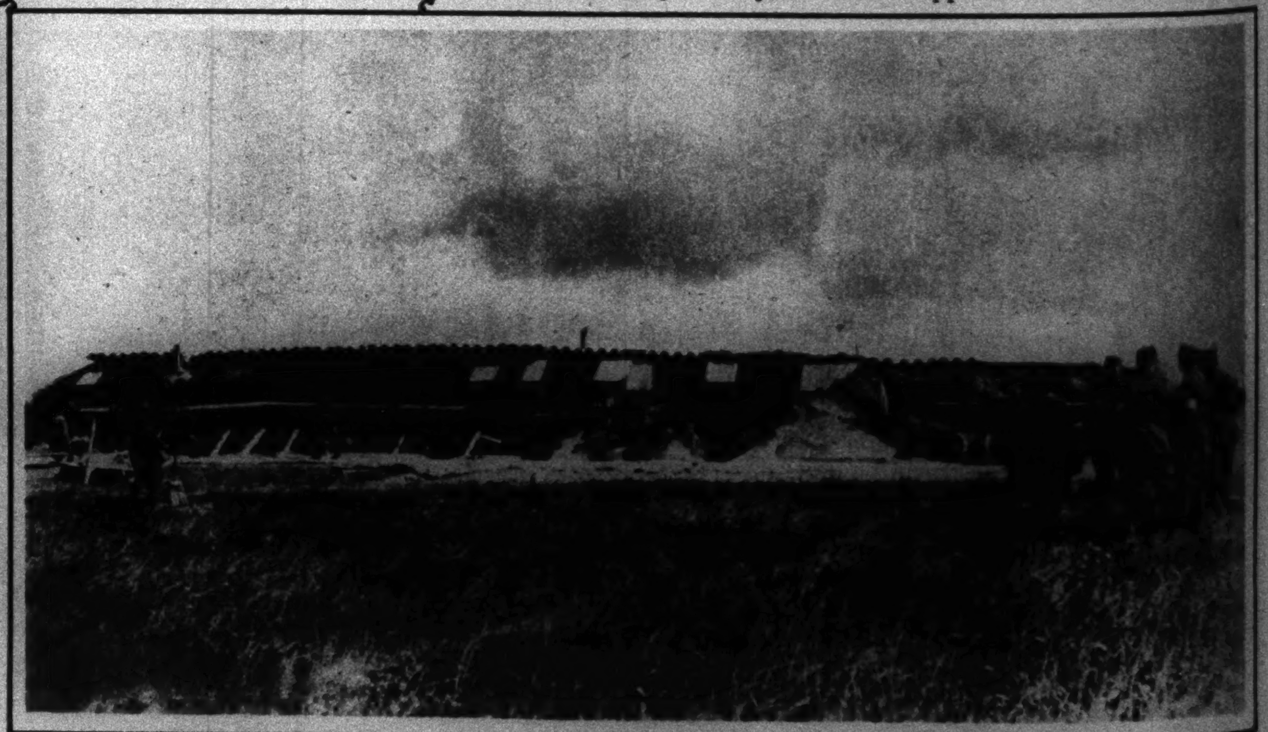
A HOSPITAL FOR BROKEN ARMS—On July 4, 1918, when the folks at home were taking a holiday to celebrate American independence, these youths were hard at work in the 42d division's mobile ordnance repair shop, near La Cheppe.

DID THEY TEACH HIM TO TALK?—When enlisted men of Company K, 167th infantry, caught a live crow, they made a pet of him. The scene was near Suippes; the date, July 8.



THE SUICIDE SQUAD—This view was taken July 11, 1918, outside the headquarters dugout of the 150th machine gun battalion. The scenery, north of St. Hilaire, was wild enough, but that didn't prevent the buck private at the left from being ordered "outside to police up."

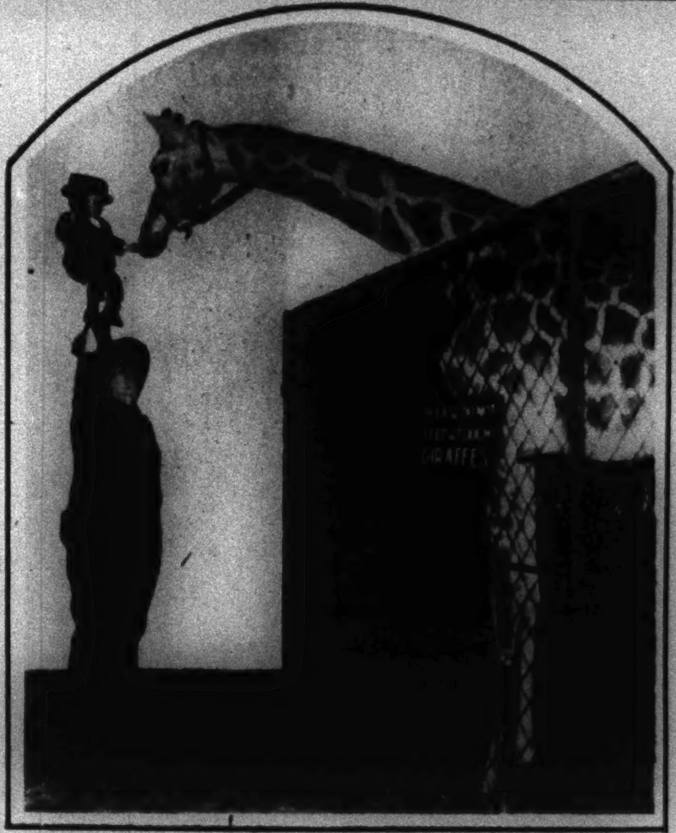
THE CIRCUS IS COMING! Jimmie, a new arrival, gets his daily bottle, with Thoel Nelson doing the administering, and Jules Turnover the directing. They're all with the Ringling Brothers & Barnum & Bailey circus, which will open a nine-day stand in Grant park on Saturday. (Photograph from Atwell.)



MAJOR MITE, 18 inches high, disregards the injunction against feeding the animals, and in his disobedience is upheld—and held up—by Col. Jim Tower, who looms skyward for a total of 8 feet 5 inches. They're with the Ringlings', too. (Photograph from Atwell.)

One Second Later—

No Body Odor Remains!

[Mail coupon for sample can—Handbag Size]

Spic is a very fine, soothing, snow-white powder . . . which instantly destroys the odor-causing acids of perspiration (body waste) as fast as they appear.

Instantly effective—yet Spic is kind and soothing to the skin. Keeps one fresh and sweet. Makes one feel clean and dainty in warmest weather. Also makes silk hosiery and fine fabrics wear longer. Use Spic freely—as often as you wish, on any part of the body. Rub it well into the armpits, between the toes and other perspiration centers. Women find it wonderful for use on the sanitary napkin.

Pain gone at a touch

That's how instant is your relief from corn pain when you apply Dr. Scholl's Zino-pads — the world's fastest, safest, surest way. They remove the cause—friction and pressure of shoes—the only method that acts on this scientific principle. Old ways—powerful liquids or caustic plasters—ignore the cause—often leave the toes sore from acid burn. Zino-pads won't irritate the tenderest skin. At all drug, shoe and dept. stores—35c per package.

Mosquitoes and flies quickly die

No more mosquitoes! No more flies! Peaceful days! Restful nights! Millions of homes now enjoy new comfort, new healthful cleanliness—thanks to Flit.

Don't run around on a hot day with the fly swatter. Keep cool. Spray Flit.

Flit clears the house in a few minutes of disease-bearing mosquitoes and flies. It searches out the cracks where roaches, bed bugs and ants hide and breed, destroying their eggs. Fatal to insects, harmless to you. Will not stain.

On the porch, on the lawn, in camp, outdoors anywhere, Flit will drive away the insects and leave you comfortable.

Do not confuse Flit with any other product. Greater killing power insures satisfaction with Flit. One of the largest corporations in the world guarantees Flit to kill insects or money back. Buy Flit and a Flit sprayer today.

Before you know it—

The Sun's Red Brush has marked them

Ugly blisters cannot form when Unguentine protects.

HOW they love the water! Splashing. Frolicing. Down to their little feet digging in the sand, they are happiness itself.

But be on guard for them. Sunburn comes like a flash. Keep Unguentine ready. Carry it on motoring and fishing trips. Keep an extra tube in your club locker for tennis and golf.

Neglected sunburn can torture skin for days. Soothe its pain at once. Heal the scorched tissues with the surgeon's own dressing.

Unguentine helps prevent blistering and the formation of sickening sunburn poisons. Use it before exposure, too. You tan quickly but do not burn painfully. Physicians use it for all burns. At your druggist's—50c. The Norwich Pharmacal Company, Norwich, N. Y. Canada —193 Spadina Avenue, Toronto.

LITTLE CHESTER AND CHING CHOW ARE STILL PRISONERS OF THE CRUEL WANG TI - AND HIS BLOOD-THIRSTY BAND OF PIRATES - LAST WEEK THE CAPTIVES MADE A DESPERATE EFFORT TO ESCAPE - BUT WERE RECAPTURED - FEARING THEY MAY ESCAPE BEFORE HE CAN FORCE UNCLE BIM TO PAY ONE HUNDRED THOUSAND DOLLARS FOR THEIR RELEASE - THE PIRATE CHIEF DECIDES TO TRANSFER THE CAPTIVES TO THE CAVE OF THE RELENTLESS TIGER - THE WINDS OF MISFORTUNE BLOW WITHOUT CEASING - IN OUR HONORABLE DIRECTION -
I'M SO GLAD TO GET OUT OF THAT UNDERGROUND DUNGEON WHERE WE SPENT LAST WEEK - I'M NOT AFRAID OF ANYTHING -
IN TIME OF ADVERSITY THIS PERSON REMEMBERS - GOOD MEDICINE IS BITTER TO THE TASTE -
WELL - THIS CAVE IS BETTER THAN THAT OLD DARK MUSTY DUNGEON -
THE PERSON SPEAKING REFUSES TO DENY - HOPE IS THE BREAD OF THE UNHAPPY -
HARKEN TO THE LOUD NOISE THAT PROCLAIMS THE APPROACH OF THE EVER HUNGRY TIGER - WHO WILL WATCH THE WORTHLESS CAPTIVES WITH UNCLOSING EYES -
HASTEN YOUR SLOW MOVING FOOTSTEPS - OR YOUR MISERABLE BACKS WILL BE THE RESTING PLACE OF COUNTLESS WELL AIMED BLOWS -
PATIENCE EXALTED ONE - AS NO LASTING HARM IS PLANNED AGAINST YOUR RESPECTED DIGNITY -
HASTEN! NOBLE TIGER - TO YOUR POSITION AS HONORABLE GUARD OVER THE PRICELESS CAPTIVES -
FEAR NOT - THE UNSPEAKABLE DEMON FROM THE JUNGLE IS SECURELY FASTENED TO THAT EXCEEDINGLY STRONG POST - A MOUSE COULDN'T SNEAK OUT PAST THAT TERRIBLE TIGER ON GUARD -
HOUR AFTER HOUR THE RESTLESS FOOTSTEPS OF THEIR FEROCIOUS GUARD ARE HEARD BY THE TWO CAPTIVES - AS THEY CROUCH IN A CORNER OF THE CAVE WONDERING HOW TO ESCAPE THE NEW PERIL -

COURSE HE'S TOO YOUNG YET BUT YOU HOLD UP A HAMMA AN' A DIME AN' A BOOK FRONT OF CORKY AN' THE ONE HE GRABS, THAT'S WHAT HE GOIN' TO BE.
HOW DO YOU MEAN, RACHEL?
WELL IF HE GRAB THE HAMMA HE GOIN' TO BE A CARPENTA. IF HE PICK THE DIME HE BE A BANKA AN' IF HE TAKE THE BOOK HE BE A PREACHA OR A TEACHA.
I KNOW NOW.
HERE CORKY! I'M GOIN' TO TRY IT OUT AN' SEE IF YOU'RE GOIN' TO BE A BANKER.
THAT'S GOOD, MISTA WALT! I TELL SKEEZIX IF HE HOLD UP A DIME BEFORE CORKY AN' HE GRAB IT HE GOIN' BE A BANKA. AN' SKEEZIX SAY HE DID!
GREAT GUNS! HE SHOULDN'T HAVE ANY DIME.
THE FIRST THING HE'D DO WOULD BE TO PUT IT IN HIS MOUTH!
IT ISN'T HERE ANYWHERE! HE MUST HAVE SWALLOWED IT!
DOC! COME QUICK! CORKY HAS SWALLOWED A DIME!
DID ANYBODY SEE HIM SWALLOW IT OR ARE YOU MERELY TEN CENTS SHY?
SKEEZIX GAVE HIM ONE AND IT'S GONE.
I DON'T SEE ANY INDICATIONS OF HIS HAVING SWALLOWED ANYTHING, WALT.
BUT HE MUST HAVE. I CAN'T FIND THE DIME ANYWHERE!
IT WASN'T A DIME. IT WAS ONLY A NICKEL.
AND I DIDN'T GIVE IT TO CORKY TO KEEP. HERE IT IS THEN HE DIDN'T SWALLOW IT!
A SOUVENIR, PHYLLIS. WE THOUGHT CORKY HAD SWALLOWED THIS COIN— BUT HE DIDN'T.
WAIT! THAT'S MY NICKEL!

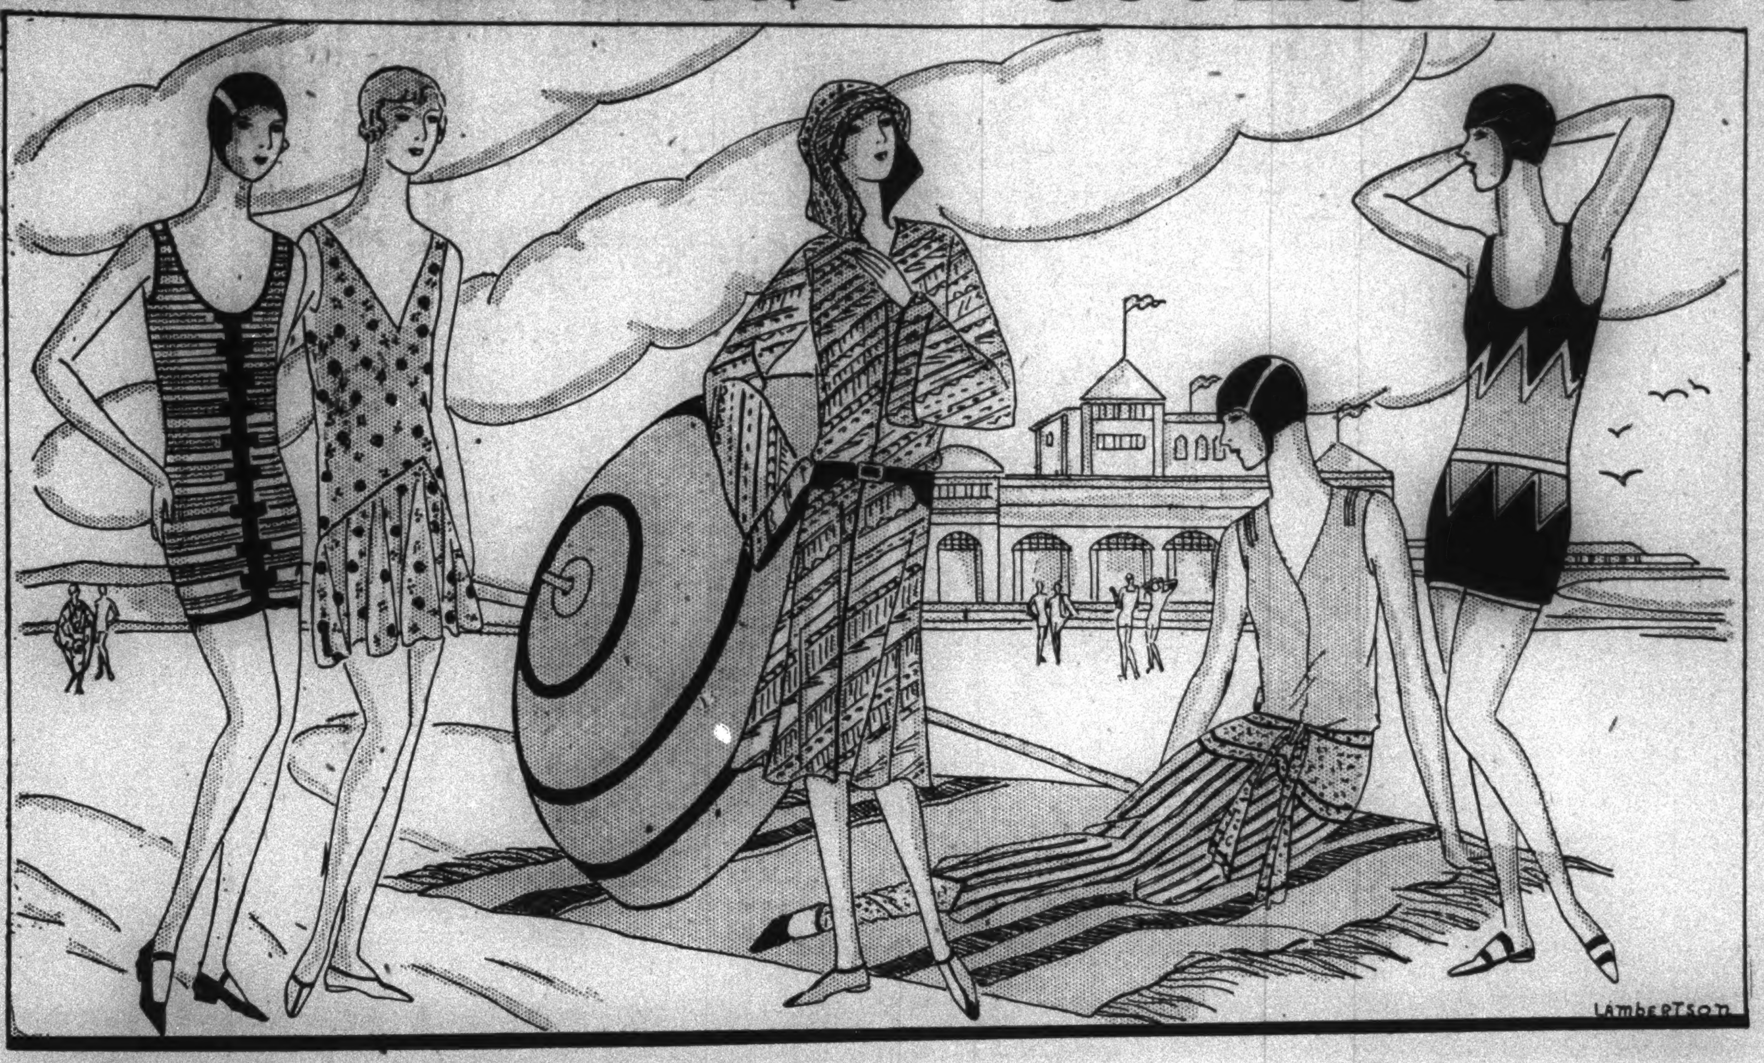
Water Colors for Beach Scenes Are Debonair

Our Grandmothers Would Raise Victorian Eyebrows If They Could See the Pajamas and Little One-Piece Things That Make the Coast Line Alluring These Days.

By Corinne Lowe.



Hurrah for the blue and the white which form the dual color scheme of the jersey bathing suit at the extreme left! Woven into the fabric, these stripes demonstrate one tendency in present beach modes.

Next to it we have a more feminine style of bathing frock. Executed in navy taffeta adorned with the omnipresent dot which never seems to mean period, the costume sponsors a smart line at the junction of skirt and tunic and a low decolletage.

At the center is a delightful wrap adapted from a design of Suzanne Talbot's. It is developed in a figured eponge which offsets its brilliant colors by the use of black, a theme repeated in the hood lining and in the belt. The capuchin hood, which is part of the coat itself, has become a dominating feature of beach wraps.

Last is a jersey tunic of navy encrusted with a zigzag pattern outlined in white about a clear blue. A white belt accords with white trunks and the accompanying cap is decorated with a zigzag all its own.

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—Looking at the fair mermaids of this summer, a woman of my acquaintance remarked, "These are not crustaceans—they are encrustaceans."

Yes, it goes without saying that she referred to the trick of encrusting the bathing suit with bands and motifs of contrasting tone or color. This trick, a logical consequence of the passion for such adornment running riot in our ordinary attire, has been developed in numerous tissues and in costumes for both the Amazon that swims a mile and for her more passive sister.

Aside from encrustations, the swimming suit universally adopted some years ago has really suffered no "sea-change into something new and strange." How could it be so when perfection was reached, let us say, at a single stroke? Nothing, indeed, was ever devised better developed to foster any latent talent for the crawl or the scissors kick than this familiar combination of jersey and trunks, this two piece suit come down to mock its ancestress, the long sleeved and high collared flannel costume of "The Age of Innocence."

It shows how completely the regulation swimming suit has assumed authority in the mind of the French creator when Patou, in devising his celebrated week end trunk, included two costumes embracing two types of the jersey and "culottes." One of these in plain navy blue represents the day when we don't feel quite up to water colors. The other, which we show at the left of this page, shows the new impulse toward cutting a figure in the water.

In this suit, however, the figures are not cut out. They are woven into the jersey. Thus they present a decided contrast to that other suit at the extreme right of our page. For here in this latter creation we get the full force of the "encrustacean."

Eloquent of this new season, in fact, is the fine wool jersey tunic with its modernistic design that is at once so simple and so effective. Encrusted with a zigzag pattern of light blue bound with white, it echoes that same tricolor effect which is now so fashionable in various types of sports wear. The culottes are white, and so also is the belt, and the rubber cap echoes the design of the tunic.

When we tell it to the marines we are logical enough in our speech, we speak in a dialect of marine blue. This is today one of the most popular colors for the swimming suit, and it is frequently mated with other tones of blue in the same spirit represented by our right hand sketch. Indeed, the degradé effects so popular with the French creators often start with navy as a base and proceed through various lighter tones until they finally attain pure white.

With the Paris designer white jersey is a favorite medium for the swimming suit and against this snowy background appear frequently stunning motifs in either black or black and white. Typical of this treatment is a Suzanne Talbot suit which makes its tunic short to reveal the crescent tips of black and white encrustations on the trunks. A similar motivation occurs in the band defining a neck line, which, contrary to our usual rounded method, describes a deep V in the back. This costume is brought into its proper harmony by a narrow belt and cap of plain black.

So much for the present day swimming suit. When we enter the domain of the more formal beach costume we do not, by any means, leave behind us the modern mode of encrustations. These new crêpe models, for instance—how often do they rely for novelty upon some modern treatment of the inset band and cubistic motif? Here, too, again one encounters the same charming experiments with color and degradé effects found in the Amazonian attire.

Crêpe de chine is still favored for the beach costume, but undoubtedly taffeta has put out to sea in a manner emboldened by all its various successes on land. This silk now so much in the limelight of fashion has, of course, always been more or less seafaring in its temperament. But now, la la la, what taffetas and taffetas and taffetas one does behold on every hand!

The plain taffeta costume—yes, of course! But much more significant of our present day mood are the various figured designs. Plaids, for example, are embarking from every fashionable beach. And frequently some bold tartan of green and yellow, of black and white or of yellow and black constitutes what one might call a naval base of an ensemble. That is to say, the skirt of the suit will be of the plaided taffeta and its top of plain taffeta will be echoed in the lining of a plaided wrap.

The fact that the dot is a favored subject for the formal bathing suit is indicated on our page in the charming taffeta model of navy figured in white. The dots are in large and small effect and the costume is made up with that rigorous attention to prevailing modes distinguishing the modern beach attire. Asymmetric results are, in fact, courted at sea as much as ever on land and the pointed upward movement of this particular costume at the left side is only one indication of this fact.

For the swimming suit the wrap chosen may be an integral part of the costume. However, here the ensemble is not nearly so prevalent as in the elaborate beach costume and one wrap usually does its duty by a whole fleet of jersey trunks and tunics. This solitary wrap may be of all the usual rubberized materials and it may run a gamut from cape to enveloping cloak.

As, however, warmth and comfort seem to be the chief requirements of the maid who has just come back from the float, a coat is undoubtedly the wisest choice, and for that coat there is really nothing better than éponge. The Paris designers often make a compromise in this respect. Evaluating éponge as the material ideal for all practical needs of the swimmer, they make the wrap of crêpe marocain and line it with éponge. Yet, when the latter material is capable of such decorative treatment as is accorded it today, there is no reason why it should be reserved for such a private career as lining.

Certainly this has been the conclusion of Suzanne Talbot when she created the delightful wrap in the center of the page, for this is made of a figured éponge in which we find various brilliant tones reconciled by a strong note of black. Sustaining the black in the design, the belt and the lining of the hood are also in this tone.

This Talbot creation is achieved in light silk and it unites a blouse of solid color with pantaloons of striped effect. Here we carry out the original idea in a yellow bodice combined with trousers in yellow and black. These pantaloons, reaching only half way to the ankle, are in themselves sufficient to bring up a hundred visions of minarets, of fountains playing in the moonlight, of breezes sifted through the tamarinds, but, when combined with that eastern sash of printed silk, the evidence is quite overwhelming.

The lounging pajama of all types is still persistently worn, but it should be reiterated once more that many of the newest models reveal in pattern and in treatment a more authentic oriental inspiration than ever before. Eloquent of this fact is the shortened length of the trouser—just as we see it here—in such houses as Poiret, Molyneux, and Talbot.

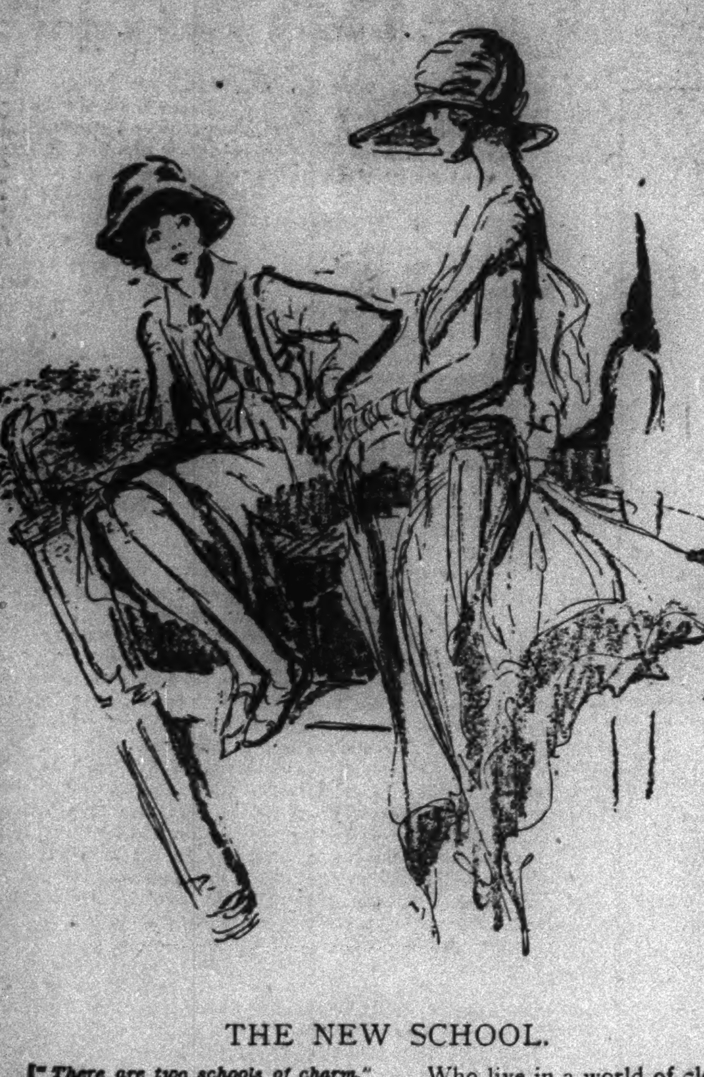
MAIDEN MEDITATIONS by Sara Moore

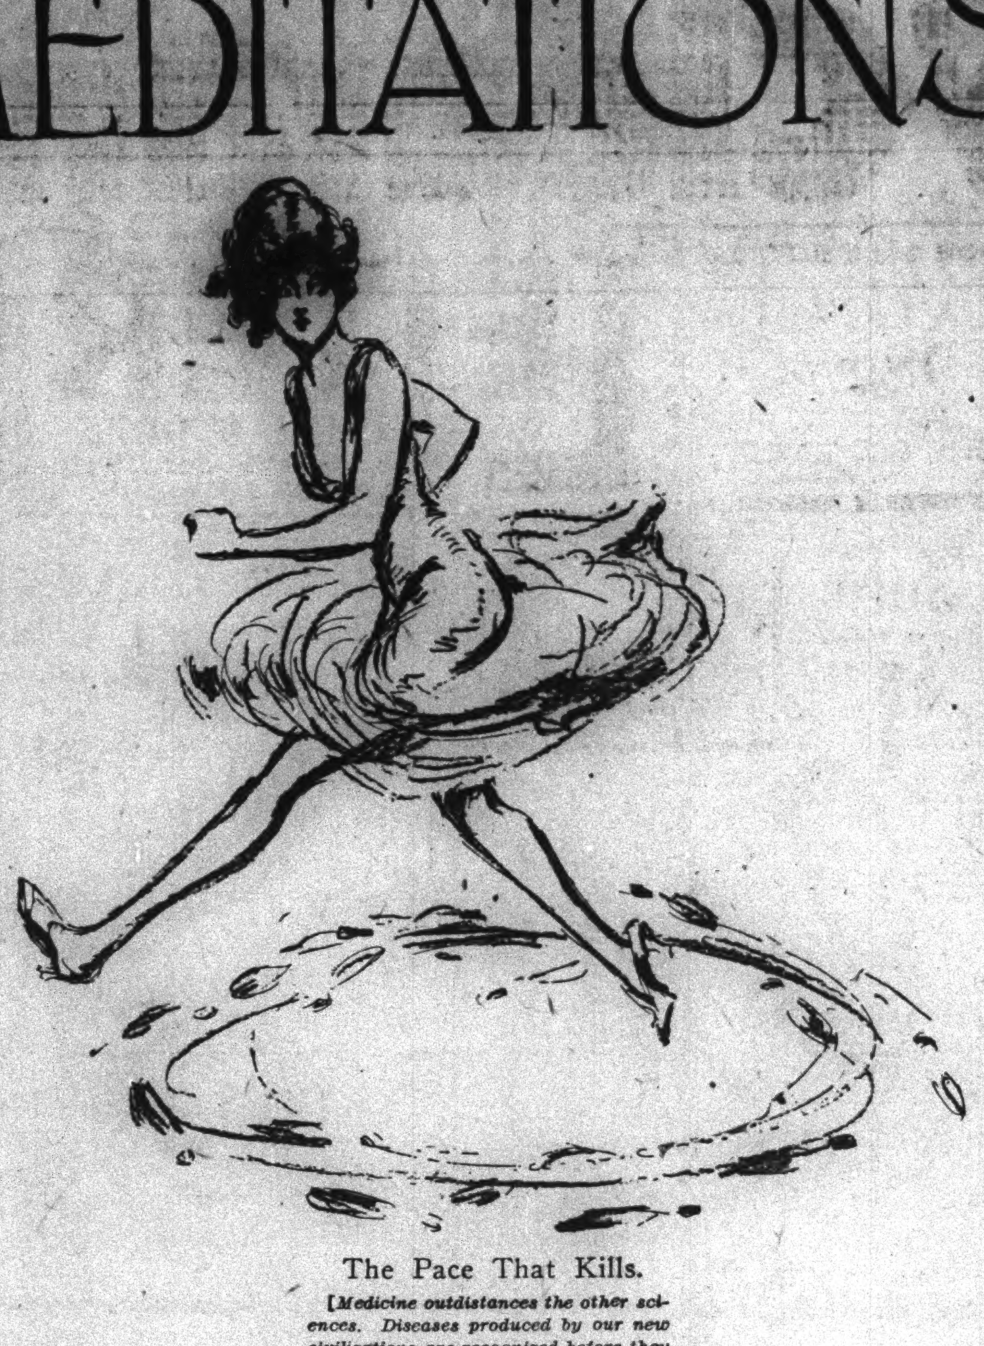


THE NEW SCHOOL.

["There are two schools of charm." —Item.]

I buy me no printed flowered frock,
I wear no lace chapeaux.
I question the law that Mother Eve
Laid down so long ago.
Though Adams still fall for a touch of chic
With trimmings, goodness knows
They ought to be tired of dainty dolls
Who live in a world of clothes.

I cannot keep up with the daily dope
On how to knock 'em cold.
I think that the sea will be full of fish,
Yes, even when I'm old.
No tips from Paris can cramp my style,
As deep conviction grows
Some men, quite fed up with powdered beaks,
Will fall for a sunkist nose.

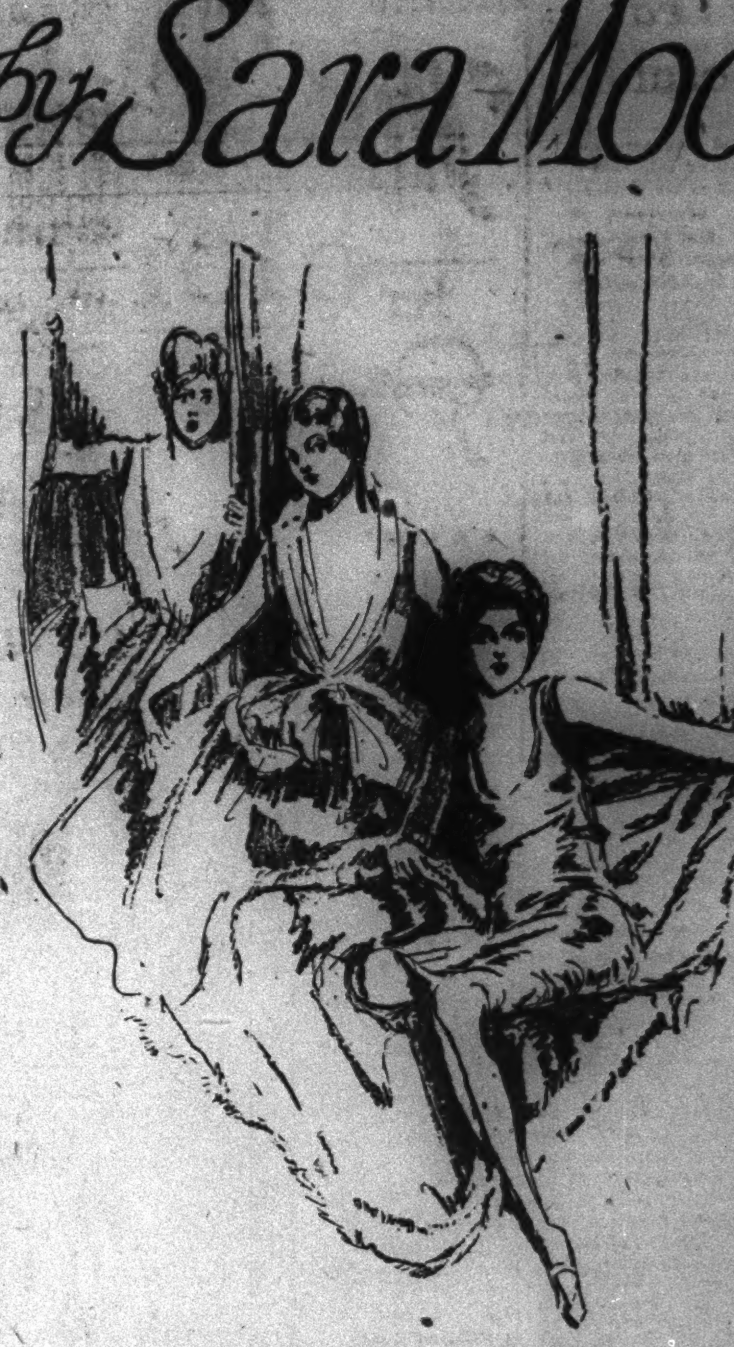


The Pace That Kills.

[Medicine outdistances the other sciences. Diseases produced by our new civilizations are recognized before they gain any real foothold and cures are found almost immediately.—Newspaper article.]

Tell us not in righteous rhythms
Footprints on time's sands endure.
Ere the docs name new diseases,
Some one smarter has the cure!

Howsoever, up and doing,
Fame is not the medic's fate;
Theories aren't worth pursuing
That, so early, get the gate.



OVER OUR HEADS. . .

Who lives, we growl, in Adman's land? There each detail is swell;
There women walk in ten case socks; perfumes six plunks per smell.
Where beauty swathed in sables flaunts her sixty thousand loot,
And humble folk seem satisfied with shoes sixteen per foot.

In Adland tourists—all de luxe—for di'monds need a trunk.
(In Goudy, Gothic, Clarendon that's eighteen pointed punk!)
The copy man is pitching wild and no one's wised him that
Some wear a twenty dollar dress and seven fifty hat.

We must confess, although it drives ad tempers out of sorts,
We very seldom ever buy our emeralds by quarts.

Alcohol from the Beauty Angle

By Antoinette Donnelly

If You Want to Be Slender and Lithe, You'll Have to Select a Seat on the Water Wagon.

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—A Reader asks why so much space in my otherwise interesting department [thank you, Reader] must be given to fat girls.

"One would think," she says, "that reducing is one thing all women are interested in."

And if Reader was running this interesting department she'd wonder sometimes if women were interested in anything else. Or, if she were a frequenter of teas, kaffee-klatches, wakes, or séances, she'd wonder if women talked about anything else. If she simply listened in at the accidental meeting of two women on the street, also she'd wonder why they weren't inquiring about Dotty's measles and Johnny's mumps instead of comparing weights and how they were achieved.

A foreign visitor might easily go back to England, Scotland, Ireland, or Spain, and report the two conversational themes in America as "Where Did You Get It," and "How Did You Do It?" The first query, as you rightly suspect, applying to bottled goods and the second to recaptured girlish figures.

The Livest Issue.

Don't you think for a moment that I'm complaining. When women stop thinking about how to whittle down waistline, hip, or calf, I'm going to have to go into the grocery business to fatten them up again. That dependent am I upon the round, the plump and the obese for my strawberry shortcake. Or, so it seems on those days when query after query is told off in diet and exercise recommendations, perhaps to the percentage of seventy per cent of the day's occupation.

Seriously, though, reducing is the livest issue in the beauty campaign that is being conducted throughout the world of women in this year of our Lord 1928. And if I'm anywhat of a prophet I can keep on eating my shortcake for several more years to come.

Nor am I downhearted at the prospect of a nation of women of perfect proportions a few years hence. Because it is my observation that when a woman has conquered her figure she can think up a few other worlds to conquer, such as raising her skin to the zenith of perfection, her hair, manner, grace, charm, and all the other talents of the lovely lady.

It may be a bit boring to a girl who cops off the model sizes and wears them with such glithering grace to have to sit in constantly at these reducing recitals. But after all, the crime is on her head. She's what the rest are trying to be like. And that little compliment ought to minimize her suffering, don't you think?

As I have said before, this concentration on figure proportions, as it is practised in kitchens and in living rooms or boudoirs, on street corners or wherever girls exchange their scandal bits about fat mutilation, is just about the greatest little contribution to human welfare the last decade or more has seen. And you must admit this period has witnessed some startling miracles of progress.

I say this in spite of the justifiable censure of young girl's reducing themselves into tuberculosis sanitariums and older extremists into hospitals. There is in every movement a crazy fringe of extremists whose ill-advised antics must not be held prejudicial to the movement itself. On the whole, the result of the figure-awareness that possesses American women today, is extraordinarily beneficial to their health. As for their beauty, their youth, their present day accomplishments at middle age or thereabouts—well, you've seen, yourself, enough examples to make it unnecessary to expand further on this angle of the benefit of keeping the weight to normal.

Where Prohibition Comes In.

With which preamble I'm going to call attention to a certain habit that is growing among women and which I call attention to not because of any sympathy with the prohibition amendment but simply because the drinking habit is not one to cultivate or indulge in if one is honestly interested in arriving at a nice lean figure.

It is commonplace to hear a man described: "He looks awful. He's getting fat and sloppy from his drinking."

Well, men haven't any corner on physical deterioration from alcohol consumption. In the past perhaps theirs has been the greater freedom to drink their figures out of shape. And I'm not sensationalist enough to think that women today are leading them a merry pace in acquiring physical unloveliness on the alcohol route. But there's no winking one's eyes at the fact that men alone are not making the bootlegger's income tax the worry it is to them and the government.

Women, nice ones, too, and girls, also nice girls, are playing the universally popular game of letting the government see what they think of its stupid amendment. It's trite to call attention to the fact that wives and daughters and mothers who would have wept buckets at the smell of liquor on their close males' breaths not long ago are today pretty substantial customers to the backdoor peddlers of contraband goods.

Others may preach the social angle. My business is the beauty one.

The other day I was in a beauty parlor. I'm on familiar terms with the woman head thereof. She called my attention to a woman to whose attention she need'nt have bothered calling me. The woman was doing it herself to all of us in the shop at the time. She was decidedly under the influence of a recent celebration. The head of the establishment said to me. "You know, a couple of years ago she was a beauty. But she's gotten so fat and coarse looking from drinking you'd hardly know her."

Proprietors of night clubs and theatrical men can regale you for hours with stories of girls who came to the city fresh, lovely young things with a world of promise before them. They take their first drink. As the Japanese proverb says: First the man takes a drink; then the drink takes a drink; then the drink takes the man." And when you're told these stories, invariably the comment is, "She got too fat and sloppy for the job."

However, it isn't the "lost-soul" drinkers I have in mind today. It's the girls and women who "party" quite a little and to whom a party "just isn't" unless there is something to drink at it. The party may be in one's own home just at the ordinary evening meal. It may be a habit—a nightly one—and perhaps in its present state of development only alarming to the extent of the damage it may do to your figure.

If you're reducing remember that you must count alcohol as a food item. It produces heat in the body. It is a food in the same sense that dynamite is a fuel. It protects from the very fat destruction you're aiming at.

Not in a Reducing Diet.

The well known "appetizer" in cocktail form is exactly that and an appetizer is not one of the granted indulgences in a reducing diet. Alcoholic beverages stimulate the appetite, a fact thoroughly understood by the indulgent host or hostess who must serve with the cocktail caviar sandwich or cheese straws, or some bit of food to pamper the appetite until the meal proper is brought on. The effect of alcohol on the muscular system is to slow up its action, a fact not at all in sympathy with a desire to get one's figure down. Its deleterious effect on the digestion is commonly known, and also that it has a particularly deleterious effect on the digestion of women. In any good reducing régime orders are given to pay strict attention to the digestive processes and the intestinal tract so that loss of weight will not be retarded by faulty elimination.

So if you want to reduce—better let it absolutely and teetotally alone!

THE ETIQUETTE OF SHOES

Here Are Some Valuable Dos and Don'ts on the Ever Timely Subject of Footgear.

By Persis Standish.

DR. EVANS printed a letter the other day from a girl who wanted to reduce in order to wear high heels to work. The doctor aptly replied that high heels for work had gone out. And then came an inquiry to this department from a bride as to whether she would have to get two pairs of "sport shoes" for her trousseau, one with high heels and one with low. And then your reporter began to observe the many incongruities between shoes and costume on the streets.

There is a very definite shoe etiquette. And most of it pertains to heels. A woman can be beautifully gowned as to hat, coat, gown and then make herself ridiculous with the wrong pair of shoes. I am not speaking now about style, although that, too, is a factor, of course. But an old good shoe, properly chosen for its quality and fit and appropriateness, is much preferable to a garish new one that goes with nothing else in the costume. In other words, if one cannot afford many shoes, it is the extreme of bad taste to purchase fancy ones, or such colors and materials that they will not stand wear and look well.

When High Heels Are Bad Form.

First of all, there are certain occasions when high heels are not only bad form but ridiculous. There are certain places where they are not only bad form, but are not allowed, because they spoil the turf. One of these places, of course, is the golf course, another the tennis court. For traveling high heels are never worn by the tasteful. Not only is this a matter of taste, but it is also a practical necessity. For instance, nothing is more ridiculous than some of the women one sees tottering about the galleries of Europe on high heels. Nothing could be more uncomfortable for walking about a slippery promenade deck than a pair of high heels. Nothing could be more absurd for sightseeing in the country than high heels, and any one who wears them for such occasions stamps herself as either ignorant or tasteless.

Now, there are certain women who will say, "But I can't wear low heels. They make my legs ache." The answer is, so much the more reason for wearing them. If they make your legs ache it is because the muscles have been so long disused that they are stiff, and even in danger of withering. Very well, then; it is time you did something about such a condition. Either take exercises shoeless to strengthen the muscles until you can wear low heels when required, or gradually lower your heels, wearing them a few hours every day, until you get used to them.

Others, again, will say, "I can't wear low heels because my arch is too high." The answer is the same for them. If you have accustomed your arch to high heels until it has become weak, the best thing to do is to strengthen it by exercise until you can wear any kind of a heel without pain.

Middle Aged Women Note.

These recommendations are especially true for women who are nearing middle age and putting on weight, and they had better take the stitch in time that saves nine or they may find themselves with serious foot trouble later in life.

To get back to the etiquette of shoes, it, like all other etiquette, has changed of late years and become easier and less formal, but there are still very definite things that Dame Grundy forbids and commands. First of all, as has been said, heels must be low for sport, travel, hiking, all country daytime wear, and low or medium low for the street. High heels are for afternoon and evening wear only.

Next Dame Grundy commands that the heels, whether low or high, must always be straight. A crooked heel is the mark of a slattern—always was, always will be. Then the shoes should be kept in good condition. They should be clean and polished and neat. That is why it is so essential in choosing shoes on a limited income to choose ones that will not scuff.

This does not mean that because one has a limited income one must forego the fascinating and luxurious shoes in odd colors and fabrics. It simply means that one must possess at least one pair of sensible shoes for the occasions when such are demanded, and that those one wears every day to walk and work in should be of a hardier variety.

When fancy shoes become scuffed and fallen looking they should never be worn for street, as one sees them so often. The sunlight is cruel, and if one must wear scuffed shoes, honest shoes of leather that are a bit scuffed are far better to look at than scuffed and dirty finery.

Choose One Practical Pair.

Choose one pair of your shoes for their hardihood. Have them well fitting and low heeled. I do not mean with flat heels, necessarily, but small Cuban heels, colonial heels or what is called a "baby French," and you will be surprised how they will repay you in saving your gayer footgear, and in making your street appearance one of neatness and true sophistication.

Fancy shoes are charming with the proper clothes, but they are utterly ridiculous with the wrong ones. Nor do I mean that your street shoes or your sport shoes must be black, or even russet. No, indeed; they can harmonize with your costume. They can be gray, brown, beige, or even dark blue or green, and be perfectly correct provided they are of a substantial material and the heels are right.

A Death Foretold.

It was four years since my aunt died. One evening I went early to bed, and soon fell asleep. I dreamed that my aunt was walking on our lawn. I was astonished and ran to her, asking, "Where are you going?"

She answered, "For your baby brother." That evening he was very sick.

Next day when I awoke I was told my brother was dead. A. M.

A Psychic Tip.

Not being at all interested in prize fighting, I paid little attention to the dream I had wherein I saw Gene Tunney step out of the ring and heard Jack Dempsey call after him, "You got me this time, but I will see you again."

I told the family about it in a joking way and a boy friend bet me 5 cents Jack would win the championship.

You can imagine how badly I wished it had been $50 the day after the fight when I collected my nickel.

N. S.

A Prophecy.

A month ago I had a dream of a friend whom I have not seen in two years.

In my dream my husband and I were walking past a neighborhood drug store, when we discovered walking very slowly in front of us this friend and a companion.

My husband said, "It's Mrs. C— and just look at her neck—look at her neck! See how dreadfully thin it is."

When I looked her neck certainly was more than thin. As we passed she suddenly commenced to call her husband in a voice of agony.

The dream bothered me and when my sister said in a letter: "Too bad about Mrs. C—." I made inquiries and was told about a month previously she had a very dangerous infection. Before they could tell me I said, "Was it her neck?" and was told yes, the neck glands. E. B. C.

Instructed.

I've never been a believer in dreams, as many are that I know, but I had one dream that came true to the letter and since then I've had the greatest respect for persons who believe in dreams.

It was while my father was very ill. We had no hope of his recovery. One night, I dreamed that he came to my bed—standing at the foot in full view—and spoke to me. He told me he would die the following Friday morning, and that his request was to be buried beside his mother, in a distant city, that the request was in a notebook he always carried, which he had locked in his desk.

The dream was so vivid that I screamed and wakened to find myself on the floor having cut my face when I fell against the dresser.

The following Friday, at 10:30 in the morning, my father passed away. The request was found in his notebook.

R. S. W.

Warned in a Dream.

We had lived in this 40 year old house for several months, when I dreamt that a deep chasm opened at my feet in the back yard, near the door.

Next morning I was showing my daughter the spot of my dream, and noticed a circular stone, which formed the last step at the back door, was tipped on one side, almost an inch. Under that I was impelled to throw a pebble—I was horrified when we heard a dull splash of deep water.

In a panic I called up the agent and insisted the matter should have immediate attention. A deep old cistern was found, over which we had walked on a rotting wood platform every time we went to the basement.

It took many loads of dirt to fill the cistern, already full of water, but it was filled before night. J. T.

Leap Year Proposals

Do you know of any girl who invited a man to leap into matrimony with her? Was her proposal met with eager acceptance or graceful refusal. If you'll send us a brief account of the affair we'll pay $1 if we print it. Address Leap Year Proposals, Chicago Tribune.

A Double Announcement.

I had a friend, a fine, sensible girl, who had never had a real beau. George, the brother of one of her friends, was a fine, sensible man and had never had a girl. The years were slipping by and just before last leap year Ruth confided to me that she was going to do her best to win George. She finally succeeded in getting him to call rather regularly and we could all tell he was fond of her, but things were decidedly at a standstill. He simply did not propose.

I was giving an announcement party for a mutual friend and a couple of evenings before the party I brought the place cards over to Ruth's house to have her help me paint them and print the names of the engaged couple, which happened to be Barbara and George. It happened that George (that is Ruth's friend) was calling that night and he helped us.

I really don't know whether Ruth did it purposely or if it was a mistake but she seemed embarrassed and said, "O, I've written my name instead of Barbara's." This, of course, made the card read "Ruth and George." George took it and looked at it. He evidently liked it for he said, "I wish all the cards read that way and that the party was for us."

It didn't take me long to assure them that we would make it a double announcement party. They have now been married for four years and are as happy a couple as I ever saw. If Ruth didn't actually propose, it was as near to proposing as a girl of her temperament could come. H. M. W.

Useful Lines.

I was to take the part of a man in the class play at a girls' school, and had learned my part and everything came naturally except when I held out my arms to the girl and asked, "Will you marry me?" In rehearsal it sounded stiff and forced, partly, I suppose, because it was such an unnatural thing for me to say, and I had never said it before.

Thinking about it shortly before the play I said the words over to myself barely above a whisper when I was alone in my room.

The night before the play I had a sore throat and was in the front office of a young doctor, waiting to have it swabbed. I was alone in the room and almost unconsciously said, "Will you marry me?" I didn't realize until the man spoke that I had really uttered the words in a voice loud enough to carry, and that he had opened the door. The doctor nearly took me off my feet saying, "I intended to ask you as soon as I knew I could make a living here, but I didn't realize you really loved me so much." P. H.

Easy to Fix.

My aunt had been courted for some time, but her young man seemed to need assistance.

One evening some of their friends came in for a friendly visit. Conversation turned to names.

"Do you know, Ellen," he said to my aunt, "I like everything about you but your name."

"Well," she retorted mischievously, "why don't you change it?"

They will be married this month. B. B.

Women the World Over

It is said that Mrs. Bess Evinrude, who commutes between Milwaukee and New York, is responsible for the present popularity of outboard motorboat racing. She is the only woman executive in the motorboat industry.

Dr. Frances Clark has just completed two years with the Western Union Telegraph company in the capacity of metallographist. So far as is known, she is the only girl in the United States directing a laboratory of this kind.

Mrs. William D. Rock of Moorestown, N. J., has been named by the United States war department to head a jury of award which will select the design for the completion of the tomb of the Unknown Soldier in Arlington National cemetery.

Miss Elzora Gambrel of Ozark, Ark., has the distinction of being the first woman in her state to be admitted to the Federal court in that district.

One hundred and seventy-three women lawyers are members of the Paris bar, and 234 have been admitted since the beginning of this century.

The Prussian minister of justice has just appointed Germany's first woman judge, Dr. Maria Hagenmeyer having been selected to preside at the court located in Bonn.

The only woman's club to get in the congressional directory is the Congressional club, composed of women in Washington's official life. The club was incorporated by an act of congress in 1908.

The Last Word in Paris Fashions

The Era of Grace in Women's Dress Is Bringing Back a Relic of the Past—the Train

By Bettina Bedwell.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS.—[Special Correspondence.]—The fashion schedule of Paris calls for a great many more trains than this capital of clothes has seen for many a year. Some one out of the past generation would have to say when. Outside of the annual crop of presentation dresses, when ladies make their official bow to the few extant royal personages, trains as a part of clothes have been only a memory lo, these many years. That is, until lately. The era of simplicity did away with them, lopped 'em off ruthlessly in the interests of speed and uncomplication.

This last six months, however, terminated that era, quietly and without tears or ceremony, although there are still not an inconsiderable number of ladies who do not yet know for certain that it is over. A new era, epoch, decade, or whatever you want to call it has arrived in woman's dress. It is the era of grace, although it is more often called by another name—femininity. That is probably because when our clothes became masculine, as they did not so long ago, grace fled—fuit le camp—which is French for "beat it." Now that grace is once more the end and aim of all smart clothes, they seem indefinitely more feminine, since grace is not an attribute of anything that even borders on the masculine in apparel.

Setting up a new standard—that of grace, of poetry of motion—Paris naturally called forth all of the lines and details that could be conceived to increase the desired effect, and of course in the course of a short time, trains, because of their extreme loveliness of line, were once more in our midst. Now, as everybody knows, Paris proposes and woman disposes, so when Paris couturiers first proposed trained skirts, the weathered fashion expert looked at them with questioning, not to say skeptical, eyes. But the proof of the train was the wearing thereof, and so many distinguished women have taken to wearing frocks with filmy trailing lengths of material at the back, we can safely say that trains have arrived. We can also say that they will probably stay in Paris for some time.

The train when it was re-created out of the past had a bad name to live down. It was fixed in our minds under the caption of "stately," and stately is just another fashion synonym for mature. Even the new era of fashion—grace, poetry and all of that—hasn't made the idea of maturity in clothes any more palatable to most of us female creatures. The lately defunct era of simplicity taught us one thing which no new era is going to make us forget, and that is that fashions, like Peter Pan, need never grow up to that stodgy state known as maturity. If trained frocks had not gotten over that bar sinister I shouldn't be writing about them now. They would be written off of the Paris book of style as "total losses."

However, trains as they now come in to the Paris mode are gay young things, and they function solely to give grace to silhouette lines which are disarmingly young and insouciant. They are ephemeral cascades of vaporous material which fall to the ground at the back of otherwise pertly short skirts. There are long skirts in Paris fashions, but they are not skirts with trains. Trains are attached to skirts that just nicely cover the pretty knees of the modern girl.

Trained frocks logically are evening frocks. Common sense forbids them to appear in the daytime, but in the evening they are really irresistibly charming. Also most of the trained frocks that are the last word in Paris fashions are made of transparent materials—lace, chiffon, georgette, marquisette and the like. I have seen a few trained dresses in satin and moiré which were extraordinarily smart, but they are the exception and not the rule of the mode.

Our four sketches today will show the movement of fashion trains. The first one, which illustrates a trained frock from Jean Patou shows just how youthful and how completely delightful the new vogue for trains is. Eliminate the train and you have a simple, unusually graceful and practical dance dress.

Patou makes this model of his own particular vaporous material, called "fleur de soie," something like chiffon and something like georgette. It is in his special color, Japanese green, a beautiful spring shade. The blouse is very simple, indeed, and the skirt is cut circular, topped by a wide girdle of self-material that ties in an extraordinarily large butterfly bow at the center front. The train, which is made of a series of cascading, circular ruffles, is attached only at the hipline in back and falls in two long points at the heels.

Our second model, shows Chanel's inimitable way of giving a trained silhouette to a lace frock. She makes this frock of violet tinted lace, the color and the material being a favorite of this lady, who is one of the greatest of Paris mode makers. The blouse has a drooping bolero back which suggests in a smaller way the downward trail of the skirt, the latter being flared at the hemline to exaggerate this movement. The scarf of lace is not attached to the frock but is draped independently around the neck.

The third sketch shows Jeanne Lanvin's latest trained evening frock, a gorgeous model of black mousseline de soie, embroidered in silver spangles. The frock itself is a one piece garment with a flaring circular skirt and the wide draped girdle has extravagantly long ends which make the train, this being placed at the side instead of at the back of the skirt. A very special Lanvin detail is the cape-bertha of self material that covers the décolletage, and that may be removed at will.

Our fourth model shows an evening gown of black tulle, pailletted [spangled] in gold dots, which comes from Cheruit. This frock is one of the gowns that is worn this season by the beautiful Marquise de Polignac. The bodice of this model is unusually long and fitted to the figure. Its sole trimming is a large self-material flower on the left shoulder. The skirt is made of a series of very full gathered ruffles that merge into a bird-tail train at the back.

Chanel makes this second frock of violet tinted lace. The bolero back of the blouse suggests in a smaller way the downward trail of the skirt. The lace scarf is independent.

Third, the side-train is illustrated in this Jeanne Lanvin model, in black mousseline-de-soie, embroidered in silver spangles. The cape-bertha of self material is detachable.

Last, this Cheruit evening gown is in black tulle, spangled in gold dots. The bodice is extremely long and fitted to the figure, and the skirt is made of series of very full gathered ruffles, merging in a long train at back.

HOW TO USE THE PATTERNS

HERE is a smart design for a sports dress that shows a higher waistline than usual. The pattern is No. 3349. The waist and skirt are cut separately and joined underneath the kid belt, and the waist is allowed to blouse slightly. An applied band of a contrasting color finishes in a point just above the belt—the neck is cut in a slight V, and finished with a prettily shaped collar made of the same material as that used for the applied band, pocket laps and cuffs.

The front of the skirt is made with plaited sections that are inserted below patch pockets either side of the center, while in the back the skirt is straight and plain. The sleeves are cut in one piece, and the slight fullness is gathered into narrow bands, and finished with the cuffs of a contrasting color. Of, if you choose, you may set the sleeves into the bands of the contrasting color, letting the band finish in a point on the upper side.

The dress, as pictured here, is made of a beige silk crêpe overplaided in bright red, with plain red silk crêpe contrasting. Flat silk crêpe, shantung, crêpe satin, georgette crêpe, printed linen, tub silk or challis are any of them suitable and smart materials for this type of dress.

Lay the plaits before setting these pieces in the skirt, and do not remove the bastings until the dress is finished. Across the top you can take a right side seam, overcasting the edges together, and letting the seam go towards the pockets. Then, after the pockets are finished, baste them in place, so that the seam is entirely covered, and stitch around the edge and one-quarter inch in from the edge. Be sure and fasten all threads as you go, instead of leaving them until the rest of the work is done. Basting threads should also be clipped at close intervals and carefully removed.

Directions that come with the patterns show clearly how to adjust the band and collar, and the sleeves are very simple to make. Of course you should be sure before using a pattern to see that sleeve and dress lengths will be right for you, and verify any other measures that you may be in doubt about.

Pattern No. 3333 is rather an intricate looking design to make, but it is as easy as can be. It features all the new style tendencies—in one sidedness, the tiered skirt, the uneven hemline, and the swathed girdle. You will surely wish to use this pattern, making it up in rayon crêpe, crêpe satin, printed silk crêpe, sheer crêpe in delicate coloring, voile, or printed linen.

The upper and lower parts of this frock are cut separately and joined under the girdle, and the directions that are given with the pattern explain clearly how to cut and put the dress together. The tiered edges of the skirt can be finished with a narrow bias binding, or they may be picoted, and the sleeves may be finished short, or made close fitting and full length. The neck will look well bound, if the skirt edges have that finish, or it may have a narrow, wrong side bias facing, and a narrow lace edge set on flat on the right side. The sleeves should match the neck in the manner of finishing.

Pattern No. 3322 is a smart design for a dress for general daytime wear. It shows a small cluster of tucks on each front shoulder, and the new drape treatment at the left side of the skirt. This is a design that will be effective made of a printed and plain material combined, using the plain for the finish at the neck, wrists, and girdle. The back of the dress is cut in one piece, and the front in two; and it is interesting to note that the draped part is cut in one with the right front section, making it easier to handle. This dress can be finished with a hem at the bottom, of course putting it in by hand, and making the sewing invisible. Chiffon, georgette crêpe, crêpe satin, Canton-faille crêpe, chiffon voile, and rayon crêpe are suitable materials for its development.

The Christmas Cigar.

My most embarrassing moment occurred when we were expecting my brother from out of town to visit us. I was not at home when he arrived. Upon returning home I heard voices in the parlor and as there was a scent of cigar smoke I called to my brother, "Where did you get the cheap cigar? It smells terrible. Throw it away."

To my astonishment my boy friend called unexpectedly. It was he who was smoking the cigar, and to further add to my humiliation he informed he was smoking one of the cigars I gave him for Christmas.

Taking Ways.

Coming home from a school one day, I went into a book store to look over some of the new books. I laid my purse down and when I picked it up I also took up the two books on which it had been laying and started to leave the store. As I passed through the door a clerk came running after me, "Hey, there, what are you trying to do, walking off with those books?"

Overcome with mortification, I handed them back, stammering that I was so used to carrying books home from school and in my abstraction had forgotten that I did not have any with me that day.

Boudoir Attire.

One evening, on the spur of the moment, my roommate and I decided to attend a local movie about a block from our residence.

After dressing hurriedly, as we did not wish to miss the beginning of the play, we dashed down the street to the theater. The lobby was rather crowded, and while waiting in line for our tickets, I noticed every one looking at my feet, some laughing outright and others with varied expressions on their faces.

I glanced down, and with a sickening sensation in the pit of my stomach, I saw I had forgtten to change slippers, and still had on a pair of badly worn, brazenly purple satin mules!

I cannot imagine myself surviving an experience more embarrassing than that.

Bedtime Prayers for the Children

by Mrs. Gladys Huntington Bevans

SOME of the most enlightening, the most intimate, and the most important things we learn about childhood we learn through the retrospection of grown people.

Especially in regard to fears does this seem to be the case. The fears of childhood are rarely expressed at the time they are being experienced. And often we would not realize their existence at all if we did not have our own memories of our early dreads to give us the clue. If we dig back and use thoughtfully what we find it will often help us to spare those children we come in contact with much unnecessary misery, or help us to interpet signs of suppressed fears so that we can deal with them in the open.

The letters I have received since writing the article which mentioned the prayer beginning "Now I lay me" have been most illuminating. They have further shown how actual is the fact that many children have been terrorized by the ending of that, unfortunately, time-honored bedtime prayer—"If I should die before I wake I pray the Lord my soul to take."

This fearful state of mind in some cases has been shown by the children, themselves. Some of them have simply refused to say the ending of the prayer, though one mother writes she tried for two years to get her little girl to finish it, while other children have asked questions about dying and the Lord taking their souls. The other source of knowledge and the most general one regarding children's feeling about the prayer becomes known to us through parents' own remembrances of their childhood.

"Both my husband and I long ago discussed this and what a paralyzing effect it had upon us during childhood, although we never told our parents of it—I suppose children are the same the world over."

A father of five children writes:

"I recall my early impressions of this prayer and recall how for weeks I could not go to sleep until, after my prayer, I had devoted possibly half to three-quarters of an hour to things I had planned for the morrow.

"My parents were not taken into my confidence, nor were my brothers and sisters, and as time went on the subject remained with me. So when I called my little girl [now 30] to kneel and told her I would teach her a little prayer, I taught her this one:

"'Now I lay me down to sleep—
I know that God His child doth keep.
I trust him for my daily food,
My life, my health, and all my good.
May I grow stronger day by day
And learn to live the truest way.
All this I ask because I know
Thou art the Love that wills it so.'

"I am sure if the children were taught this prayer instead of the old one thousands upon thousands of them would grow up in a much happier frame of mind by doing so. I suggest that you make a world-wide appeal through the press."

See how far from trivial this father considers the effect of a fear-suggesting prayer!

From Another Parent.

The mother of two little daughters says:

"I venture to forward the prayers I have taught them, and many other children before my marriage. As you will see for yourself, the words are simple, beautiful, and peaceful, which, to my mind, is what every child needs at bedtime. I agree with the little girl who once said to her mother, 'What's all this dying business, anyway, you make me say at bedtime? Is there any danger of it happening every night?' When her mother told her no, she declared, 'All right then, mother—I'm not going to say that part.'"

And here is her prayer, one which many other parents have sent me:

"Father, we thank thee for the night,
And for the blessed morning light,
For rest and gladness, love and care,
And all that makes the world most fair.
Help us to do the things we should,
To be to others kind and good
In all we do—in work & play,
To grow more loving every day."

Taking Fear Away.

From another home comes this letter:

"Your article in yesterday's issue of the paper caught my interest, for when I grew up my own mother confessed to me that she never taught her children to say that particular line of the 'Now I lay me' prayer because as a child it always frightened her. She said she would say, 'If I should die before I wake' and then rattle off to herself just as fast as she could say it under her breath, 'But please, Lord, don't make me die tonight,' for very fear that He might strike her dead before she could reach the end of the prayer.

"The version I have taught my little daughter of the third generation may be of interest:

"'Now I lay me down to sleep,
I pray the Lord my soul to keep.
Thy love (and care) go with me through the night,
And wake me with the morning light."'

A young mother writes:

"Before my marriage I was a child's nurse and governess for years, and was surprised at the many seemingly intelligent mothers who insisted upon their children saying just this particular prayer ('Now I lay me'). Here are the lines I overheard another nurse teaching her little charge, and which I promptly taught mine:

"'Dear Lord, I'll soon be in my bed,
To go to sleep and rest.
Thoughts will come into my head—
Please make them of the best.
Please send the kinds of thoughts that make
Good dreams and healthful sleep,
So that tomorrow when I wake
I'll have good thoughts to keep.'"

I have a twofold purpose in writing this article. One is to make those parents who may be inclined to discount it realize that children's fear of death induced by a wrong bedtime prayer is a very real, a concrete thing—quite important enough for them to do something about.

The other purpose is to give as many good bedtime prayers as possible for parents to choose from. I have less space left than I need for the selection of prayers, so I shall have to continue to publish them in daily articles from time to time, as some are too good to be lost.

How Famous Model Bleaches Her Skin

Miss Betty Thatcher, well-known artist's model and noted particularly for the pure beauty of her skin, has her own idea of a skin bleach. She buys no ready-made preparation, but "mixes her own." Her recipe, in her own words, is very simple.

"I get three ounces of Orchard White from the druggist and to this I add the juice of two lemons. This makes a full quarter pint of a remarkably effective and at the same time perfectly harmless bleach. Massaged into face, neck and arms it softens and refines rough and coarse skin and bleaches red, sallow and discolored skin to a clear rosy white. It also fades away tan and freckles. Nothing like this wonderful mixture can be bought ready to use, for half of its efficacy is due to the fact that it is used while fresh."

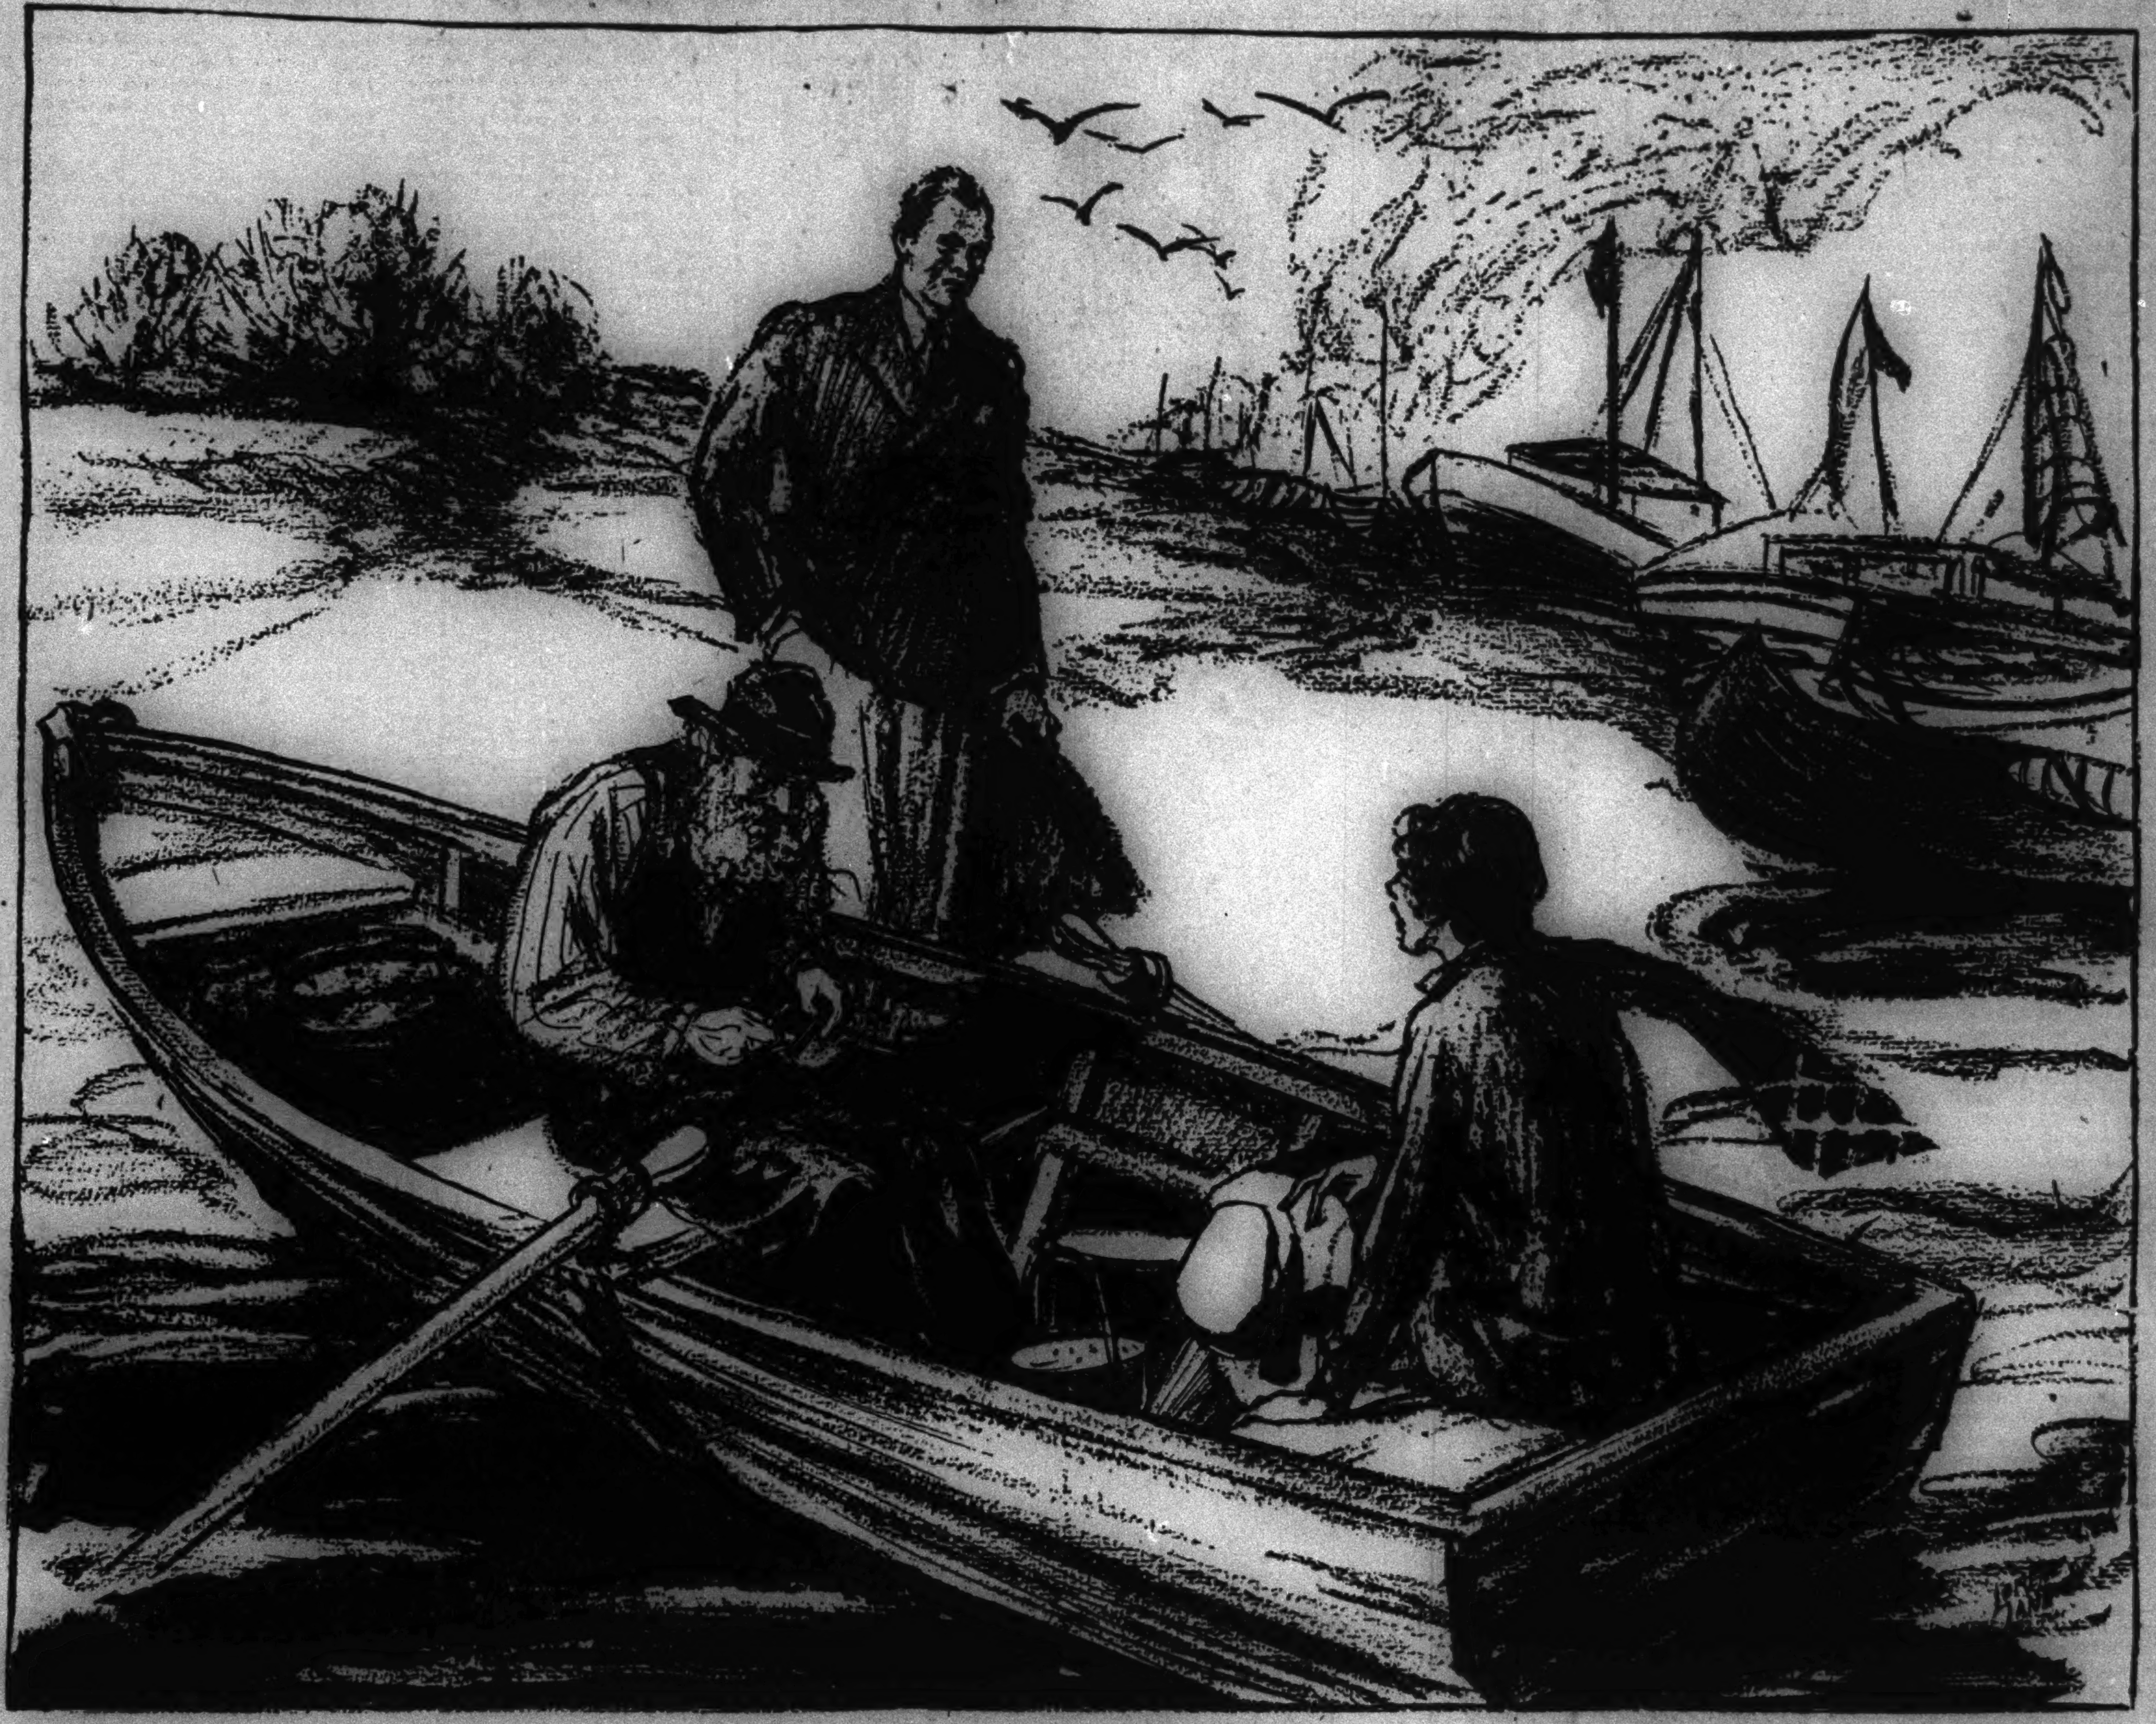
LOVE SHY

—By— Richard Connell

Julie Passes On the Information to Bella's Young Man That "Even a College Girl Can't Use Her Vocabulary When She's Being Kissed."



He stood for a second, seeking fitting words.

"OF COURSE," admitted Bella Kindred, "I don't know much about men——"

Julie Wood laughed.

"After all, my dear, how could you?" she said. "I warned you not to go to a woman's college. No man likes a girl because she can name all the stars or can quote from Beowulf."

They had been the most intimate of friends in finishing school, but they had not seen each other for more than a year. That afternoon Julie had arrived at the elaborate log lodge in the Adirondacks where Bella was spending the summer with her aunt; and in their room, cooled by the breeze from Antler lake, Julie and Bella had been talking steadily since they donned their pajamas at ten o'clock—and it was now past midnight.

"No," said Julie, wagging her close cropped black head, and looking like a tanned and distinctly unmanageable small boy, "I'd never send a daughter of mine to one of those female monasteries."

"Monasteries is hardly the word, dear."

"O, don't be so frightfully academic, Bella. You know what I mean. What's the sense of shutting a girl up with seven hundred other girls during the most romantic time of her life and teaching her about Socrates and birds and flowers and acids when her real interest is in the one thing they teach her absolutely nothing about?"

"Meaning what?"

"Meaning—men."

"But—how could they?"

Miss Wood's small face took on a sage expression.

"They will," she declared, "in time. Understanding men is an art. They teach all the others—so why not the most important one—to a girl."

"To some girls," said Bella.

"I suppose all the men in the world could go and jump in the sea for all you care," suggested Julie.

"Well—not all of them, perhaps. But I have other interests."

"O, forget your cap and gown. You're human. Bella?"

"Yes, dear?"

"Have you ever been engaged?"

"Well—no. Have you?"

"I practically always am."

"Are you now?"

"No. I'm resting."

"Do you mean you've been engaged to more than one man?"

"Four," said Julie. "Four and a half—to be accurate. I was half engaged when I was seventeen."

"But, Julie, when you let a man become engaged to you don't you seriously expect to marry him?"

"Certainly. It would be no fun if I didn't. I'm sure he's the right man—sometimes for as much as three months."

"THEN what happens?"

"Bella, did you ever run over a nail in your roadster?"

"Yes."

"Remember how the air goes out with a wooooooooosh?"

"Yes."

"Well, that's what happens. We're sailing along in a blissful state—and then—wooooooooosh—another flat tire. I have more sense now. I won't make any more mistakes. I've found out one thing."

"What's that?"

"I'll never marry an American—and particularly a business man."

"Why not, Julie?"

"Oysters," said Julie. "Unromantic oysters. They may talk of love, but it's just a lot of verbs and adjectives to them. They put all their ardor into the stock market. They make love because it is the thing to do—like playing polo or wearing double breasted suits—but, if they could, they'd hold your hand with one of theirs, and the ticker tape with the other. They make love like so many trained halibut—and it's because they're—well—love-shy."

"O, Julie, I don't believe that."

"You have only theories to go on, Bella. I know. You get your ideas of love making from reading romantic novels. O, I know them. Some funny looking author locks himself up in a room and writes down all the burning words he'd like to say if he had the nerve and could find a girl who would listen to him. In real life, men just don't know how. Most American men are afraid to kiss a girl unless they have written permission from her parents, signed in the presence of witnesses."

"A man should respect a girl—if he cares anything about her," said Bella Kindred.

"Come out of the laboratory, Queen Victoria, and try a hammock. You'll find plenty of fine, clean cut young Americans—I've been engaged to some of them—who are good looking, dress well, make money, shoot corking golf, dance divinely, mix superb cocktails, and are attractive enough to arouse your interest—but who are clumsy, faint hearted boys when it comes to making love. They can do everything well—but that. A girl wants a man who can make her feel love—and that's what they can't do. She doesn't want to be hinted into marriage. She wants to be captured, swept off her feet; she wants to feel like a canoe going over Niagara Falls——"

"Some may," said Bella Kindred. "That's not my idea of love at all."

"What is, then?"

"Love," said Bella, "should be a growth. It must be based on mutual respect. The man must show tenderness, consideration——"

"Go on, professor."

"He must prove that he is worthy of her trust——"

"So far, so good," said Julie. "But it isn't enough. Gentleness and sweetness are fine traits in a man—but they don't thrill you. Bella, don't try to fool yourself. A girl can go to all the colleges from here to Shanghai but she can't get away from her primitive instincts. She doesn't want to be respected as much as she wants to be pursued—and won. She doesn't want to give—she wants to be taken."

"I'm afraid," said Bella, "I'm hopelessly unfeminine or old fashioned or something. You seem to want a sort of caveman. I'd hate one."

"He'd have to have good table manners," amended Julie. "Bella, tell me: What sort of man do you want?"

"I didn't say I want any man."

"O, well, then, what sort of man would you want if you wanted one?"

"You'll only laugh at me if I tell you."

"I'll try not to, dear."

"Well," said Beiia Kindred, "I suppose you'd call him a—good man. I don't mean a namby pamby. I mean a sensible, decent man who is sensitive and unselfish and considers the rights of others——"

"Meaning yours."

"Mine, naturally. He'd have to be the sort of man with whom I could keep up an intellectual comradeship for a long time, with no thought of love making—Julie! Stop laughing."

"You don't want a man, Bella; you want an encyclopedia."

"Well, you want a tornado."

"Let's not be snooty. Bella, you should marry if for no other reason than that you'll look so adorable as a bride with your long golden hair and your wide eyed Madonna look. I'll have to try to find a Galahad for you."

"Don't bother."

"Bella, you don't mean you've found one!"

"Maybe I have."

"O, my dear! And you haven't said a word about him. You must tell me—everything. What's he like? Is he handsome? What's his name? What does he do? When are you to be married?"

"Julie, Julie, not so fast! First, we haven't discussed being married."

"What? What do you talk about?"

"We're not even engaged—yet."

"How long have you known him?"

"Five months."

"And you're not even engaged?"

Bella smiled.

"He's not one of your tornadoes, Julie," she said. "That's why I like him. He's—well—quiet."

"Has he kissed you?"

"No!"

"Has he tried to?"

"No!"

"Quiet?" said Julie. "He's inaudible."

"He's a gentleman," said Bella, stiffly.

"THERE, there, dear. Don't flare up. You like him—that's the important thing. I never try to explain love. But, Bella, does he like you?"

"I think so."

"Hasn't he said so?"

"No."

"Hasn't he even sort of hinted?"

"We haven't come to that yet; we've talked mostly of books and plays——"

"For five months? He must read a lot."

"Well, it hasn't been five months—really," Bella said. "You see I met him early this spring at a dance in New York and he called on me—twice. Then he had to go west on a business trip—and he wrote me—now and then—and two weeks ago he happened to come to Antler lake for his vacation."

"Remarkable coincidence," said Julie. "I'll bet he was surprised to find you here. But go on, dear. Give me a bird's eye view of him."

"He's rather good looking," said Bella, blushing a little. "Not too good looking, you know——"

"A strong, silent face," Julie suggested.

"A thoughtful face," amended Bella. "You might even call it reserved."

"Thank you, dear, for letting me."

"Julie, I'm being serious."

"Of course you are. Man is a serious subject. Is he married?"

"Of course not."

"That's lucky. So many of the good ones are," said Julie. "College?"

"Princeton."

"Then he has lovely manners—and is blonde."

"He has lovely manners and he's sandy."

"How old is he?"

"About thirty."

"Rich?"

"Not very. He's a junior partner in an investment banking house, I believe."

"That helps. Has he a past?"

"Julie Wood, what a horrid thing to suggest!"

"I'm not suggesting. I'm only asking. After all, dear, even Princeton men sometimes have pasts."

"I'm sure Sherman hasn't. He's been much too busy. He isn't the kind anyhow; he comes from a very old and fine Woonsocket family."

"That eliminates the past. So his name is Sherman? What else?"

"Boyden—Sherman G. Boyden."

"G for Gallahad?"

"Gillespie."

"Sounds romantic. Have you seen a lot of each other since he happened to come here?"

"Every day."

"That's promising. Been canoeing?"

"Yes."

"By moonlight?"

"No."

"Bella, tell me something; Do you ever feel that you'd like to be marooned on a desert island with him?"

"Why, I can't say I ever thought of it."

"But would you?"

Bella considered.

"If I had to be marooned anywhere with anybody," she said, finally, "I'd prefer a man like Sherman."

"That's caution for you," said Julie. "Now, as for me, whenever I'm engaged to a man I always dream of being marooned on a desert island with him."

"I suppose," said Bella, "it would be a test."

Her eyes wandered out over the moonlit lake.

"I know," she said, "I wouldn't be afraid to put Sherman to a test like that. I know he could be trusted to be a gentleman—anywhere."

"I wouldn't put it past him," said Julie.

"What do you know about him?"

"Only what you've told me. Well, it's after two. You'd better get some sleep, Bella, if you are going to see him today."

"We're going canoeing," Bella said.

"How nice! There'll be a moon."

"We plan to be back before dusk."

"Want a chaperon?"

"Stop being humorous and go to sleep."

"A girl wants to be captured, swept off her feet."

AFTER lunch they were sitting on the wide porch of the lodge, with the sparkling blue expanse of the lake at their feet.

"Here comes Galahad now!" exclaimed Julie.

"I wish you wouldn't call him that."

"All right, Sherman, then. That is Sherman, isn't it?"

Around a small tongue of land a young man in white flannels was propelling a canoe toward the landing in front of the lodge.

"Yes—that's Sherman," said Bella.

"I thought so."

"Why?"

"The way he paddles—he's a strong, silent paddler; and, Bella, he's rather nice looking."

"I think he is."

"I can see his chin from here. There's character in that chin, Bella."

Sherman Boyden made a neat landing beside the float. He gave Bella a firm handshake and was duly presented to Miss Julie Wood.

"Isn't it a heavenly day," said Julie.

Mr. Boyden studied the cloudless sky a moment before answering.

"Yes," he decided, "it is."

Very solicitously he helped Bella into the canoe.

"Good-by," called Julie. "Enjoy yourselves."

"Thank you," said Mr. Boyden, inserting his paddle into the water and pushing firmly. The canoe began a steady march across the wide lake.

They were paddling gently along the shore of a shallow cove which indented the thickly wooded shore of Lesser Crescent island.

"Periodically," Mr. Boyden was saying. "I re-read Dickens. I know he is considered old fashioned by the modernists who would rather write about a mud puddle than a clear mountain spring, but I guess I'm old fashioned, too. I like his humanity, his insight into men and women."

"O, Sherman, look! On the bank there—that marvelous clump of cardinal flowers."

"Lovely, aren't they?"

"Let's stop and pick some," said Bella.

"I'm afraid we'd better not stop," he said. "It's getting late—and it's a long paddle back to the lodge."

"O, please," said Bella.

"Very well."

He pointed the nose of the canoe toward the shore. With one final vigorous shove he beached it. There was a ripping, rending sound.

"O, what was that?" cried Bella, springing out.

"Rock," said Mr. Boyden, grimly. "A concealed rock with an edge like a knife. I didn't see it."

"The canoe is filling with water," said Bella.

"So I see," said Mr. Boyden.

"It's a great, big hole."

"I'll try to patch it up."

HE hauled the canoe up on dry land and turned it over.

"Yes," he said, gravely, "it's a big hole, all right."

"Can you fix it?"

"I'll try."

"What with?"

"That remains to be seen."

"How about chewing gum? I read once about a man stopping a hole in a boat with chewing gum," said Bella.

"Have you any?"

"No."

"Anyhow," said Mr. Boyden, moodily eyeing the gaping wound in the canoe, "it would take about thirty dollars worth to plug up this hole."

"It's all my fault," said Bella. "If I hadn't insisted on stopping to pick those flowers——"

"It's fate," said Mr. Boyden.

Bella sat down on a rock.

"Well," she said, "here we are."

Mr. Boyden sat down beside her.

"Yes," he said, "here we are."

They sat wrapped in silent thought.

"Let's yell," he said, finally.

"What for?" asked Bella.

"Some one might hear us."

"There isn't apt to be anybody within miles."

"There might be."

"I don't know how to yell—anyhow."

"It's worth trying."

"Very well. We'll yell."

They stood up, side by side, on the rock.

"One, two, three," counted Mr. Boyden.

"OOOOOOOOOOOOOooooOOOOW!"

A baritone and soprano noise echoed over the lake.

"We can't keep this up indefinitely," said Bella. "I'm hoarse already."

"I'll call co-ee," said Mr. Boyden.

"What good will that do?"

"I have read," said Mr. Boyden, "that it is a call used by Australians lost in the bush because it carries farther than any other sound the human voice can make."

"Go ahead, Sherman," said Bella. "Co-ee."

Mr. Boyden cupped his hands to his lips, filled his lungs with air, and emitted a series of long and energetic co-ees.

"It's rather hard on one's throat," he said.

"You'd better stop," said Bella. "There's pretty sure to be nobody within range. Besides, you might attract a moose."

"We'll light a signal fire," said Mr. Boyden.

"Who'll see it! It isn't dark, anyhow."

"It will be soon enough," said Mr. Boyden.

"But have you any matches?"

HE reached into his pocket and a doleful exclamation escaped from him.

"All wet," he said. Then he brightened.

"We needn't worry," he said.

"I'm not worrying," said Bella.

"I'm glad to hear that. We'll be missed, of course, at the lodge, and they'll send out a searching party for us. They'll be sure to come to this island sooner or later, so there's no cause for alarm, Bella."

"Who's alarmed?" said Bella. "Only—nobody will come for us tonight."

"What?" Mr. Boyden stared at her. "Why not?"

"Because," replied Bella, "Uncle Hugh and Aunt Grace and Mr. and Mrs. Clifford went in the motor boat this afternoon to the far end of the lake to have dinner and spend the night with the Livingstones——"

"But that girl—Miss Wood——"

"She's alone with the two maids—and there's no telephone——"

"But she'll do something, surely. She'll send for help——"

"I doubt it," said Bella, slowly. "I doubt if she'll worry much about us——"

"Why not?"

"O, I've a feeling that Julie doesn't worry much—about such things."

Mr. Boyden got up from the rock decisively.

"Well," he said, "there's only one thing to do in the circumstances."

"Yes—Sherman?" she said.

"We must be philosophic," he said. "Make the best of it. After all, it's a comparatively mild night and tomorrow is not far off——"

"I'm getting hungry," said Bella.

"We can eat the rest of the salted peanuts," said Mr. Boyden, and produced a half empty jar. Bella, sitting on the rock, nibbled peanuts.

"Won't you have some, too, Sherman?" she asked.

"I'm not hungry," said Mr. Boyden.

The sun was nearly out of sight now.

"Penny for your thoughts," said Bella.

"I was thinking," said Mr. Boyden, "about what the sunset reminded me of."

"Yes—Sherman?"

"Strawberry ice cream," he said.

AGAIN they were silent for a time.

"Sherman."

"Yes, Bella."

"It's very silent here, isn't it?"

"Yes. Very."

"I think it's rather fun—being alone—sometimes."

"Yes—if it isn't too chilly. I'm afraid you'll catch cold, Bella."

"O, Sherman! I just remembered something."

"What?"

"There's a house on this island."

"A house?" he asked, quickly. "People live here?"

"No. It's just a tiny cabin, I believe. I heard Aunt Grace mention it. This must be the island it's on."

He walked toward the water, a stern look on his face.

"O, Sherman, where are you going?" Bella cried.

"I'm going to swim to the mainland," he said.

She scrambled down from the rock and ran to his side.

"Sherman Boyden, you are going to do no such thing. Feel that water. It's cold as ice. You'd get cramps. It's a good four miles to the mainland. Besides, do you think I'm going to stay here alone in the dark? Why there might be moose and snakes and bears——"

"You want me to stay?"

"Yes, Sherman, I do."

"Very well. I suppose it would be a good idea to look for that cabin while some light is left."

"It can't be far away," said Bella.

They pushed through the underbrush and a short distance from the shore came upon a small cabin, perched on a rise of ground.

"It's going to be a cold night," said Bella.

"We could start a fire—if we only had matches," said Mr. Boyden. "But, anyhow, this cabin looks snug enough."

He pushed open the door and peered about in the dim interior of the single room.

"Not bad at all," he announced.

"Why, there's a nice bunk, and blankets, and chairs and everything," exclaimed Bella, following him into the cabin. "This must be the cabin Aunt Grace loaned to Jack and Polly Loring last month for their honeymoon. What a sweet place!"

"Some mosquitoes, though," said Mr. Boyden.

"Jack and Polly left here only ten days ago," said Bella. "It's a charming place for a honeymoon, don't you think so, Sherman?"

"Yes. Perhaps they left some food behind."

He examined a cupboard.

"What luck!" he said. "Some lumps of sugar and some tea. Now if we only had a match."

"I'm always a little scared in the dark," Bella said.

"There must be matches here," said Mr. Boyden. He was rummaging in the cupboard.

The PEACE STONE by HENRY C. ROWLAND

THE STORY HITHERTO:

THE PEACE STONE is a priceless rose diamond, a traditional sacred talisman that has been in the custody of the French family of De Marsac for two centuries. Originally it was confided to a De Marsac on pilgrimage to Palestine by a dying holy man of a mystic order for delivery to Esteban Mordecay, Cadiz banker; but Mordecay had vanished, and the De Marsacs through the years sought a rightful heir to the jewel. The Comte de Marsac, present custodian of the stone, has a son, Vicomte Armand, French naval lieutenant, and two daughters, Jacqueline and Annik. Raoul de Rimbec, distant cousin of the vicomte, calls on Easter Mordecay in Washington, posing as Armand. Raoul announces that Easter has been proved heir to the jewel and that the comte wishes to present it to her. Easter voyages to France with her guardian, Wayne Carter, and Mrs. Carter. They are accompanied by Carter's son, Devlin, a nomadic savant. Easter accepts the diamond. Raoul abducts her and holds her for ransom. Jacqueline, Devlin Carter discovers, is in love with Raoul.

INSTALLMENT VI.

Plot and Counterplot.

JACQUELINE and Devlin reached the big gates, passed between the huge square columns that were weathered with age and bore on their pediments the De Marsac arms on which, eroded as they were, Devlin perceived the stoat or ermine of feudal Brittany. Then, looking round, he saw approaching close under the wall a man of middle age, in the long blouse and beret and sabots of the Breton fisherman.

He was the most frequent type, a stolid fellow, florid of coloring, with features that would have been handsome if more fine, china blue eyes, a little bloodshot, and a general expression of which the blankness can frequently mask a great deal of cunning. Devlin was familiar with the breed, had also heard it ably described during the war by an American secret agent of naval intelligence, who was working under the smoke screen of war correspondent for an American publication.

Convinced that this must be the messenger, Devlin stepped up to the man and said briefly: "You have a letter for Monsieur Carter? I am he."

The man gave him a pale look of scrutiny, then glanced at Jacqueline.

"C'est bien lui, Madame?"

Jacqueline had no choice but to answer affirmatively. She added then—"but you had better deliver the letter to Monsieur le Comte."

It did not avail her. Assured of Devlin's identity, the man took from his blouse an envelope which Devlin did not wait to have handed him.

Jacqueline's lids narrowed. She said to Devlin, this time with a peremptory note:

"My father urgently requests, monsieur, that all communications be shown him immediately. Will you not please open it in his presence?"

Devlin stared at her in affected surprise. "But since it is addressed to me, why should I not open it at once? You seem to forget that Miss Mordecay is like my sister. Perhaps it is from her."

Jacqueline stamped her foot. "My father insists upon the management of this affair, monsieur, and it is for him to see all communications first, no matter to whom addressed."

"That," said Devlin shortly, "is carrying authority too far." He glanced down at the envelope. They had come out of the grounds by the small door at one side of the main gates which were, as is usual en province, closed and secured by heavy bolts inside. Both door and gates were of boiler iron, painted a dark green, grilled at the top with iron scroll work. A caller, whether on foot or vehicled, was required to ring the great bronze bell by a tug on the bronze chain.

The small door had been left ajar. Devlin was holding the envelope on which was written in the small, square British hand of the public schools and universities.

"Mr. Carter," and underneath, "pere ou fils." Glancing at this before ripping open the envelope, Devlin failed to see the sudden flame in Jacqueline's eyes.

He was, therefore, caught off his guard, entirely unprepared for an act that may have been partly inspired by directions from Jacqueline's father, partly the determination to protect, if possible, the man with whom she was in love.

THE letter was snatched from Devlin's hands. At the same moment a push against his shoulder set him a little off his balance. Before he could recover himself Jacqueline had whisked through the small iron door and closed it behind her with a clang. Devlin heard her flying footsteps going up the graveled drive.

He sprang to the door and found it locked. He might have leaped up and climbed over the wall but could scarcely have hoped to overtake the girl. Even then he might have tried had not the peasant turned instantly and started away with a shambling gait that indicated an urgent desire to be off before further questioning.

"Stop!" Devlin called sharply in French.

The Breton paid no attention. Devlin leaped after him, gripped his shoulder and flung him against the wall with a force that seemed to bewilder the fellow. He grasped instinctively at the bosom of his blouse. Devlin's keen eyes did not miss the gesture.

"You have another letter? For Monsieur le Comte?"

"Mais non, Monsieur."

"Give it to me."

The man shrank back still clutching at his blouse. Devlin stepped in closer, then as the man cringed away blinking a little like a bullock from the lash across his face, Devlin's arm shot up and the ball of his hand caught the fellow slightly under the angle of his jaw. It would have been for most men a knockout blow, but this type is heavily boned, no doubt accustomed to concussions from pitching drunk with cidre or eau de vie head first into fishing boats. The heavy blow seemed merely to daze the man.

Before he could recover Devlin's grip fastened on his big heavy wrist, jerked it out of the aperture of his blouse. Another letter was held in the man's hand. Devlin snatched it from him.

"A fair exchange," he said in the proverb which is also French, "is not a theft. Since madame has seen fit to run off with my letter, then I shall take that of the comte. Stay where you are, you, if you don't want another and a harder wallop."

The letter read as follows:

"Mon Père:

"With deep regret for what necessity has compelled me to do I beg to assure you that if the directions indicated in my letter to Mr. Carter are complied with, this unfortunate affair may be promptly terminated.

"I am obliged to warn you that any effort at my seizure must ruin the situation for us all. I shall then be obliged to retain custody of mademoiselle until my safety seems assured. Thereafter I shall dispose of the jewel as best I may. On the other hand, if my terms are met with, the jewel shall be restored and mademoiselle shall be at liberty to return immediately.

"It is inconvenient at this moment to explain to you the unfortunate situation that has made it necessary for me to resort to so infamous a measure. I can say only that I have done so through finding myself in an impasse Of the two dishonors I have chosen that which would seem to be the lesser.

"With profound remorse,

"Your unhappy son,

"ARMAND."

THE design of this forgery, no doubt a very clever one and the result of long practice, was immediately clear to Devlin. Raoul trusted that his impersonation of Armand might not yet have been discovered. Indeed, Devlin reflected that it had actually been discovered only by merest accident his casual reference to Armand's facial features when Annik had spoken of her brother as being slow and ceremonious, so that his navy friends had given him jokingly the sobriquet of Sea-turtle. Then on Devlin's surprise at this inept petit nom Annik had partly explained it by mention of her brother's nose, the hooked Norman nose of her mother's family. Following this Devlin had made his sketch.

He now reflected that only for this chance reference Raoul's true identity might have rested undiscovered. But now all were aware that Raoul was the villain of the piece and no telling what he might have done to or with Armand.

Herein lay the present rub. This letter to the comte could avail nothing because it told him nothing to relieve his overwhelming anxiety. Also since this letter pretended to be from Armand, so likewise must that addressed to the Carters.

Devlin wondered if the comte would dare withhold that communication, and something told him that he would. In the frantic anxiety that obsessed him the comte was not apt to consider Easter at all. Resting on his droit de seigneur, the comte, Devlin believed, would be certain to take measures of his own in which Easter's welfare would be entirely secondary.

Devlin looked thoughtfully at the peasant, who stood slumped with his sagging shoulders against the wall. It was impossible to say how much this stolid fellow knew and he seemed at best an unpromising individual with which to deal.

Devlin was quite right in presuming that one might about as well try to treat or reason with a bobtailed sheep dog that had come to the gate with the note tied to its collar.

"Listen, bonhomme," Devlin said. "We have been tricked by madame. When the comte reads that letter she took he will refuse to deal with your master at all."

THE man did not answer. His blue eyes reddened by sea and cider, goggled vacantly at Devlin.

"But I," said Devlin, "am American, and therefore very rich. I will pay your master whatever he demands. That for me is nothing. A bagatelle. But you will have to take me to him immediately."

The fellow shook his head stupidly. "He is far away, monsieur."

"How far?"

"I do not know."

"When did you see him?"

"I have not seen him at all."

"How did you get these letters?"

"By the poste. The courier brought them."

"Why did you bring them here?"

"My daughter told me to. Me, I know nothing. I cannot read. I thought I might get a grosse piece and instead I get a blow on the jaw."

"That can be healed." Devlin reached in his pocket, then gave him a billet of twenty francs.

"Merci, monsieur."

"Are you a fisherman?"

"H'oui, monsieur"—Bretons are apt to aspirate their vowels.

"Where do you live?"

"By Mousterlin, monsieur."

"What is your name?"

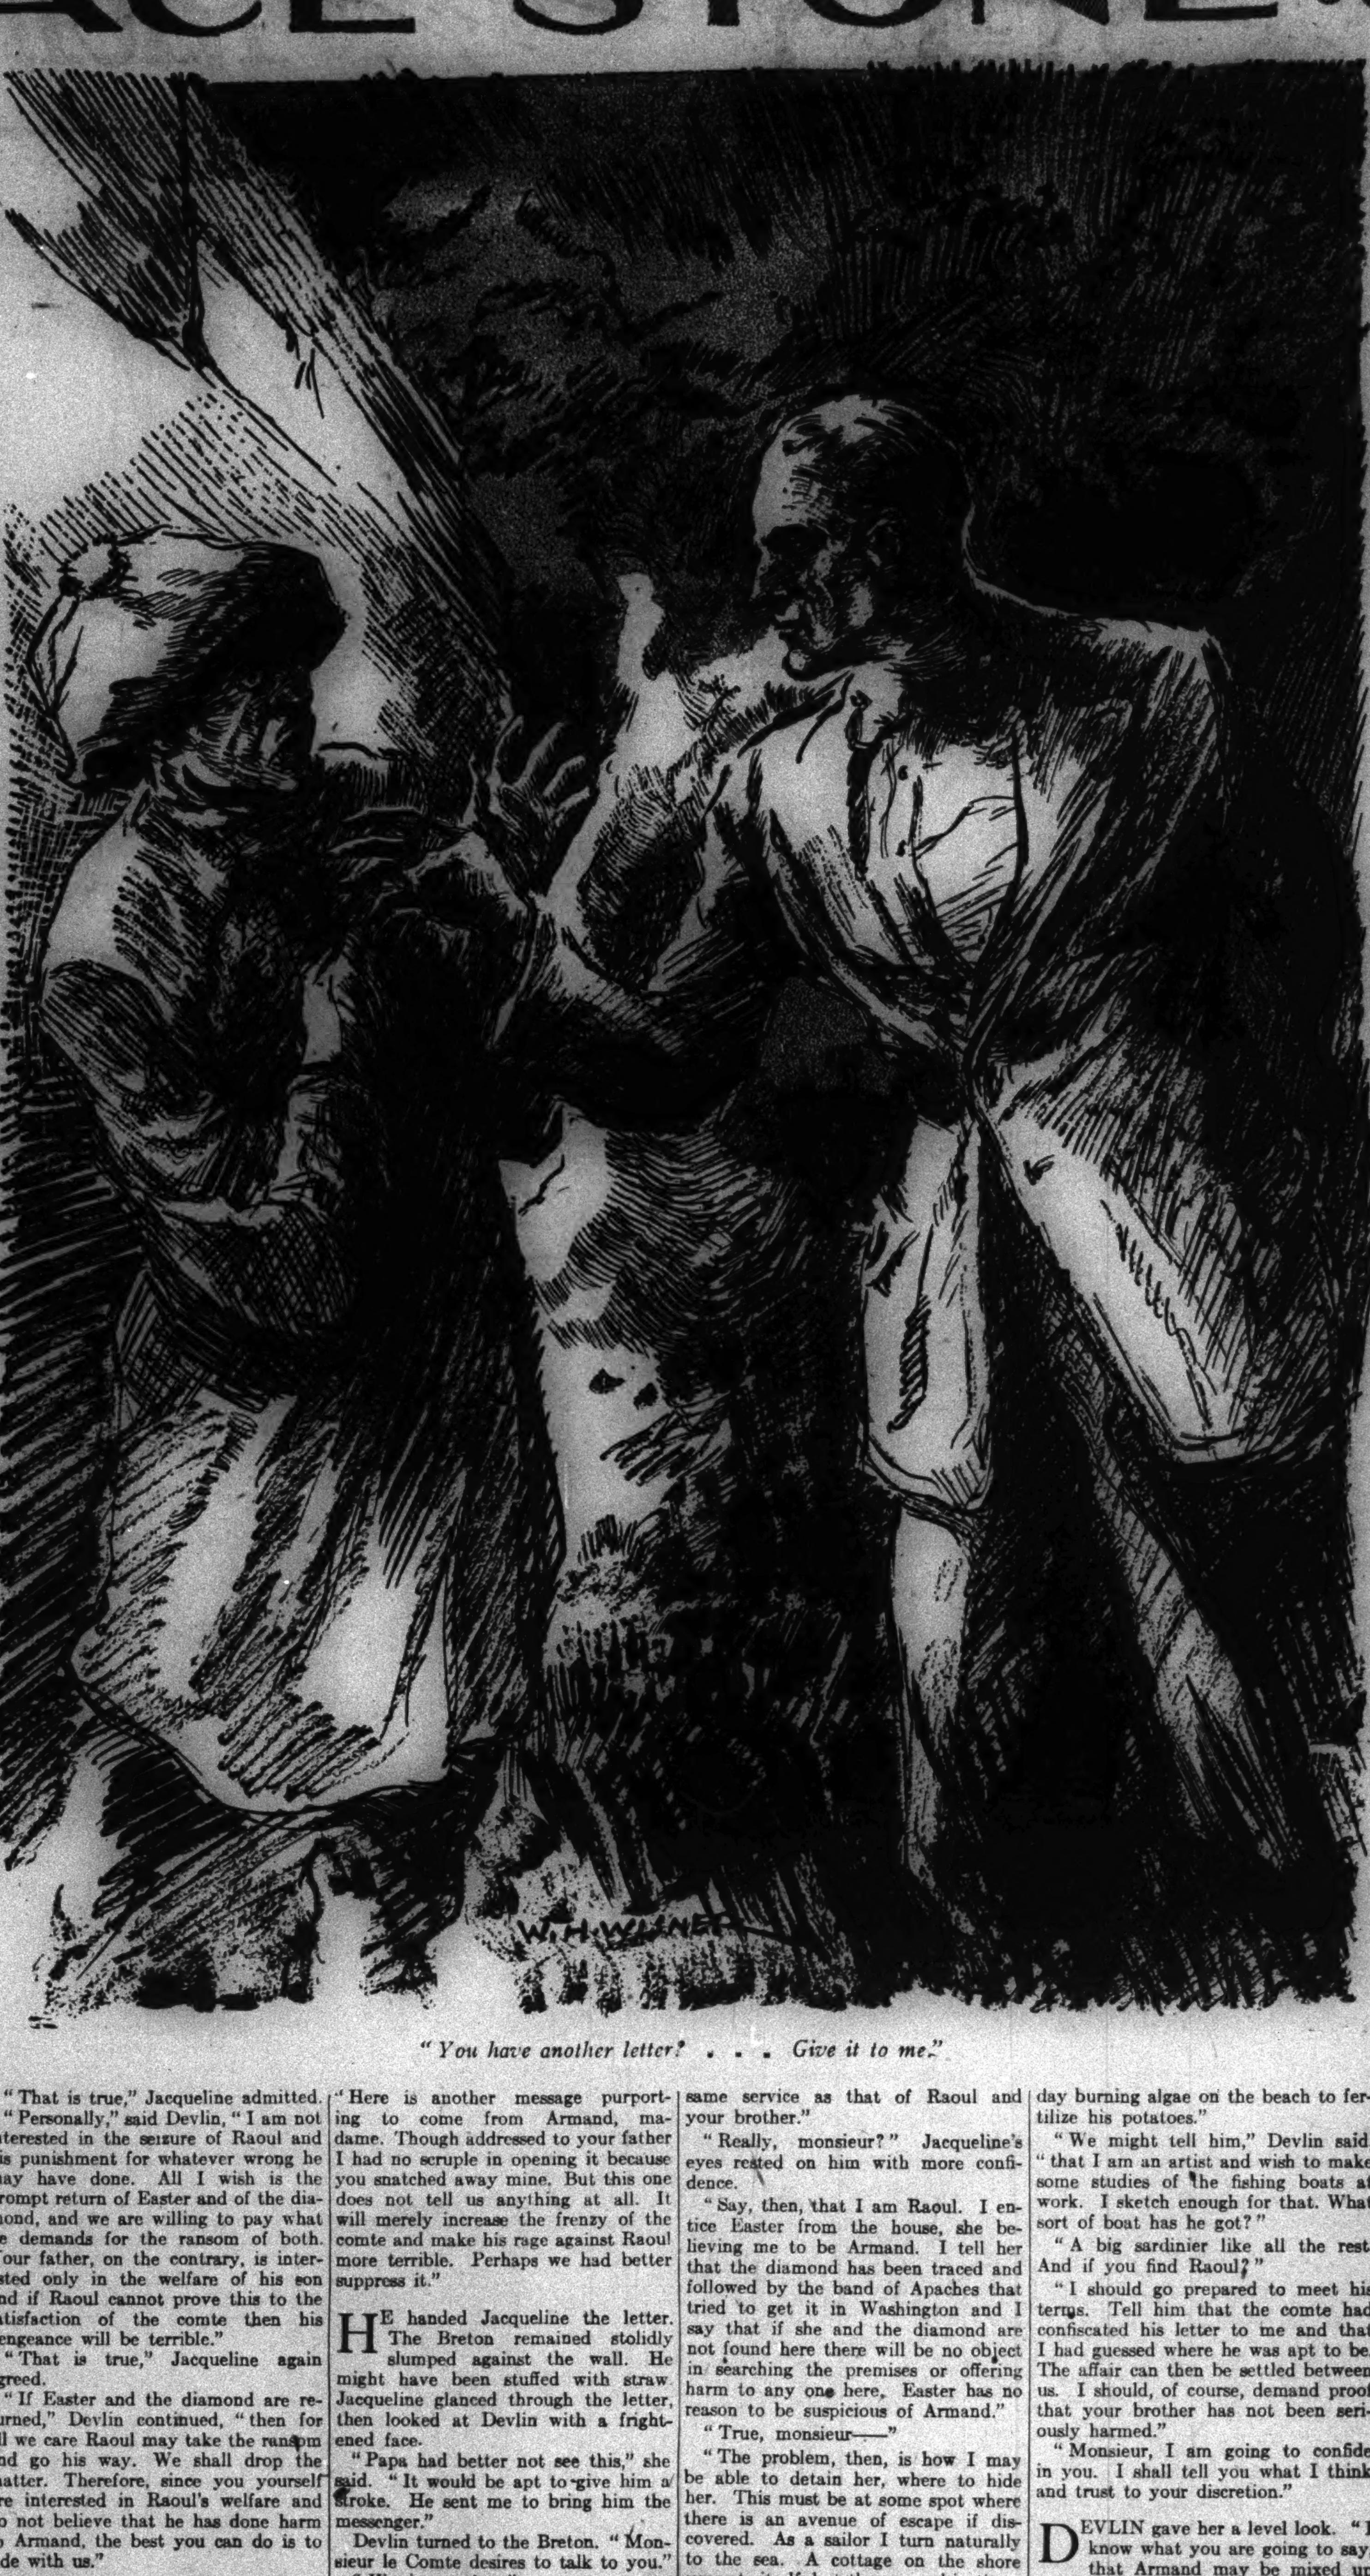
"They call me Per' Kerodec."

"Come with me," Devlin said. He stepped to the gate and rang the bell. There was a short delay. Then steps came on the gravel inside and the door was opened by Jacqueline herself. Her face was very flushed and her violet eyes met Devlin's defiantly. It was evident that she had rushed up to the house, given the letter to the comte and had run back immediately to detain the messenger and to keep Devlin from questioning him to any length or under any pressure.

"It seems to me, madame," said Devlin, "that you and I should be allies in this affair instead of adversaries."

Jacqueline looked surprised. "I must obey the instructions of my father, monsieur, and since you are his guest so should you. But why should I make cause with you?"

"Because you do not believe that your brother has suffered any harm from Raoul. Your father, on the contrary, is apt to believe the worst and act accordingly."



"You have another letter? . . . Give it to me."

"That is true," Jacqueline admitted.

"Personally," said Devlin, "I am not interested in the seizure of Raoul and his punishment for whatever wrong he may have done. All I wish is the prompt return of Easter and of the diamond, and we are willing to pay what he demands for the ransom of both. Your father, on the contrary, is interested only in the welfare of his son and if Raoul cannot prove this to the satisfaction of the comte then his vengeance will be terrible."

"That is true," Jacqueline again agreed.

"If Easter and the diamond are returned," Devlin continued, "then for all we care Raoul may take the ransom and go his way. We shall drop the matter. Therefore, since you yourself are interested in Raoul's welfare and do not believe that he has done harm to Armand, the best you can do is to side with us."

JACQUELINE was evidently impressed by this clear reasoning, but she looked at Devlin with despair.

"O, monsieur, if only I had thought of that sooner."

"You did not give yourself much time," Devlin said dryly.

"And now," Jacqueline wailed, "it is too late."

"Why?" Devlin asked.

"Because my father has the letter to Mr. Carter and we do not know the terms that it contains. Raoul is still trying to impersonate Armand. The address is in Armand's handwriting. But it is a forgery."

"How do you know?" Devlin asked.

"Because Armand never crosses a T."

"You are keen," Devlin said. "Then you believe that if the letter contains terms for the ransom of Easter and the Peace Stone, your father will not disclose its contents because he will reason that if he were to do so Raoul would take himself off and there would be no more chance of learning what has happened to Armand?"

"Precisely, monsieur. It seems outrageous, especially as Easter is our guest and came here at papa's own request. The protection of a guest is sacred. Even the Arabs observe it."

"Yes," Devlin agreed, "but in the scale against your father's love for his only son it would not weigh at all."

"Not one millegram, monsieur. Papa would see the whole world destroyed rather than that any harm came to Armand. During the war it was different, because there was no help for it."

Devlin reached in his pocket and took out the letter to the comte. "Here is another message purporting to come from Armand, madame. Though addressed to your father I had no scruple in opening it because you snatched away mine. But this one does not tell us anything at all. It will merely increase the frenzy of the comte and make his rage against Raoul more terrible. Perhaps we had better suppress it."

HE handed Jacqueline the letter. The Breton remained stolidly slumped against the wall. He might have been stuffed with straw. Jacqueline glanced through the letter, then looked at Devlin with a frightened face.

"Papa had better not see this," she said. "It would be apt to give him a stroke. He sent me to bring him the messenger."

Devlin turned to the Breton. "Monsieur le Comte desires to talk to you."

"H'oui, monsieur."

"You had better not tell him that you had another letter that was taken from you," Devlin said. "He would be apt to kill you."

"H'oui, monsieur."

It was impossible to tell what was passing, if anything, behind the pale, bloodshot eyes, but Devlin doubted that the man knew much that could be of any avail.

"Report yourself to Monsieur le Comte at the château," Devlin said. "Go——"

The man started off in the lurching gait of his class, this made more clumsy by the straw stuffed sabots.

"Wait a moment, madame," Devlin said to Jacqueline, and then as the peasant passed through the gate, "Do you consent to help me in this affair?"

"That depends, monsieur."

"It is your only chance to aid Raoul," Devlin said.

"Very well. I agree."

"I realize," said Devlin, "that it must be useless to try to force your father into telling us the contents of this message. Such an effort could lead only to anger on both sides and it would be a waste of valuable time. It is better that we try to locate Raoul, and accept his terms, whatever these may be."

"But how is that possible, monsieur?"

"I have been thinking it out. To do this, I put myself in Raoul's place, so that I may reason with his mind. This is the more possible because I am myself a sailor and familiar with this coast. During the war I was up and down it a number of times with convoys and sweeping for mines. The same service as that of Raoul and your brother."

"Really, monsieur?" Jacqueline's eyes rested on him with more confidence.

"Say, then, that I am Raoul. I entice Easter from the house, she believing me to be Armand. I tell her that the diamond has been traced and followed by the band of Apaches that tried to get it in Washington and I say that if she and the diamond are not found here there will be no object in searching the premises or offering harm to any one here. Easter has no reason to be suspicious of Armand."

"True, monsieur——"

"The problem, then, is how I may be able to detain her, where to hide her. This must be at some spot where there is an avenue of escape if discovered. As a sailor I turn naturally to the sea. A cottage on the shore suggests itself, but there are objections. The going and coming—the risk of attracting curiosity. What, then, occurs to the mind as better?"

"A boat," Jacqueline said promptly. "Myself, I thought of that because if one is a sailor one knows how to go where one likes."

"Precisely. Also there are not many isolated cottages, but there are plenty of boats in a place where the industry is fishing. Hundreds of boats."

"And all alike," Jacqueline said.

"Yes, to land folk. But not to other boatmen. These perceive the difference as a shepherd knows his sheep."

"Ma foi, I had not thought of that."

"Nevertheless," Devlin continued, no particular boat might be remarked unless one was looking for such and then the person would have to be a clever fellow, familiar with all the craft of the locality. That, madame, is the sort of man I want you to find for me. Not a loggerhead like this peasant, but a fisherman of the place who is shrewd and keen and——"

"Avaricious——" Jacqueline supplied.

"Precisely. You, who have lived here all your life may know of such a person."

"That I do," Jacqueline said promptly. "A man who has a big boat on the river down below here. Part of the year he fishes and carries cargoes. Then, about this season, he cleans and paints his boat, and dyes the sails, to take out parties of tourists for fishing or for promenades, to visit the lighthouse on the Grand Glennon. He is not stupid, this Yves Guillonec."

"Is he available?" Devlin asked.

"Probably. I saw him the other day burning algae on the beach to fertilize his potatoes."

"We might tell him," Devlin said, "that I am an artist and wish to make some studies of the fishing boats at work. I sketch enough for that. What sort of boat has he got?"

"A big sardinier like all the rest. And if you find Raoul?"

"I should go prepared to meet his terms. Tell him that the comte had confiscated his letter to me and that I had guessed where he was apt to be. The affair can then be settled between us. I should, of course, demand proof that your brother has not been seriously harmed."

"Monsieur, I am going to confide in you. I shall tell you what I think and trust to your discretion."

DEVLIN gave her a level look. "I know what you are going to say, that Armand may be mixed up in this, that he resented your father's giving the Peace Stone to a stranger. Am I not right?"

Jacqueline nodded. "Papa would be furious if one hinted at such a possibility. Some men, monsieur, may be very strong of character yet possess no imagination at all. Navy officers are apt to be like that. Their thoughts run in grooves of duty. Papa felt it his duty to give up this Peace Stone and now he feels his first duty to his only son."

"Perhaps," Devlin suggested, "he has a suspicion he will not admit that Armand may be in this plot, and that makes him even more entêté."

Jacqueline knit her pretty brows. "That, of course, is possible. In fact, I am not sure but that papa would prefer that Armand were dead rather than such a fripon. Either would be enough to kill papa, the one through his pride, the other through his heart."

"In any case Raoul would be blamed by your father as the instigator," Devlin said, "and the comte's vengeance would be terrible. The fury of these gentlemen is like a hurricane in the tropics."

Jacqueline nodded. "We must find Raoul."

"We, madame."

"Yes. I shall go with you. I can be of help in many ways. I think your reasoning is not only logical but exact. This note papa suppressed was probably to tell you where to leave the ransom money and return to find the jewel."

"That place," said Devlin, "is apt to be on the coast where the approach is visible from all about, so that he would not risk a guet-apens."

"Exactly," Jacqueline agreed. "Like the beach between the Beg-Meil semaphore and Mousterlin, with the lagoon flanking it and the inlet at the far end. Annik and I go there sometimes to catch équilles at low tide."

"I suppose," said Devlin, "any suggestion to your father that Armand was involved would make things worse."

"It would make them no better." Devlin smiled at this "replique en Normande." "In fact I begin to think that such an idea has occurred to papa to augment his distress."

It struck Devlin that if he were to seek out and find Raoul with no bargain made he would not be under compulsion to pay any ransom at all either for the Peace Stone or for Easter. He guessed also that Jacqueline had thought of this and so determined to be among those present, should Devlin's plan succeed. It looked as if Jacqueline believed Armand to be involved.

Jacqueline, Devlin reflected, could unquestionably be of great assistance; had been already in fact. But she might prove a decided nuisance at the show down. It irked Devlin first to have been fooled in the identity of Raoul, then to reward his criminal cleverness by a prize of a million francs. But it was true that after all Easter was getting the diamond for nothing and that sum must represent but a small fraction of its value.

Nevertheless he did not want to pay it to a rank outsider. If Armand, who possessed an actual inheritance claim to the diamond, had presented this without the knowledge of the comte, Devlin would have advised approving it. But Devlin failed to see where Raoul came into the business at all except perhaps as the agent for Armand, who could only have pushed his claim at the cost of a clash with his father.

AT best it was a business that Devlin much preferred to try to settle in his own way. So he said dubiously:

"I do not see how you could go with me on this quest for Raoul, madame. It might take several days of cruising here and there to locate him."

"Nevertheless, monsieur, I must go with you," Jacqueline said firmly.

"Would that be convenable, madame? You a young and charming widow of distinguished family to live aboard a boat with me?"

"No part of this is convenable," Jacqueline said tersely. "What about Easter?"

"She could not help herself."

"No more can I. Frankly, monsieur, I believe the affair will arrange itself better if I am on the spot."

"What will you tell your father? How explain your absence?"

"I shall say that the situation here is intolerable for me and that I have taken Annik with me to visit a friend at Pont-Aven."

"He would not permit that."

"He would not have a chance to prevent, and Annik will do as I say. I should simply go, and leave him a note. I shall tell him that I do not approve his withholding the letter to Mr. Carter and yourself."

Here, Devlin perceived, was an impasse, a cul-de-sac. He could manage quite well without Jacqueline, especially after the information she had volunteered about the boat and about its patron, Yves Guillonec. But something told him that if he refused to let Jacqueline accompany him she would suspect his motive and possibly find means to thwart his effort. In fact, he thought that she suspected him already. In this bizarre affair it appeared that each party concerned was ready to doublecross the others. Devlin was convinced that Raoul would manage to bilk Armand, if indeed Armand were of his own accord mixed up in it.

"It would be very sure to compromise you, madame," Devlin said, even while feeling this objection to be thin.

Jacqueline laughed lightly. "A bagatelle, compared to how I shall be compromised if we succeed."

"What do you mean?" Devlin asked.

"It is true that I am in love with Raoul. So also is Raoul in love with me. My marriage was one of convenience, arranged by both families. There was never more than friendship between my husband and myself. We two, the most concerned, had the least to say about it. After he was brought back from the front, a mutile, I was sorry for him, but"—her violet eyes looked sapphire as the pupils dilated—"I should have gone mad if it had not been for Raoul, who spent his permissions here. Then papa saw fit to forbid him the house."

"I understand," Devlin said, gently. "Then if we find Raoul and pay him this ransom your plan is to remain with him?"

"That is true, monsieur," Jacqueline said calmly. "My life at home has become detestable."

THIS, Devlin perceived, altered again the situation. Jacqueline herself had as much right to a share in the diamond as had Armand, and her plan now was to collect that share and to run off with her lover. Raoul ought not to object to this arrangement, Devlin thought. Jacqueline was lovely enough to satisfy any man. Also she had intelligence and spirit and was desperately in love.

He hesitated no longer. "Very well, then. But there is another point. I do not know how much money Raoul is demanding."

"I think that I can guess pretty nearly," Jacqueline said. "Raoul wrote me from Bordeaux where he had gone with Armand to see him off for America. He said that he had been given a month's leave that was granted partly on Armand's application that Raoul be permitted to go with him to America to assist in regulating a family business affair of great importance. Raoul told me also that he was in a very serious position financially, and that unless he could raise nearly a million francs before the expiration of his leave he must face disaster."

Devlin turned this statement in his mind. It told him two things; that Armand might possibly under these circumstances have connived at the deception to save his relative and best friend disgrace and punishment, and that Jacqueline's resentment of her father's course had not mere avarice as a motive.

"Then," said he, "you think that the sum of a million francs ought to be enough?"

Jacqueline drew a deep breath. Evidently she had expected Devlin to protest with horror and dismay the demand for what was to a French woman an enormous sum of money. But she managed to answer steadily enough: "I think so, monsieur. In fact, I am sure of it."

Devlin nodded. "Can do," he answered briefly.

SHORTLY after dark the big fishing party boat—Grace-à-Dieu—stood in toward a long stretch of lonely beach, as Easter was able to discover by the white zone of surf and sand and the absence of any lights on the shore.

She did not anchor, but lay hove to at a safe distance while two men got into the skiff they were towing and rowed away for what appeared to be a dark, narrow break in the band of pallid white, a little inlet, Easter thought. As the sailor shoved off Easter overheard Armand mutter sotto voce: "Two flashes of your torch if anything goes wrong patron."

The boat dissolved in the soft murk. Armand began to pace nervously up and down the deck, for this larger type of fishing boat was not open like most sardiniers but decked its length with a large square hatch cut amidships and a small cabin rather than cuddy, aft. Like most in those waters, it steered by a long tiller instead of a wheel, its two big sails, the clumsy old fashioned "clipping lug."

"There's scarcely been time for them to find your ransom, has there?" Easter asked.

"Plenty," Armand answered. "The Credit Lyonnais at Quimper would honor the draft of Mr. Carter, an American milliardaire and vouched for by the Comte de Marsac. Or they could telegraph to Mr. Carter's Paris banker. My note should have been delivered by noon."

"Has the bank that much money?" Easter asked.

"Of course," Armand answered in surprise. "French banks transact their business in specie. We have not the perfected check system like yours in America, or even the crossed check one of England. French people never have liked paper. They want, as you say in America, the dough."

Easter returned to her early inquiries. "And what if they should not pay?"

Armand said in his cold voice: "I shall give them three days. If then they ignore my demands we are apt to have a long voyage."

Easter felt her heart skip a beat. "We?"

"What else? I can't hang around here until some of these fishermen begin to notice me and gossip. I shall have to make for a foreign shore, Spain, or perhaps England, depending on the weather."

"But why keep me?" Easter asked.

"Because my safety demands it."

"If I promised not to tell——"

He gave a short laugh. "What price a promise under compulsion? I should not blame you for breaking it. And the pressure on you would be very great."

"But it wouldn't," Easter declared. "We all feel that you have a perfect right to some compensation for this jewel."

HE looked at her gloomily. "There are risks of which you are ignorant. It would be an affair not only of the police but of the naval authorities, possibly international. You could not resist for all your good faith, of which I have no doubt. They have methods forbidden in America."

"If you mean a third degree," Easter said hotly, "then you needn't worry. They'd never dare. There would be an international complication then. Mr. Carter stands high in Washington. There'd be an American warship at Brest all cleared for action before they could put me through or give me a truth telling injection, if that's what you mean."

Armand laughed as if amused. "Not quite so bad as that. They would make you see me in a pretty bad light."

"Then you mean to hold me indefinitely?"

"O, no. Just long enough to get safely away."

"With the Peace Stone, I suppose. A nice name for it, I'll say. Nothing but trouble since first you told us about it. Even before."

"Those attacks were all a part."

"This is going to break your father's heart," Easter said. "Do you think it's worth it?"

"No. It's not avarice that's driving me. Some day you'll understand. Meanwhile you'll have to make the best of it."

"Listen, Armand," Easter said. "You had better trust me to pay this ransom myself. I can get the money and I don't begrudge it. Or, if you like better, just keep the precious Peace Stone and set me ashore and go. I'll say you went in a car."

"Well, it may come to that in the end, though I don't think so. I don't want to be bothered with the diamond. All I want is ready money."

The small boat returned with a single man in it. "Personne, monsieur," he reported.

With no comment, Armand got into the boat, which pulled straight in for the shore. The single hand remaining aboard kept the big boat hove to, drifting back and forth in the faint land breeze, keeping her approximate position, Easter thought. She was too nervous to sleep, too anxious to learn the result of Armand's quest. Then at last he returned, and with him the man who had first been taken ashore whose name was Yves, Easter thought.

"What luck?" she asked.

"Drew blank," Armand answered briefly.

He gave an order and they headed out to open sea.

LOVE-SHY - By Richard Connell

"Success!" he announced. "Matches. Six of them; also a candle end."

He lit the candle.

"Now we'll be able to make a signal fire after all," he said.

"What with?"

"Wood, of course."

"It's green," said Bella.

"Yes. I'm afraid so. But we can try. You sit down, Bella, and rest. I'll get some water and we'll make tea and I'll build a big fire and maybe somebody will see it——"

"Maybe they won't," said Bella.

HE caught up a pail and vanished into the darkness. He returned after a time, shaking his head dejectedly, and holding a small armful of twigs and bark.

"Sorry," he said. "Not much firewood on this island. Enough to warm up some tea, that's all."

"I don't care," said Bella. "I think it's rather cozy here."

He set about building a small fire on the hearth and brewing tea.

"It isn't very strong," he said, handing Bella the pail, "but, you know, we agreed to make the best of things."

"Yes, Sherman."

She drank some tea.

"You know," she said, "I'm rather enjoying being shipwrecked like this."

"It reminds me of Robinson Crusoe," said Mr. Boyden. "Ever read it?"

"Yes."

"I used to play I was Robinson Crusoe when I was a boy," he said.

"O, did you?" said Bella, absently.

"Yes. I enjoyed 'Swiss Family Robinson,' too. Ever read it?"

"O, yes."

"Bella, you sound a little tired."

"I'm not."

"You must be. With all the excitement and everything——"

"What excitement?"

"I mean the long trip and being shipwrecked and all that. Have some more tea?"

"No, thanks."

He put fresh twigs on the fire.

"Sherman, what are you thinking about?"

"Do I look as if I was thinking about something?"

"Yes, you do."

"Well, as a matter of fact, I was thinking about Defoe—the man who wrote Robinson Crusoe, you know. A remarkable man. Have you read that new life of him?"

"No," said Bella. "I think I'll go to sleep."

"I'm a bit tired myself," confessed Mr. Boyden.

"The candle's almost finished."

"Then you'd better get to bed while there's light."

"Sherman, where are you going?"

"O, don't worry about me," he said. "There's a comfortable looking hammock on the porch and I've two blankets——"

"I hope you won't catch cold."

"I practically never do," he said. "Well, good-night, Bella."

"Well—good-night, Sherman."

BELLA! Bella!"

Her eyes flew open. Sherman Boyden was rapping sharply on the cabin door.

"Wake up, Bella," he called.

"Come in," she said.

"Get up right away," he said. "A boat is coming."

"All right."

She went to the door and stood in the morning sun, blinking.

"Good morning, Bella." Mr. Boyden looked disheveled. "Get any rest?"

"Lots," said Bella.

"I didn't," said Mr. Boyden.

"That's too bad."

"I stayed awake," he said. "I guess it was lucky I did. Otherwise I wouldn't have seen the boat."

They went together to the shore. A rowboat in which sat an ancient man, mostly whiskers, grated to a stop on the beach.

"That's Old Matt," said Bella. "Lives down on the lower lake and comes up here to fish. He's a hermit, they say."

"Canoe busted, eh?" cackled the old man. "Well, jump in."

The rowboat moved away from the island.

Mr. Boyden made a remark about the beauty of the morning. Old Matt said nothing. Bella said nothing.

"I think," said Mr. Boyden presently, "you'd better put me ashore at Porcupine point. I can walk to my hotel from there."

Bella, her eyes on the mainland, remained silent.

> "Why did you pawn the shoes?" the boy demanded.
> "Loaned the money to Rockefeller," explained the girl. "Always wanted to help him . . ."

When the boat touched at Porcupine point Mr. Boyden leaped to the shore. He handed Old Matt a bill. He stood for a second, seeking fitting words. Then he said:

"Well, good-by, Bella."

"Good-by."

IN the dining room of the lodge there was a heartening aroma—the blended perfumes of coffee, toast and sizzling bacon.

"My dear child," said Julie Wood, "I was so worried. No, I wasn't really worried. I was glad."

"What about?" asked Bella.

"My dear, you must eat your breakfast. A lot of breakfast. You look pale."

"I don't feel like eating."

Julie Wood laughed.

"I know how it is," she said.

"How what is?"

"Being engaged."

"Who's engaged?"

"Why, Bella! Snap at your toast, not at me. You should be in the clouds, on the crest of the wave and all that. Sherman is an extremely nice young man."

Bella set down her coffee cup with a bang.

"O, yes! Very!"

Julie Wood regarded her curiously.

"Why, Bella dear, whatever is the matter?" she asked.

"Everything!" said Bella, and burst into tears.

"O, my dear! What happened?"

But Bella, sobbing, had gone upstairs.

IN tan tweeds which he wore with a jaunty air Sherman Boyden smilingly presented himself at the lodge that afternoon. It was Julie Wood who came into the living room to greet him. She did so coolly.

"Where's Bella?" he asked.

"Upstairs."

"Will you tell her I'm here, please?"

"What for?"

"Why, she's going over to Greenacre to see the tennis matches with me."

"O, is she?"

"Didn't she tell you?"

"Last time I saw her she was in bed and she said, 'If anybody calls, tell them to go climb a tree'," said Miss Wood.

Mr. Boyden looked inexpressibly shocked.

"But she couldn't have meant me, could she?" he faltered.

"Why not?"

"Isn't she feeling well?" he asked.

"Terrible."

"What? What's the matter?" he asked quickly.

Miss Wood eyed him with severity.

"You should ask that!" she said.

He grew confused.

"I—I don't understand," he said.

"After what you've done!"

"But—but——" he got out, sadly flustered.

"And you a Princeton man!" said Miss Wood "And an investment banker!"

"But what have I done?" he stammered.

"Surely, Mr. Boyden, you have a memory, even if you may have no conscience."

HE looked about wildly, as if contemplating flight through one of the windows.

"But, there's some mistake," he said. "Did Bella——"

"Bella," said Miss Wood solemnly, "has told me—everything."

"Everything? But, I assure you, Miss Wood, there wasn't anything to tell——"

"Come, come, Mr. Boyden. Am I a child?"

"I tell you, Miss Wood," he said with miserable earnestness, "you are doing me a great injustice——"

"Mr. Boyden, do you mean to sit there and tell me that you made love to Bella and proposed to her?"

"No. I didn't. I didn't, really."

"You confess then?"

"Confess?" He stared at her.

"Yes, confess. Aren't you ashamed of yourself?"

"Ashamed? What of?"

"Mr. Boyden, you're a sap!"

"I beg your pardon," he said, stiffly.

"'Sap' was the word. Capital S A P—sap," said Julie Wood calmly. "I stick to 'sap'—unless, of course, you didn't want to make love to Bella——"

"Didn't want to?" cried Sherman Boyden. "O, my God!"

"Then why didn't you?"

"But what would she have thought of me—in the circumstances?"

"Well, she might have rebuffed you," said Julie, "at first."

"But she always said——"

"Even a college girl can't use her vocabulary when she's being kissed."

He played with his cap.

"I suppose," he said, "my chance is gone."

"I'm afraid so," said Julie, gravely. "She is convinced you don't care for her——"

"But," broke out Mr. Boyden——

"Yes, she knows that, now," said Julie. "Still, I think, just as a friendly gesture, and because Bella doesn't break appointments, she might be willing to drive over and see the tennis with you——"

"Do you really think so?"

"She might. I'll see. Bella is very good-natured. Of course, it's a long drive over that wooded road and you won't be getting back much before dusk, but you've got a good, dependable car and you're a nice young man and I'm sure that the idea of stopping on Moonrise hill will never enter your head——"

Mr. Boyden looked hastily at his wrist watch.

"We really should be starting soon," he said.

They were driving over the wooded road which ran between the pine trees. Just as they reached the summit of Moonrise hill Mr. Boyden very deliberately stopped the car.

"Anything wrong?" asked Bella.

"Not a thing."

"Then why are we stopping? We'll be late for the tennis."

"Yes," said Mr. Boyden, "very late."

Then he kissed her.

She tried to push him away, crying.

"Stop, Sherman. You mustn't."

But he said, "I must," and did not stop. They never got to the tennis at all.

Today's Group Faces Happy Year

Marion Meyer Drew's weekly articles are presented solely for the entertainment of readers. Separate answers to individual questions cannot be given.

By Marion Meyer Drew.

TODAY'S group of energetic sons and daughters have a rather happy year ahead of them, particularly if they chance to be numbered in an artistic or domestic occupation, and can count upon pleasant and profitable days during at least the months of September, January of 1929 and also the early spring of that year.

That planet Uranus will be a vital factor in the affairs of these people, for Uranus occupies what astrologers call a "stationary" position during the summer—meaning that as we view the planet from the earth its angle is such that it assumes a motionless position in the heavens, and this is indicative of unusual power in the interests of mankind at the time, hence most of the July 8 people will be strangely subject to sudden changes of fancy and impulsive whims which will be very different from their usual moods. The second weeks of October and January and April of 1929 will be very sensitive to the Uranian wavelengths.

Those who celebrate their birth dates on the 9th of July will meet a year of minor travels, quick moves or changes of position, as well as some unexpected trip during vacation, while the feminine celebrant of this date may suffer slightly in health and spirits, notably during the summer and early fall. She will come into touch with some old condition of her former life, too, and this should be quite beneficial. It is impossible to state whether this is an old friend, an old scene, an old study, or what. In the horoscope we simply see the circumstances which repeat the previous events.

The 10th and 11th seem rather fortunate anniversaries, and even the possibility of slight operation or perhaps accident for the latter date around the last of this year should not be enough to becloud the sky. The position of the benefic planet Jupiter, donor of wealth and satisfaction, is remarkably lucky in these horoscopes of 1928-'29, and its influence over health conditions will be such as to increase the benefits from strenuous measures without a fraction of the trouble and difficulty which is ordinarily experienced.

Women will be the source of great aid and pleasure in the course of the next twelve months for these people of the 10th and 11th, and marriage for either sex will prove thrilling and worthwhile. The months of March and May, 1929, will bring unusual and striking events.

As for the July 12th men and women, I am afraid they have not such a sweetly happy time ahead, although they may also pass through a deeply interesting period when the mental and spiritual development to be gained would outweigh fifty of the more harmonious social and carefree eras. We will be apt to notice an increase of nervous and psychic disorders next fall and winter, and these July 12th people will be likely to form a large proportion of one of the groups emotionally disturbed. They must determine not to be upset by abnormal or depressing experiences, must keep in good physical condition and exercise in the open air regularly, for nothing else will so sustain their optimism and persistence.

Friday of this week is placid, fairly calm, prone to feel opposition or delays from women; while older people, too, may cause some miscarrying of plans. The men who celebrate on this date may meet with some noticeable denial from a woman, due in the winter months, but aside from that the year should be happy. The influence of Venus here may hide the deeper and more saturnine tendency for a time, but do not trust too fully to the sparkling surface of affairs.

Saturday is a radically impulsive date upon which to begin a new year, for the horoscope for the twelve-month for you then is started with several strong aspects pointing toward sudden breaks with relatives and friends, and with unforeseen expenses arising from intimate concerns. Women will be greatly upset by these vibrations and will try to do all sorts of odd things, even in the most conservative and quiet surroundings.

For the rest of us this week is one of social or family activities, and would make a good time in which to hold family reunions or country outings. The group born the last week in June will find this an unusually lively time, as will those born around the 27th of March, while Jupiterian expansions will be visited upon those born near the last three days of April and the first of May.

Saturn is almost stationary just now, and will cast an evil eye upon the people of the first week of December—these are rather nervous folk, and should make it a point to avoid giving way to conditions apt to lead up to conflicts or strains.

The fast moving Mercury is another nearly stationary planet at this particular time, and its position is most apt to stimulate last of June people. Mercury also is supposed to affect the stock markets of various cities and countries, so we may see unusual activity around the 10th of this month.

Neptune, slowest of all the great forces of our solar system, will probably affect most strongly at this time the men and women born near the 20th of August; but even at that, its influence will not be strong until it enters the sign Virgo near the 21st of September. Then we may expect some unusual experiences, for Neptune governs all aeronautics, spiritualism, submarines, gas engines, music, drama and motion pictures in their latest developments, and modern imitations of material standbys in commerce. All of these things will figure in our daily news.

The TRIBUNE COOK BOOK

Out of Door Cooking and Eating Is as Old as Homer and as New as Today

All recipes have been scientifically tested by Miss Eddington with current market materials and are indorsed by her.

By Jane Eddington.

IN OLDER times than today whole towns were emptied into summer groves; whole multitudes were fed in the open—sometimes miraculously with loaves and fishes, but modernly by some concessionist of the grove. When forms of entertainment were fewer than they are today the pastime of picnics, under various names, had a great development and through whole centuries, as some immortal records show.

For some of these picnic affairs there were great cooking operations. A whole ox or several of them were roasted, or it might be sheep or pigs that were cooked on spits improvised from young trees and over rock pit fires.

In New England, of years back, the grove chosen for such town picnics was usually by a lake, from which fish were caught to make great boilers of chowder, and off to one side there was usually a bean hole well filled with pot of beans to bake the night before, while Boston brown bread was brought from home to accompany them. Boilers of green corn were cooked on rock stoves, while bread and pies and doughnuts and cookies were brought from home kitchens.

Men as well as women busied themselves on this holiday, often from early morn until it was all over. They caught fish, built fires, fixed up tables, perhaps with living and standing trees for the supports, although sometimes the groves, as usually now, had permanent tables ready for any comer to spread the contents of his picnic basket on.

No Mere Handout.

Besides the items mentioned, watermelon, bags of roasted peanuts and tubs of lemonade were a part of this picnic dinner—a real dinner and not a luncheon, or handout, or snack. Some experts in feeding people claim that men dislike a handout, even on a picnic, or that they like a real dinner. If you watch them on their outings perhaps you will decide that this is true, and that they will work for it.

Making a real dinner rite of the picnic meal, perhaps the main meal of the day, is something else from packing a box of sandwiches and providing vacuum bottles of hot or cold beverages and some fruit. Those who go to the parks even carry bridge tables with folding chairs and often sit for hours watching the crowds which, like themselves, are taking their dinners "al fresco."

There are many reasons today why the multitudes should do their cooking at home rather than out of doors, although they propose to eat in the open. There are the fire laws on the one hand, and on the other the fact that one may cook the meal at home with every modern convenience while they have highly modern conveniences for transporting it in an hour or two to wilderness surroundings.

But building fires and cooking in the open has its fascinations, and at the camp sites at the edge of our greatest cities, and in our forest preserves, there are places for building fires and cooking over them. One may often see dozens of spots in such places marked by bits of charred wood and ashes where the hiker has made some tea or the elaborately equipped motorist has driven in an iron spike with rings for utensils whereon to set frying pans in which bacon or a beefsteak has been cooked and very likely a dish of vegetables, besides.

A Chance to Invent.

The making of coffee and the cooking of meat in the open is always an entertainment because of the gratifying odors—often too much is given to the air—and since man loves to invent, the opportunity this work gives amounts to fun.

Some brilliant writers on cookery who believe that the picnic, as surely the eating out of doors, dated back to Homer and before, once printed the following recipe for "Homeric Kabab": "Over the camp fire all things are possible, but the kabab—a dish as old as Homeric days—is one to conjure with. Having ready a glowing bed of coals, set up two notched sticks at either end and across this hang a withe of willows or other wood, strung with inch pieces of lamb or beef, alternating with slices of onion or egg plant. Keep this withe turning, spit fashion, until the meat is deliciously browned, and sending forth an aroma that would make the mouth of a wood nymph water. Season with salt and pepper and give thanks."

Plenty of recipes are to be found in oriental cook books for this way of broiling bits of meat, the name of which is usually spelled "kebab." In the orient, where so much of the cooking is necessarily done in the open and in primitive fashion, most meats if large are cooked on wooden spits and if cut up small like this on something equal to a skewer, which that willow withe is. One oriental recipe directs that the pieces be cut bird's head size and broiled or grilled on skewers.

In most cases the meat is dipped in oil and seasoned well before it is cooked. Perhaps this is why so many of these grills are called "shish-kebab." Long irons are often strung with pieces of several kinds of meat first dipped in oil or butter and then turned and turned over the fire. But they should be well drained from the fat or there will be trouble with scorching flames.

Picnic Beefsteak.

Hot beefsteak between two slices of buttered bread is an animated sort of food for a picnic. Round steak cut only one-half inch thick which may be cut into pieces and cooked like kebabs is good, or the whole can be broiled over a bed of coals in the old fashioned toaster, for which some people substitute a corn popper in which they can make toast, roast corn—if it is large enough—and do much other cooking.

There are many devices manufactured for just such purposes as the cooking of a beefsteak, or the frying or boiling of a chicken, which latter can be cleaned, disjointed and all before leaving home.

Camp Fried Potatoes.

Hot potatoes for an out of door meal with cold meat can give the feeling of dinner. Have the potatoes washed well before leaving home, and also have some fat ready. Nothing is better than tried out salt pork fat for this work, and clear white bacon fat is also good, but not so commonly seen because not everybody cooks bacon carefully. For one pint of peeled and evenly sliced raw potatoes, two tablespoons of fat in a rather large frying pan are sufficient.

Have the fat all but smoking hot when the potatoes are put into the pan. They will cool the fat somewhat, but after it is hot, and they as well, do not have any more fire under them than what will brown them on one side in fifteen minutes or a little less.

Cover closely and when they are a nice light brown next the pan turn them and cook them on the other side. Cover closely again or they will become too dry before they are entirely cooked. The hot fat at the start seals the pores and keeps them from being greasy.

Potato Chowder.

One may take along a kettle full of the ingredients for a potato chowder and cook it easily out of doors for something which, with good bread and butter, will make a good meal without much addition. Salt pork fat in the bottom, layers of sliced potatoes next, then sliced onions, then potatoes, etc., with water to cover. Fish may constitute a layer and soaked out codfish is not bad. A little milk or cream is needed finally.

Bread and Butter.

Plain bread and butter outranks in final desirability almost any sandwich that can be made, and there are ways of varying it no end. Two slices of it are ready for the broiled steaks or hot bacon cooked on a stick, and large frankfurters sliced and cooked in some fat in the frying pan make no mean out-of-door sandwich.

Pots of this and that sort of filling, with a variety of jam for the eater to put into his plain bread and butter sandwich, make for great pleasantness and the work of preparation is easier. A pot of butter, too, enables the eater to butter his jam after it is added—superior!

Butter Sauce.

When boiled fish are to be had, or nothing but boiled eggs, or even boiled potatoes, or plain crackers, a hot butter sauce will help out an out-of-door meal. [It is always a good plan to take along a box of crackers anyway and some plain cheese.] This sauce can be started at home by blending two tablespoons of flour with one tablespoon of butter.

When ready, add to this a cup of water and stir till thick, and cook. Put some crackers into this and use when the bread runs short. With some jam it may make a dessert or it may be sweetened with the crackers. It is a resource.

Chopped Fruit and Nut Loaf.

This is one of the standby things for picnics, although nothing can take the place of a variety of fresh fruits, which satisfy the thirst so greatly. Prepare carefully one-fourth pound dates, one-fourth pound figs, one-fourth pound seedless raisins, sprinkle over them a tablespoon of granulated sugar and chop.

When chopped add a small quantity of any preferred nuts cut up in slices. Knead the whole, using sugar to bind. Press into a small mold, let stand several hours, then cut in caramel-sized squares.

The Home Harmonious

By WillElla de Campi.

Two Ingenious People Take an Ugly House and Transform It Into a Thing of Beauty

IN ONE of the loveliest suburbs, famous for its beautiful homes is an unpretentious little house which is rated among the most attractive. It has attained this distinction solely through the efforts of its ingenious and enterprising owners. To begin with, it was just one of those ugly, boxlike rectangles, with a combination living-dining room and a kitchen on the first floor and two bedrooms on the second floor. It was painted, outside, a dreary slate gray with trims of dark green.

Then Mr. and Mrs. Jones saw it, realized its possibilities, bought it and transformed it into its present glorified state. They added a substantial wing at each side: one of them to house a guest room and bath, the other a dining room and a sunroom, which is really just a comfortable extension of the living room. When these symmetrical additions were completed the house was painted a mellow ivory with deep turquoise blue trims. With the many mauve, yellow and pink garden blossoms it makes a delightful picture.

Inside, the house is an unparalleled embodiment of comfort combined with good taste. The living room has its walls done in a small figured paper in two tones of ecru. All of the woodwork, including the stairway, which rises up from the back of the room, is stained walnut. At the windows are glass curtains of ecru gauze. Overdraperies, hanging straight to the floor, are of coral colored glazed chintz, finished with a narrow accordion plaited edging of turquoise blue.

Against the longest wall space is a Chesterfield with downfilled seat cushions. It is upholstered in semiglazed chintz with a design of large clustered flowers on an ecru ground. Extra cushions are in deep turquoise, piped with coral. At each end of the Chesterfield is a convenient table holding a lamp and those various small accessories which always contribute to the comfortable as well as the decorative quality of a room. Companionably near the Chesterfield is a large arm chair upholstered in coffee colored wool damask.

At the opposite side of the room a secretary desk is placed. It is accompanied by a rush-seated Windsor chair and by a polished steel reading lamp with a square parchment shade. In a corner near one of the windows is a wing chair done in chintz to match the Chesterfield. Beside it stands an oval table holding a pale mauve pottery lamp with a shade to match and a set of gayly decorated smoking accessories. An additional arm chair, drawn up to the other side of this table, is done in a subtle olive green velour. A deep coffee colored rug covers the floor.

The adjoining sunroom carries on the same color scheme. Walls are finished in rough plaster, stained ecru, and the woodwork is painted coffee color. Ecru gauze glass curtains are supplemented by draperies of the same flowered chintz which covers the living room sofa and wing chair. Bent reed furniture, painted olive green, is fitted with cushions of coral glazed chintz, piped with turquoise. There are wrought iron lamps with parchment shades and an ecru and coffee brown fiber rug on the floor.

Green and yellow make the dining room a cheerful place. Plaster walls and woodwork are painted light blue-green and moldings, which are applied to simulate paneling, are faintly picked out in gold. At the windows are pale yellow gauze glass curtains. Draperies of a deeper yellow sateen are finished with a three inch band of blue-green. The furniture is maple. Bowls of yellow flowers are placed on the buffet and dining table.

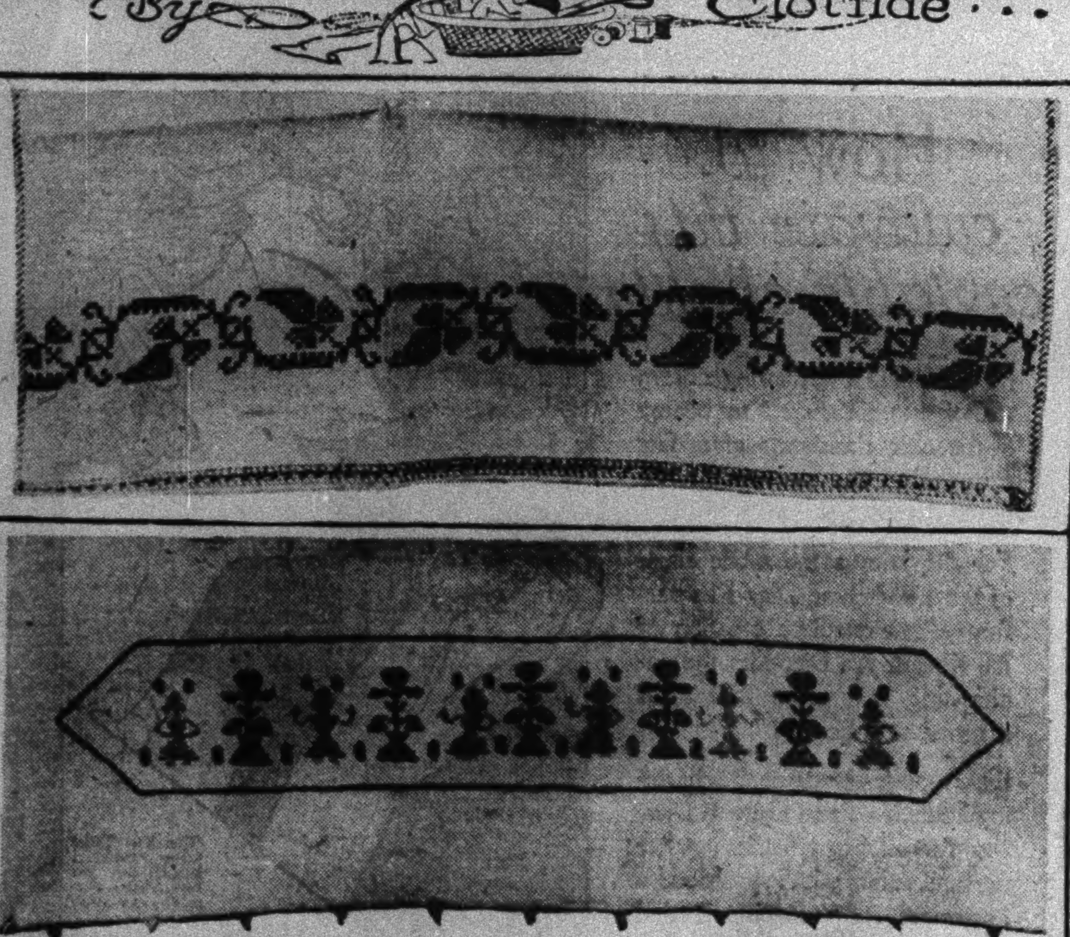
A corner of the guest room is shown in the accompanying illustration. It is a room which always brings joy to the hearts of the happy guests who use it. The walls are painted a light apple blossom pink, like the faint remembrance of a peacefully beautiful sunset. Woodwork and doors are ivory. At the windows are sheer ivory voile glass curtains. The draperies of chintz show old-fashioned garlands of flowers, repeating the pink of the walls in a deeper tone on a light mauve ground. The same chintz is used to cover a large wing chair.

Furniture is made of maple. Twin beds have covers of mauve rep, piped and bound with pink. A small stand between the beds holds a mauve thermos and an amethyst glass tumbler, and a lamp with a shade made of the drapery chintz, plaited. A similar lamp lights the fully equipped desk, without which no guest room should be considered complete. Flowered hooked rugs are used on the floor.

Upstairs there are two more bedrooms. Space will not permit their being described here today, but it is certain that they are equally attractive in every detail, as is this charming guest room.

Practical and Fancy Needle Work

By Clotilde



These Guest Towels Are Fun to Make and Are Practical to Give as Presents or Prizes

GUEST towels make charming gifts for card parties, or for any other occasion that calls for a gift, and doubtless every housekeeper adds from time to time to her own supply. The towels shown here are really lovely, and shouldn't be at all difficult to make. Italian linen in the natural color is used, and they measure 16x23 inches. That is the cutting measure — the narrow rolled hems on the four edges of one of them reducing the size a trifle.

The two long sides and one end have these rolled hems with the Italian hemstitching above. Across the bottom more threads are drawn, and the hemstitching is used. One and three-quarters inches up from the bottom is a cross stitch design, measuring about two inches, and the beauty of this work lies largely in the fact that the finest possible canvas was used, making the stitches very much smaller than those seen usually. Yellow and brown are the colors used, the yellow being used for all the hemstitching. The design is a conventional one, and there are many books showing all sorts of designs in cross stitch, so there shouldn't be any difficulty in finding many attractive ones.

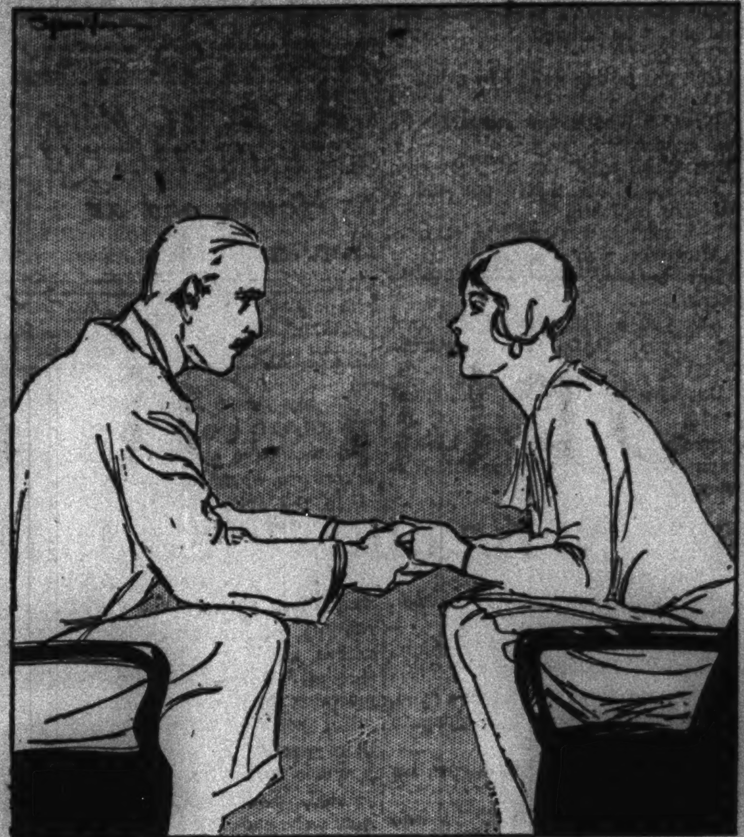
The second towel is also in the natural colored linen, and the colors used to work with are blue and green. All four edges of the towel are finished with the single crochet stitch, taken close together and across the bottom of one end picot points are introduced, using first one color, then the other. The blue floss is used for the crocheted edge, and the green for the outline around the embroidery across the bottom. The little trees are done in green and the alternate figures in blue, and the same fine canvas is used for the work.

There is an infinite variety of designs and color schemes shown in these towels, and some are made of pure white linen, others of colored, in the delicate shades, of course. But there is nothing much more effective, prettier or easier to do than cross stitch. It is possible to buy transfer patterns in cross stitch designs, and if you do the transferring from the paper to the material clearly, you will have no trouble in using them. But the canvas is a very sure way. It is important in using canvas to see that it is basted on absolutely straight. Any deviation from this will spoil the work.

Six Tests for a Life Partnership

By Doris Blake

If "the Best Man in the World" or "the Sweetest Girl" Passes These Questions, You May Be Sure He or She Deserves the Superlative Name.



IT'S not one of the world's greatest accomplishments to be able to look pleasant when everything is right with you financially. It's no trick in marriage, for instance, to be enthusiastic about the company of your quite legal escort when money is flush enough for theater, supper, and dance. The ultimate test of the durability of the legal partnership lies not in the high moments of life but in the degree of enthusiasm each can bring to the commonplace hours shared.

Could you, if broke, say, take in a museum [art or historical], an aquarium, a free band concert, a day in the country, a basket picnic or simply stay quietly at home in each other's company and be able to say with enthusiasm: "This is a great game?"

If you can, you hold one of the lucky numbers in the marriage lottery.

It's no great trick to appear congenial, understanding, sympathetic, when plans are vivid and the discussion of them eagerly shared, or when interesting experiences are being swapped, or during the hours when those perfectly human bits of gossip about acquaintances, friends, relatives are being carried on.

Can You Share Silence?

But—can you share silence and not be bored?

There's the test for the enduring quality of your companionship. It is a test engaged persons might subject themselves to seriously. The hours of boredom this simple precaution would save are incalculable. Boredom isn't listed in the recent divorce statistics accumulated by the government as one of the leading causes of separation. In fact, it isn't listed as a cause, at all. But the mischief it drives people into is plainly enough read in the causes that are presented in divorce petitions.

To be a bore or to be easily bored is not a criminal offense. It is not a criminal offense if two people marry without discovering the fact that their companionship qualifies them not only for the gay and exciting hours. It is, however, an insurance against sickness, accident or death to the congeniality of the pair if they will realize that the uneventful moments in life exceed the others by a great many hours, and realizing it, are fortified against boredom.

Two people living together under the same roof day after day must get talked out once in a while. They must even be entitled to the privilege of being tired out. Even tired of each other's company, no matter how engaging and brilliant, ordinarily. Then come the moments, hours perhaps, when silent thoughts are best company.

If you're understanding enough, and congenial enough to appreciate this right to silence, again you're the holder of a lucky number in the marriage lottery.

That makes you two up on luck.

"Married and Happy."

Now, for a few more suggestions on how to be happy though married as submitted by one who has tried them and found them entitling her to sign her letter, "Twenty-six, Married and Happy." The two already outlined, you will note, are included in her letter.

"Twenty-six, Married and Happy" has a wholesome purpose in presenting her experience as a guide to others. It is backed up by the firm belief that happiness awaits every man and woman who approaches marriage with faculties of discernment fairly alive. She is a college woman and bears out a recent report that college women are making an impressive success of their marital adventures, entering the partnership with a broader understanding of the humanness of character to be encountered therein, and level headed appraisal of the factors that go into making a go of the venture.

"Perhaps my point of view might be of assistance," she says. "We were engaged for four years, during which every type of problem imaginable was met.

"But there is this for the long engagement—we did become acquainted with each other. We agreed to go about with others, knowing it is better to break before marriage than after, but we played fair by letting those know we were engaged. We found singularly enjoyable friendships on this basis. We found also some pretty penetrating questions to ask ourselves—specific, not general, ones. Each is a double one, for they work both ways:

"'1. Would I want him as the father of my children? Or, would I want to be the mother of his children? You may not want any, you think, but your point of view will change as you mature.

"'2. Have you any knowledge about sex? A list of authentic books can be obtained by writing the dean of women (or men) of any university. Explain the situation. I know the dean of my university is always glad to help young people gain a right point of view.

"'3. Have you tastes in common? Are you willing to learn to enjoy your man's hobbies and he yours? By making ourselves partake of each other's pet pleasures my boy and I now share camping and hiking, swimming, tennis, golf, ice skating, shows, grand opera, dances, reading, photography, bridge games—countless things. When we have money we see a play or revue followed by supper and a dance. When we are broke we take in the museum or go sightseeing around the town.

"'4. Is he the one steady thing in all the universe? Does he turn to you with the same assurance of finding you there when he's worried, tired, or unhappy? If you seek each other then, and not merely when you have the warpaint on and are ready to go, it means something. A twenty-five cent bunch of sweetpeas when you're utterly weary is more than an orchid when you're pepped up. I've had them both, and I know.

"'5. Can you share silence and not be bored? Home is a place where each has a right to his own thoughts.

"'6. Do you find both passion and peace in his arms? Does he find both in you? Nothing could be more drab than a life untouched by the golden flame. Nothing could be more unsatisfactory and transient than merely passionate demonstration.'

Result of Much Thinking.

"I have done much thinking over several years for these few questions," Twenty-Six-Happy-and-Married concludes. "They are touchstones which have served me well and I'd like to pass them on if you think they would help a certain serious type of reader I know you have. I've been thrown with men all my life and both men and girls come to me with their problems.

"I stayed on the straight myself, not for ethical reasons, but for esthetic—it just seemed so unlovely not to. But I've been tempted. What girl hasn't? I've always fallen back on my little questions. I discarded one man on the first question. I broke with another on the third. He would not share my hobbies. He had none for me to join him in. The fifth question spoiled what would otherwise have been a good marriage. He would not let me think in peace.

"Yes, I can cook and sew and I'd just as soon darn my husband's sox so they are comfortable to wear as to learn a new needlework. Only one man filled the part required by each question. That's why I married him. He's a lover, a man, and a friend. I admire his intellect. I delight in his companionship. He is argumentative and I am stubborn. But we settle every disagreement before we sleep—and we are trying to conquer those traits in ourselves."

My Greatest Thrill

Write and tell us about the greatest thrill you ever experienced and if we print your letter we'll pay you $1. Make your letters short and snappy. Address them to "Greatest Thrill" Editor, The Chicago Tribune.

An Uncertain Ladder.

When I was a youngster we lived on large farm for a time. I liked to play in the big barns and one day soon after the haying season was over, I climbed up the long ladder into the hay mow that reached nearly to the top of the barn. When I had played there as long as I liked I started back down the ladder when, to my horror, it began to slip.

My heart seemed turned to ice, for if that ladder kept going it meant a sheer drop of thirty feet or more, with my arms and legs probably all tangled up with the rungs of the ladder by the time I hit the floor. I dared not stop and I dared not go back so I hurried on down as fast as I could and, o joy! my descending weight brought the ladder to halt before its upper end could slide off the edge of the hay mow.

Believe me, old "terry firmy" never felt any better under my feet than when I finally, weak with fright, reached that barn floor, and I was then and there permanently cured of climbing ladders to lofty hay mows.

A. V.

A Dark Winter Night.

It was a cold winter's night when I started from my friend's house. The wind howled bitterly, and the snow made sharp creaking sounds as I walked along. The street I had to take was a long dark one and aroused a feeling of terror within me. I kept on, however, but turned around at the slightest sounds. My terror increased, and I also increased my speed.

Suddenly something dark loomed up before me. My heart stopped beating. As I neared the object of my terror I discovered it was only a huge bush swaying in the wind.

I kept on walking. Then something cold touched my hand. I was petrified. When I turned around I discovered it was only a dog that had been following me home.

G. D.

In the Mountains.

My greatest thrill occurred when I was on a train with a friend going to Seattle. As we were going through some mountains we heard a loud rumbling. I looked out the window and to my surprise saw a great sheet of ice coming from the top of the mountains. We got up and ran to the observation car, ready to jump if necessary. Quickly the train got by before it landed.

If it hit us I suppose we would have been in a hundred pieces. A thrill, I call it.

V. G.

Just in Time.

When a child, my mother, a hired man, and myself drove our family horse to the timber to gather blackberries. When the man tied the horse he unfastened the lines from the bridle. When ready to start home mother told me I could go and get the rig and drive to a certain corner for them. I untied, and got in, but never noticed the lines being loose.

I wanted the horse to trot, so kept saying, "Get up!" "Get up!" He began to go too fast, and I began to tighten the lines, but they just kept coming back. I was so excited, for I was going fast, and a big steep hill was just ahead of me.

The hired man remembered what he had done and ran across the field and jumped the fence just in time to stop the horse before we started down the hill. This was a narrow escape and I have never gotten over that thrill.

$5 APIECE FOR BRIGHT SAYINGS

The Tribune will pay $5 for each childish saying printed. The story told must never have been printed in any magazine or paper. It is not possible to acknowledge or return unavailable contributions. Write on one side of the paper. Address bright sayings to Aunty Bee, The Tribune.

Baby Betty was fretful and Charles heard his mother tell neighbors how cross baby was, but added that she would be all right as soon as she cut her first tooth.

"How's Betty this morning?" a neighbor asked Charles.

"Aw right," he answered. "Her's got the toof her's been cryin' for."

C. N.

When grandmother went fishing she took Mercedes, aged 3, with her. Grandmother caught two fish, but they were so small she threw them back into the water.

Mercedes, however, did not catch any, so when her daddy asked her if she caught more fish than grandmother, she replied, "No, but granny caught two fish; the same one twice."

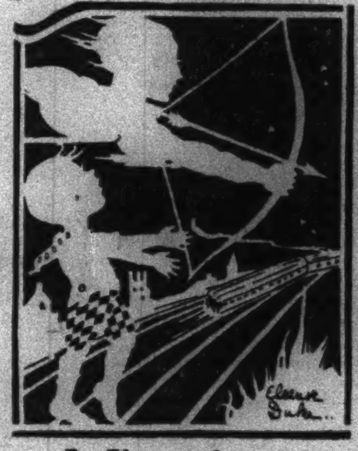
Tracks.



By Eleanor Jewett.

Yesterday I went to town on the train.
The rails stretched before us like twin arrows,
Made of steel and winging through space——
I looked at them and I wondered what
Would happen to trains, if, some day, the man
Who shot the rails, should forget to string his bow.

All Aboard for the Circus, Sally's Next Big Party!

By Sally Joy Brown

HERE'S good news, girls and boys—news about one of the parties we always look forward to throughout the year! The great Ringling Brothers' and Barnum and Bailey circus is coming to town and a hundred of us will see it July 19, a week from Thursday.

There's no need to tell you, is there, what fun that will be? But I just can't help mentioning some of the wonderful things the circus is bringing to Chicago in its four big trains. Chicago never has seen anything odder than the mammoth live sea elephant, caught last summer, in the antarctic and seen in America for the first time this year. This huge fellow weighs four and a half tons and every day its keepers feed it from 250 to 300 pounds of food! And it's only one of the thousand wild animals the circus is bringing in its menagerie.

Then there'll be hundreds of trained animals, clowns, acrobats and a profusion of splendid acts to keep five rings going at top speed all the time. I'll tell you more about them later—but I know you'll be wanting to start your letters now so I won't say more today.

The letters will be the same as usual. Just tell me why you like the circus—what you like best, and why you'd enjoy coming this time! Give your full name, your street address, and your age, and mail the letters in time to reach me by next Thursday morning. That's when I will read them. The hundred girls and boys who write the best letters will win the invitations and their names will be printed in the following Sunday's TRIBUNE. So start your letters now, mail them promptly, and watch the Sunday TRIBUNE to see if you're among the winners.

Winners for Theater

Now here are the names of my hundred guests for the vaudeville party at the State-Lake theater next Thursday, July 12. Invitations with detailed information will be mailed to all of you.

A FRIEND IN NEED

by Sally Joy Brown

I want to be the medium through which the friends in deed and the friends in need may be brought together. It may be you have some discarded article which has not outgrown its usefulness that will make some less fortunate one happy and you would gladly give it if you knew how to go about it. Write to me and I shall be happy to be of service to you. Please write on one side of the paper.

When information is wanted by mail a stamped, addressed envelope should accompany the request. Please do not send article to The Tribune, but write for the address of the applicant and send direct.

Wants a Violin.

"My grandson, 13, is a bright boy who loves music. He has been coaxing for a violin and I am not able to give him one. I thought one of your readers might have one to give.

S. W."

Have you the much longed for instrument to give this young musician? If he has talent it should be developed and the donation of a violin would help a great deal.

Almost Destitute.

"I am an elderly man, 62, and blind in one eye. I have been out of work for many months and my clothes have gotten so shabby. I am almost ashamed to ask any one for a job. Do you think you could get me a suit, size 38 and a pair of shoes, size 9D?

"A. B."

Surely some one will have a suit and a piar of shoes for this unfortunate man. The long period of unemployment he is going through has left him almost destitute, and a little help given now will help to put him back on his feet.

Mother Needs Help.

"My husband deserted me 8 months ago, leaving me with a small baby. I have been able to earn only enough to pay our rent and buy food. We are badly in need of clothing now and the baby needs a high chair. She is 8 months old. I wear size 38. Can you help us to get these articles?

"MRS. E. B."

The little garments your baby has outgrown would help keep Mrs. E. B.'s child clothed for many months to come. Perhaps you'll have a dress or two for the mother, also.

Generous Offer.

"I have several things to dispose of which I think some of your readers may like to have. There's a Mah Jongg game, complete with directions, which can be easily packed in a little suit case; copies of 'Macbeth,' 'Midsummer Night's Dream,' and another volume of Shakespeare in good condition, and some pictures cut from magazines which would be nice for the scrapbook of a shut-in. MRS. M. S."

Here's an offer which would be particularly nice for a shut-in, though we'd be glad to hear from any one who'd like to have the game, which not so long ago was so popular, the books or the pictures. Please write me; do not telephone.

"Now I Can Stand the Public Gaze —Can You?"

Curious eyes are quick to detect the slightest flaw that modern bathing attire reveals. So, too, with sleeveless frocks, evening gowns, sheer hosiery, and short skirts. Keep Your Skin Young

DO you know that just beneath that soiled, discolored, faded or aged complexion is one fair to look upon? Nature causes the normal skin to peel off in tiny, unseen, flour-like particles, a little each day, renewing the complexion of youth naturally, but there comes a time when this skin shedding slows up. Worry, overwork, sickness, inactivity are reasons that cause the face to be blotchy, discolored, pimply and old looking. The thing to do, if you wish to look your prettiest at all times, is to assist nature in the process of absorption by using pure Mercolized Wax. Get an ounce at any drug store or beauty counter and use as directed. It gently but surely peels away the outer scarf skin, removing freckles, pimples, blackheads or a muddy complexion. The underneath skin, now in evidence, is clear, pink, fresh and velvety, and the entire face looks years younger. Mercolized Wax brings out the hidden beauty. To quickly remove wrinkles and other age lines we recommend a face lotion of unusual merit. One ounce powdered saxolite and one-half pint witch hazel.

Cuticura Quickly Clears The Scalp Of Dandruff

Frequent shampoos are necessary to prevent dandruff and consequent loss of hair. Before shampooing anoint with Cuticura Ointment, then cleanse with a suds of Cuticura Soap and hot water. Rinse thoroughly. Nothing better for keeping the scalp and hair clean and healthy.

[illegible] Cuticura Shaving Stick 25c.

Sunday Concerts Will Play National Music

By Edward Moore.

BEGINNING a week from this afternoon, the Sunday concerts at Ravinia will take on a national character, in fact will be known as afternoons of national music. The first of the list will take the title of "An Afternoon of German Music and German Composers."

Conductor Eric DeLamarter has prepared a program to fit the occasion, of which about half will be Wagnerian. Jacques Gordon, the concertmaster of the Chicago Symphony orchestra, will be the soloist. Dr. H. A. Kroll, German vice consul general and acting as consul general in the absence of Dr. Simon, will make an address. To point the program more completely, the opera performance of that evening will be "Lohengrin."

INA BOURSKAYA,
Mezzo-soprano of the Ravinia Opera company.

Other afternoons to follow, though the exact order and datings have not yet been fixed, will be of French music and Polish music. An afternoon of Italian music is being planned, and other national groups have asked for representation during the season. It would seem to be a scheme of rather wide cosmopolitanism.

Three Operas Make Summer Debut.

Three operas are to be added to the répertoire this week: "La Juive" on Tuesday, "Martha" on Wednesday, "Romeo and Juliet" on Friday. As it happens, Mr. Hasselmans is to be the conductor of all three as well as repeating "Faust" tomorrow night. The sopranos in their order of appearance will be Elisabeth Rethberg, Florence Macbeth, and Yvonne Gall; the tenors Giovanni Martinelli Mario Chamlee, and Edward Johnson. A bit of extra interest will be given to the repeated operas by various changes of cast. Thus, Virgilio Lazzari will be back as the old blind king, Archibaldo, in "L'Amore dei Tre Re" tonight, Giuseppe Danise will appear as Valentine in "Faust" tomorrow night, and Armand Tokatyan will make his first appearance of the season as Rodolfo in "La Bohême" Thursday night.

He used to be in the Ravinia company, but has been away for three seasons. During the interval he is credited with having sung many parts and having made himself well liked in the New York Metropolitan. Mr. Danise will likewise take the part of Marcello in this performance.

In the meantime this department borrows a list of music compiled by the Musical Courier, and suggested as being particularly fitting for a concert program during the present season.

Clouds	Debussy
Raindrop Prelude	Chopin
Play of the Water	Ravel
Fog on the Hudson	Whithorne
Thunderstorm [from Pastoral Symphony]	Beethoven
Fountains of Rome	Respighi
The Cry of Water	Tipton
The Deluge	Saint-Saëns
Ocean Symphony	Rubinstein
Accursed Wet [from Rhinegold]	Wagner
Invocation to the Sun	Mascagni

Bertha Ott Announces Coming Concerts.

Showing that, in spite of the greatest pains, something may be slipped over as a matter of misinformation, this department a week ago printed the announcement of Paul Whiteman's appearances in the Chicago, Uptown, and Tivoli theaters, adding the statement as sent in that it would be his last time here for the next two years. It was all accepted in good faith, but a few days later came the further statement from Miss Bertha Ott that Mr. Whiteman and his orchestra would appear at the Auditorium under her management on the evening of Nov. 25. Beg pardon, and many thanks for the correction.

Miss Ott sends word of a concert season that shows no signs of falling off. Her series will begin Sunday afternoon, Oct. 7, with a recital by Fritz Kreisler at the Auditorium and a concert by the Russian Symphonic choir, Basile Kibalchich, conductor, at the Studebaker. Some of the other organizations to appear under her management are the English Singers, the Minneapolis Symphony orchestra, Doris Niles and her ballet, the Whitney trio, the Prague Teachers' chorus, the Mendelssohn club, and the Brahms, Flonzaley, Gordon, Marianne Kneisel, and Pro Arte quartets.

Of joint recitals there will be Bauer and Casals, Bauer and Gabrilowitsch, Jacques Gordon and Sophia Brilliant Liven, Gordon and Rudolph Reuter, Georgia Kober and Irene Pavloska, Maier and Pattison, Philip Manuel and Gavin Williamson, Vera Mirova and Michel Wilkomirski, and Theodora Troendle and Georges Szpinalski. Likewise, Miss Ott promises the presence of Andres Segovia, whose guitar playing became an important item of the New York season recently closed, and, for something outside the field of the music department, E. H. Sothern, who will come here to give readings. But this is not her complete list.

Continuing a musical tour of Europe, as related by Herbert M. Johnson, manager of the Chicago Civic Opera company:

BERLIN.—We were greeted with the usual late June weather when we stepped off the train at the Friedrichstrasse Bahnhof here—cold and wet. But there was a lot of sunshine when we reached the hotel, for there we found Marion Claire, with Mrs. Ida Weber and Henry Weber.

Miss Claire has made a fine success here, and has been engaged for the Staatsoper for all the time she can give. She is going at once to the Semmering, near Vienna, to learn her new rôles for Chicago. She seems to be in excellent health and fine spirits.

We heard a fine performance of "Fidelio" at the Staatsoper last night. The old house has been repainted and looks bright and clean. It was filled with an enthusiastic audience and the opera was beautifully produced. Kleiber conducted excellently. They tell me that the opera is greatly improved over former years, and certainly last night's performance was worthy of Chicago.

Our first day in Berlin was spent with managers and "hopefuls." As you know, artists here in Europe are all anxious to go to America, with Chicago preferred. The younger German artists are better "singers" than formerly. No manager has exclusive booking arrangements, and as a result I have been approached by as many as five managers with reference to the same artist.

We are told by American correspondents here that conditions in Germany are not so good as they appear on the surface, as communism is getting quite a foothold; labor is dissatisfied, although unemployment has materially decreased.

Artistic Progress.

In the artistic world, however, Germany seems to have made great strides even in the last year. As you doubtless know, three opera houses are putting on regular performances, and, we are told, do very good business. The State Opera has two houses—the old Imperial Opera, in which it gives its more elaborate

Barthelmess Seen at His Best in Dual Role

"The Wheel of Chance."

THE CAST.

Nickolai Turkeltaub	Richard Barthelmess
Jason Talinef [Born Schmulka Turkeltaub.]	Richard Barthelmess
Sara Turkeltaub	Bodil Rosing
Mosher Turkeltaub	Warner Oland
Hanscha Talinef	Ann Schaeffer
Ada Berkowitz	Lina Basquette
Josie Drew	Margaret Livingston
Pa Berkowitz	Sidney Franklin
Ma Berkowitz	Martha Franklin

By Mae Tinee.

GOOD MORNING!

A bit of character portraiture of which Jannings might be proud, an achievement in makeup that is as triumphant as any of Chaney's, stand to the everlasting credit of Richard Barthelmess in this picture. He may only merit lukewarm attention in productions to come, but we will never forget that in "The Wheel of Chance" he was a Great Actor.

RICHARD BARTHELMESS
is proclaimed great in "The Wheel of Chance."

It seems to me that in the tough egg—the underworld character—Mr. Barthelmess has found his metier. He was immense as "The Patent Leather Kid." He was great as Nicky Elkins in "The Noose," and both of these characterizations cause to pale by contrast the impersonation that up to the advent of the "Kid" was thought his best—the appealing mountain boy who was "Tol'able David." Beauty here, and heart interest, as there was in "The Little Shepherd of Kingdom Come"—but not the power that has been demonstrated in the actor's delineation of underworld characters.

"The Wheel of Chance" is the very excellent adaptation of Fannie Hurst's story, "Roulette." That Mr. Barthelmess knows his stuff is proved by the fact that it was he who read the story and he who demanded to be permitted to make the picture, in which he plays a dual rôle with such brilliancy and sureness.

Story Begins in Russia.

The story opens in Russia, where a Jewish mother, father, grandfather, and two small twin boys—the black haired Nickolai and the red headed Schmulka—live in Vodna during the czartist régime.

Thundering hoofs! Glare of torches! Gleam of sabers! The Cossacks!

When they have passed—a whirlwind of destruction, the village of Vodna is in ruins, and little Schmulka lies in a pool of blood—apparently lifeless.

Mother and father and Nickolai—grandfather is no more—flee to America, where prosperity attends them and the boy becomes a successful lawyer.

And, in Russia, Schmulka, who was not dead, is rescued by the town drunken woman, the midwife, Hanscha; nursed back to health, and brought by her finally to New York, where, on the lower East Side, he is raised by this dreg of humanity among the dregs of humanity and calls "Mother" a creature who knows but one love—drink.

Nickolai, whose parents desire above all things to have him marry Ada Berkowitz, a Jewish maiden, plump and pure, who visits at their home and whose parents are intimates of the Turkeltaubs, has other ideas. He is enamored of Josie, the gold digger—vividly impersonated by Margaret Livingston, who may not be the screen's greatest actress, but who is most certainly one of its most consistently satisfactory ones.

When loving her most—he discovers that she is faithless. At the same time dawns on him the realization of her utter cheapness and slovenliness of mind and body. He leaves her and marries Ada, portrayed with saccharine amateurishness by Lina Basquette.

Seeking a Home and Peace.

Two years later Josie, veteran of many unsavory amours, harder and poorer, but still flaunting a certain warm charm and appeal, meets Schmulka, who has changed his name to Jason.

Jason is lonely and heartsick. His mother's clean, sweet blood is crying out in him for something better than all he has ever known. Sitting hopeless and alone at the sloppy table of the only sort of café he knows anything about, his eye falls on Josie, who, across the room, sits dejectedly by herself at another table.

Their eyes meet. Jason goes to her.

"Do you ever get lonesome?" he says to her. Josie replies wearily: "I'm lonesome right now."

"So'm I," says Jason. They sip their beer in silence. Then: "Do you suppose a girl like you and a guy like me could hitch up?" Jason asks.

"I don't see why not," says Josie.

They leave together, and Josie waits outside the tenement house while Jason goes to pack his things.

Finding Hanscha dead—from drink—Jason casually turns her over to the coroner and he and Josie depart for her "dump," and, as he believes, a new life. He has found somebody "nice" to love and work for.

He gets a job and knows a brief time of happiness. Then he finds Josie as faithless to him as she had been at one time to Nickolai.

In a passionate moment he flings her against the wall.

Josie is dead!

How she dies I will let the picture show you. But Jason, who had never dreamed of killing her, is arraigned for her murder, and the prosecuting attorney is Nickolai.

You're Not Taking a Chance.

Right here I choose to leave you in suspense, but I must tell you that two or three of the scenes in court you will never forget. Here it is that Richard Barthelmess as Jason does the greatest work of his career.

The picture has been most splendidly directed, staged, and photographed. Besides those of the star the outstanding characterizations are those of Bodil Rosing, Margaret Livingston, and Ann Schaeffer. But—with one exception—the entire cast has been well chosen.

A review to be properly rounded off should have a snappy last line. This one would do:

But I don't like it—because, you see, you're NOT taking a chance when you plunk down your money on this picture.

Bits aBOUTem.

RUTH CHATTERTON, "legitimate" actress, has, it is said, been signed by Paramount to appear with Emil Jannings in "The Sins of the Fathers."

* *

MONTE BLUE has been sent for! He's been vacationing in Europe and wasn't wild to come home, but Warner Brothers, eager to begin work on "Conquest," wired him to return. H. B. Warner and Lois Wilson will be seen in the picture with him.

* *

SIXTY-FIVE HEAD of horses were herded about 300 miles into the heart of the southwestern desert, where scenes for Zane Grey's "The Water Hole" were to be filmed. They were shipped from Hollywood to the railroad point nearest the desert location, and were herded the rest of the way in by cowboys.

See you tomorrow!

National Conventions

By Clifford Raymond.

IN 1826 a man named William Morgan, living in western New York, said he was going to publish the secrets of Freemasonry in a book. He did. As the culmination of several consequences of this he was seized one night in Canandaigua by men who carried him by relays of horses to the Niagara river. Nothing which definitely accounts for Mr. Morgan thereafter seems ever to have been revealed beyond the fact that he never was seen again, dead or alive, by any one who thought or cared to mention it. An accepted fact or legend is that for a time he was confined in the dungeon, wine cellar or storeroom of the castle of old Fort Niagara, built by the French at the mouth of the Niagara river in 1725. The castle is still there, but it says nothing of Mr. Morgan, although it may have seen the last of him.

American society at this time and later was in one of its ferments. Jackson was arising as the backwoods aristocrat of an even plainer democracy than that of Jefferson. New bits of science were then even more upsetting than Mr. Bryan's old age endeavor to find a new cause and a new paramount issue in fundamentalism and Florida real estate.

Religious preferences were likely to be intense prejudices, and prejudices were inclined to be intensely religious. Joseph Smith was about to reveal the translation of the golden plates of the Book of Lehi, which he said he had found in the woods. Emotions were governing factors and the disappearance of William Morgan founded a political party, the Anti-Masons, the hundred year ago ancestor of the modern Ku Klux Klan.

In American political action nominations for President and Vice President had been made by congressional caucus, which designated certain men as recognizable and accepted candidates. Legislatures named the presidential electors and the men who made the electoral college found their preferences among the caucus nominees.

One of the revolts of the 1820's was against the caucus system, just as one of the revolts of the 1900's was against the convention system. The Anti-Masons formed a political party for the suppression of the Masons, to make it illegal for a Mason to hold public office. Now the question is the eligibility of a Roman Catholic for the presidency. Then it was the eligibility of a Mason.

The Anti-Masons held a national convention, having grown up as a party from town meetings, in Baltimore in 1831, and nominated William Wirt for President. Not many states were represented, but it was a national nominating convention and the representation was based on a ratio of delegates to population. It recognized the representative system in party government and gave party government a congress, called a convention, in which decisions could be arrived at.

Thereupon there was party government at last in a workable form, acceptable to the roaring Jacksonians, who, among others, instantly adopted it.

The nominating convention as the Sanhedrin of government is a peculiarly American accomplishment. It is based on the idea of representative government, but it provides a continuity for government not through official forms but in the voluntary associations of citizens. In fact, the United States continues its existence through the agency of the nominating conventions of the Republican and Democratic parties almost as assuredly and with as much certitude as if the constitution provided for that. In time one of these parties or both of them may or will disappear if precedents govern. The Federalists and Whigs extinguished themselves by their sins or incapacity. The Republican-Democrats of Jefferson grew into the Democrats of Jackson. The Free Soil partisans emerged in the form of the Republicans of Lincoln. For the most part the country has avoided the confusion and stalemate of political action through numerous political blocs by its ability and willingness to get one set of ideas and a pair of candidates from one nominating convention and another set and another pair from another.

As a source of considerate and rational political action the national convention seems hopeless. It is a mixture of imprudence and impudence, craft, low cunning, bombast and futile sounds, vacillation, fish market bargaining, poker faced dickering in rooms foul with smoke, with a half dozen or score of men deciding for and dictating to another thousand.

The main chance is political profit, in townships, cities, counties, congressional districts and states. It involves as distinguished decoration the post to the court of St. James and as political pork chops a place as inspector in the city bureau of weights and measures. It means paving contracts, rural fee jobs, social precedence in Washington, postoffices and federal pickings, privilege under law and outside of it, percentages on road building, the distribution of federal public improvements, the collection of customs, etc.

A convention is composed of or controlled by men in whose lives these are essential causes. The object is to present candidates with fragments and oddities of ideas or evasions of ideas thought best fitted to retain or procure for the members of the convention or the men they represent the advantages they seek in the life to which they have committed or devoted themselves.

In this respect it is much more pragmatic and practical than a convention of dentists, furniture makers, citrus fruit growers, real estate promoters, or stove manufacturers. One of these conventions will give the United States its government. Out of it will come the man who must in conceivable or probable emergency pit himself against the representatives of European and Asiatic statecraft, astuteness, national acquisitiveness. The least thing considered is what this man would do in such circumstances, and yet what he does may bind the nation inextricably to his decisions.

In Baltimore in 1912 the Democrats, for reasons entirely, or at least generally, unrelated to the national welfare, hesitated as between Champ Clark and Woodrow Wilson. They didn't know a war was rolling down. People seldom do know it. It might have been Clark. It was Wilson. The imagination simply stops in contemplation of that alternative and its inherent consequences.

No standard for selection exists outside of opportune and available vote getting qualities. A party which would nominate Roosevelt in one convention would take Taft in another. The Democrats could switch from Bryan to Parker and back to Bryan again. But, then, in another system the British can swing from Asquith to Lloyd George to Baldwin, and the continental European system produces mainly warring blocs which come to their natural finish in Mussolini's extinguishing of parliamentary government.

The instinct of a national convention is not to nominate a forceful, energetic, able man. Faguet's "Cult of Incompetence" gives the basic explanation of this. Not only the lesser chiefs but the people themselves have in the one case a conscious and in the other a subconscious fear of a dominating intelligence and ability. Harding is a much more logical convention product than Hoover. Sometimes the outstanding man cannot be escaped and a convention yields to necessity, but if it can find a popular, amenable character, ductile and malleable, a reliable vote getter, and a submissive administrator, politics has its ideal. A strong man in the White House generally arouses all the apprehensions of the very men who have put him there. They avoid him if possible.

The American national convention must be regarded as the strangest device of government which was ever made to work, but it is an almost perfect instrument for national political action in the United States. It might suit no other people than Americans, but it does suit them. Its absurdities, insincerities, and inanities are apparent, but it is dramatic, generally stimulating, and it seems to have its origin in the instincts, habits, traditions, and usages of the people. If their national existence depended upon the perfect adjustment of character and qualifications to the requirements of office, the system might ruin the country, but that isn't necessary. As it can be had it is desirable, and as it cannot be had it is somehow endured and survived.

The national convention is representative of the facts of American political life and government and it is frequently responsive to them. A convention of college presidents might be wiser and do much better and just because of that be more foolish and do much worse.

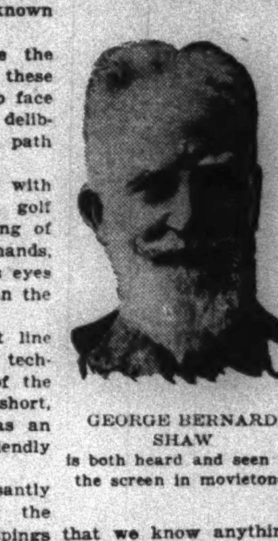
Movietone Brings Shaw to American Admirers

By Burns Mantle.

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—The most impressive use to which the onsweeping movietone has so far been put (I say this with all the assurance of a man who has seen but few movietones) is that of showing to America George Bernard Shaw, whose body may be claimed by both Ireland and England, but whose mind belongs to what are known as the ages.



GEORGE BERNARD SHAW
is both heard and seen on the screen in movietone.

You can, sitting before the screen of the Globe theater these days, meet Mr. Shaw face to face as he comes walking with deliberate nonchalance down the path of an English garden.

He is tall, he is white with whiskers, he is wearing a golf suit, he is twisting the string of his eyeglasses in his two hands, and he is trying to keep his eyes on the ground rather than on the camera.

Coming to the ten foot line and hearing, we old movie technicians suspect, the voice of the director, G. B. S. stops short, looks up as surprised-like as an amateur actor, smiles a friendly smile, and speaks.

"O," says he, in a pleasantly modulated voice to which the movietone has added no raspings that we know anything about, "O, how do you do! I am very glad to meet you. It's nice of you—so many of you—to come to see me." Or words to that general effect.

He talks, I should say, for ten minutes. He is delightfully informal, engagingly natural, genuinely fascinating. The lines in his face that the rotogravure pictures have of late accentuated are, in the animated picture, discovered to be kindly lines. The smile the halftones have failed to catch is enveloping and pleasant.

Superb Hirsute Foliage.

And the flowing white whiskers, forming the lower half of a perfect oval that takes in the high, white forehead, are the grandest white whiskers I know of. If a vegetable diet grew them any one who is for whiskers should also be for vegetables. There might be a new slogan: "When better beards are grown spinach will grow them. Ask Shaw, he knows!"

What Mr. Shaw has to say is pleasantly unimportant. He is glad to make this appearance so that those people who have read his books, or even seen a play of his, may know him as he really is. So many, he has been led to believe, have had quite a wrong idea of him. He is, he thinks, really quite a gentle person.

He knows, at least that he has one advantage over Mussolini. The great Italian is really a most amiable person, too, but he lacks the gift of looking the part. He has but the one commanding expression and he cannot change it. But as for Shaw——

At this point G. B. S. covers his long face with his hands, as though he might be playing peek-a-boo with a grandson, and when he takes them away he is frowning like a Fabian. Then the smile again, and the audience smiles with him.

This substitute meeting with Mr. Shaw is very satisfying to me. Both because it brings the man closer and because of the promise it gives that, having made the plunge, he will do it again.

An hour's Shaw talk by movietone or even a half hour's talk, would provide a most stimulating adventure. Having seen the summer lightning of his smile I want to hear him thunder.

Elizabeth Marbury's Venture.

Elizabeth Marbury, before she rode away to the Houston convention, put on the stage a new musical piece called, for no discoverable reason, "Say When."

Years back, when she was a younger woman and more active, Miss Marbury set a style in intimate musical plays by producing at the Princess theater that series of Bolton-Wodehouse gems including "Very Good, Eddie," "O, Boy," etc. She had hoped, I assume, to revive this style of entertainment with "Say When" that it might stand in pleasant contrast to the blarier and coarser jazz fare of the day.

Her start was good. She bought the musical comedy rights to the play Madge Kennedy and Sidney Blackmer offered as "Love in a Mist," and engaged Marc Connelly to adapt it. Mr. Connelly, being one of the first wits of the town and a superior clown in fashioning humorous scenes for the comics, got along nicely for a time. But at the last it seems he quarreled with somebody and withdrew the old family name from the program, substituting that of Calvin Brown.

Young Negress Star of the Play.

This action indicates friction. Hence it is not surprising that "Say When" was rather uncertainly projected at its opening performance. It had certain of the intimacies for which Miss Marbury strives, a distinguished chorus of tall, dignified, rather classy young women; five or six small dancing girls, a number of bright young fellows who can wear polo belts with a certain air of Vanity Fair and interpolated songs about the usual things.

But it was not until a saucy young colored person from the Harlem night clubs, Cora La Redd by name, took up the matter of "hot" dancing that the piece made any progress. To the tune of "One Step to Heaven," Miss La Redd tap danced and shuffled, twisted her hips, threatened to throw out a joint or two, rolled her eyes, bared her teeth and other-

ENGLISH WITHOUT A DON'T

So That.

By Wallace Rice.

FAIRLY bewildering to the student of English is the monotonous repetition by grammarians of rules forbidding locutions which, when dictionaries are referred to, turn out to be in good usage running back through years.

For example, Prof. Edwin C. Woolley says in his handbook "'So' is not to be used for 'so that.' Wrong: They strapped it so it would hold. Right: They strapped it so that it would hold."

Prof. George P. Krapp says in his "Essentials of Good English" [1927] "'So.' Low colloquial and juvenile as the equivalent of 'so that,' as, 'He started early so he could be home for supper' for 'He started early so that,' etc., or 'in order to be home,' etc."

One turns to Webster to read, "'So.' So that, in such a way that;—with clause of purpose or result; as, he was sick, so they were quiet." The Century says "'So.' In such a manner that; so that; followed by a clause of purpose or result. Provided that; on condition that; in case that," and cites Ben Jonson; "or any other pretty invention, so it had been sudden."

The sentence marked "wrong" by Prof. Woolley, the sentence marked "low colloquial and juvenile" by Prof. Krapp, both contain "so, followed by a clause of purpose or result." The dictionaries state that in such use "so" means "so that," and cite proof. The Concise Oxford says "so: on condition that, or 'that,' on condition set forth in an 'as'—clause or implied," and cites "so that—or so—it is done, it matters not how."

Wise old Goold Brown remarked that "if grammarians would read more, they would differ less." They should begin their reading with the dictionaries.

This Thing and That Thing of the Theater

By Frederick Donaghey.

TONIGHT will see the end of "A Man with Red Hair," so far as Chicago is concerned; and its American sponsor, Mr. Woods, says that he will have changes in the cast before he puts it on in New-York. . . . Richard Bennett, mentioned as Mr. Woods' first notion of an actor for the rôle of Hugh Walpole's sadist, is said to have accepted hire to perform the title-part in a dramatization of Jim Tully's overrated and filthy tale of "Jarnegan." This would indicate that Mr. Bennett is without certitude that "The People," wherein he was the star for a week's showing in Milwaukee, will be rewritten into good merchandise. He is now engaged in making a movie in Hollywood; and it seems unnecessary to add that it is a talking-movie.

BASIL RATHBONE
He's due September 2 to act in "The Command to Love."

Again comes announcement that John Erskine has written or is writing a play: the Actor-Managers, a "group" that has taken over the good-will and assets of the Neighborhood Playhouse of New-York, say he is to turn over to them his own dramatization of one of his tales; and the guessers have it that the tale is "The Private Life of Helen of Troy," although that exquisite fun has already been messed up for the screen, and has been bulletined as the basis of an impending song-and-dance show. It may be recalled that, when the tale was new, Miss Barrymore was definitely named as the actress of Helen in a dramatization by Professor Erskine. What makes the guess seem goofy is that Miss Doris Keane is mentioned as the probable performer of Helen. Whatever else Miss Keane may suggest, it isn't Helen of Troy—not even the matured Helen who is mother of a girl old enough to wed up with Orestes. . . . When last I had word of Miss Keane, it was that she was making ready again to appear in "Romance" in London, where, some years ago, she had a fine run in the piece. That play, commonplace though it is, seems to have done for Miss Keane what "Trilby" did for Wilton Lackaye: that is, to have spoiled the public for her performing in anything else.

"Events" of the new week in New-York will be a farce, by Seaman Lewis, called "The Lawyer's Dilemma," said to be a rewrite of an earlier piece shown there, "Babies à la Carte," and the restoration of "The Ladder," revised for the fifth or the sixth time, with a charge of three dollars for the seats that were for months and months given away. . . . And "The Happy Husband," in which Miss Billy Burke has been acting, and something named "The Cyclone Lover" were taken off there last night.

"Names Make News."

Miss Jeanne Eagels has two-a-day bookings that will, if she hold out, carry her to the Pacific and back, although the original plan regarding her appearances in variety seemed to have been to employ her for not more than three or four weeks.

Miss Mae West, the author-star of "Sex," seems to have put another masterpiece over in New-York in "Diamond Lil," wherein, by report, she is doing so well at the gate that she feels safe in telling her representatives in the front of the theater to cut out the farce of taking persons of social importance back to her dressing-room to meet her; and she says that persons of social importance make her tired.

Sampson Raphaelson, the lad from down-State who wrote "The Jazz-Singer," is to have a new one, "Young Love," put on by the Messrs. Shubert.

Frank Daniels, it is explained here for the information of numerous readers who have written in to say the Editor was mistaken in a recent paragraph that held the comedian to be living, is living.

Miss Sybil Thorndyke, held in England to be an actress of much talent and artistic importance, is mentioned as among the aliens who will tour here this season; and it may be that some theater-goers recall her as in support of John Drew when that lamented comedian acted in the neat piece named "Smith," or when she out-door'd with Ben Greet.

George Marion, who is many years older than most other active performers, is to have the principal man's part in something new named "Caravan," described as a play about Gypsies.

Lyn Harding is said to have been hired for the try-out of "Power," a new one by Myron C. Fagan. . . . Mr. Harding is to be Miss Anglin's co-star in George C. Tyler's revival of "Macbeth."

Miss Laura Hope Crews and Miss Edna Hibbard are to be in the try-out of "Possession," by Edgar Selwyn.

More Names.

Arthur Byron, who seems to have a hard time finding rôles, is to take part in a Maine try-out with a piece named "Your Uncle Dudley," written for him, it is said, by Howard Lindsay and Bertrand Robinson, authors of "Tommy."

John Cromwell and Miss Helen Flint are named among the players of "Gentlemen of the Press," by Ward Morehouse, of the New-York Sun.

Raymond Hitchcock, who recently stated for publication that he liked broadcasting so well that he thought he would devote his career to it, has taken hire from Mr. Ziegfeld for the rôle in "Show-Boat" acted in the original cast by Charles Winninger.

Sean O'Casey, whose "The Plough and the Stars" and "Juno and the Paycock" were delights of last season in Chicago as given by the Irish Players, has had a fight in Dublin with William Butler Yeats, who turned down the former's new piece, "The Silver Tassel," as not suitable for the Abbey Theater because Mr. O'Casey differs in his technique from Shakspere.

Louis John Bartels, who originated the title-rôle of "The Show-Off," and Miss Helen Lowell, also of the original cast, are acting the good piece in Los Angeles.

Miss Anne Sutherland, a good actress who has been at it a long time, is going into something new named "The Intruder," designed for New-York exhibition within the month; and, in case it fails, Miss Sutherland has a coffee-room recently opened by her in that metropolis.

Frisco, an amusing cuss who seems to be developing the trick of talking on the stage, is to be in the new issue of Earl Carroll's show, the Vanities.

A. L. Erlanger, who is frequently reported to be on the edge of retirement, continues to put his name on theaters, and is putting it on one as far away as Birmingham (which is in Senator Heflin's anti-Smith belt), maintaining that the Erlanger is a better name for it than the Jefferson.

Maurice Yvain, who wrote the good tune called "Mon Homme," is engaged to compose a score for a piece tentatively called "A Good Fellow," adapted from a French farce named "Un Bon Garçon."

Ten Years Ago in Chicago Theaters

From The Tribune of July 7, 1918.

WILLIAM FAVERSHAM will plunge next season with the product of Amélie Rives, the Princess Pierre Troubetzkoy, and her collaborator, the Prince. He will play Miles Hendon in their dramatization of Mark Twain's "The Prince and the Pauper," and he will produce their new comedy, "Allegiance." Miss Blanche Yurka, Harrison Hunter, Frederick Truesdell, and Herbert Belmore are in the cast of "Allegiance."

Nothing of moment resulted from Mr. Faversham's promise to plunge. He had, nearly thirty years earlier, made his first real success as Miles in a dramatization of "The Prince and the Pauper" in support of Miss Elsie Leslie, a youthful celebrity of the rage for "Little Lord Fauntleroy."

When Miss Hazel Dawn discards the nickel show next month to appear in "Dolly of the Follies," she will have some of A. H. Woods' most costly performers as her accessories. On the list are John Mason, Walter Jones, Harry Tighe, Homer Mason, Marguerite Keeler, Maude Eburne, and Thamara Swirska—the orthography of whose nomenclature suggests that she dances in her bare feet.

Nor did the promise to make a star of Miss Dawn have important results to art or the box-office. . . . Thamara Swirska, riding in on the crest of the comic flair for Russian things, taught dancing here and served for 1916-'17 as principal ballerina of the Chicago Opera. And she was funny!

William Rock and Frances White, the sudden star discovered by Mr. Rock in a frontier cabaret, are going to work next season for Messrs. Elliot, Comstock, and Gest. They will have a musical play by Messrs. Bolton, Wodehouse, and Kern, who wrote "Oh, Boy!" and "Leave It to Jane!"

Whatever—if anything—the play may have been, it made no dent on the public consciousness. Rock didn't have much; and Miss White had about as little as she now has.

A novel named "Enchanted Hearts" has been dramatized for Robert Hilliard and rechristened "A Prince There Was." It is said to be of the sweet sort, something like "The Littlest Girl"; and its players will include Bonnie Marie, the small wonder-child who appeared last season with Chauncey Olcott.

"A Prince There Was" was rewritten by George M. Cohan, who told Mr. Hilliard to go to it. When audiences didn't attend, Mr. Hilliard said the rewrite was to blame; whereupon Mr. Cohan offered to jump in and play the title-rôle, the while paying wages to the disgruntled star. Audiences then developed. Later, with Grant Mitchell in the rôle, the piece, a good entertainment, was successfully given in the Grand Opera-House, where its run was stopped when Mr. Mitchell, a hot disciple of Equity, walked out in the actors' strike of 1919.

Managers declare that the high cost of traveling by rail will put an end to the out-of-town theatrical business next year. A committee of them is going to see Mr. McAdoo about it.

Well, for once the managers were nearly right: the business of touring companies wasn't destroyed, but it was badly bent. The bend is still in it: the war-time rates have not been noticeably mitigated, so far as touring shows are concerned. And it was so like managers to appoint a committee to call on Mr. McAdoo about it! There was nothing he could do for them; for there were then, as there are now, so few managers that their votes, if they voted, wouldn't make a bit of difference in a Presidential election. One half-witted Prohibitionist and one unwashed Klansman were of more importance in Mr. McAdoo's philosophy than all the managers in (and out of) Christendom.

In "The Maid of the Mountains," which is to be the next big enterprise of the Elliot-Comstock-Gest affiliation, Miss Sidonie Espero will have the rôle sung by Miss José Collins in London. Miss Espero, unknown west of Wilkesbarre, was in Miss Alice Neilsen's recent disaster in "Kitty Darlin'." Associated with her will be John Slavin, Miss May de Sousa, George MacFarlane, Carl Gantvoort, and William Danforth.

"The Maid of the Mountains," which ran four years in London, ran four weeks or less in New-York, where the venture was marked by the appearance of William Courtenay as the singing hero!

AMONG JULY'S STAGE-BEAUTIES

MISS KATHARINE FRANCIS

SHE'S in the cast of "Elmer the Great," acting the part of a nice show-girl who is called in by the manager of the ball-team to pacify, conciliate, and softsoap Elmer, the recalcitrant pitcher from the bush leagues. . . . Miss Francis has, doubtless, a stage-past, although it is not familiar to The Tribune; but the point is not what she has been doing, and is that she is doing something fine these July nights in the Blackstone: that is, she is appearing there, where she may be seen. Miss Francis is something to see!

Twenty Years Ago

From The Tribune of July 5, 1908.

THE second play that Eugene Walters succeeded in selling the managers who doubted his ability for years, a melodrama titled "The Wolf," will be given its first Chicago performance in the Chicago Opera-House tomorrow night. It is said to have scored a success in New-York, where is followed "Paid in Full," and is expected to add interest to the Summer season. The cast includes Ida Conquest, William Courtenay, Walter Hale, John Findlay, George Probert, and Sheridan Block.

"The Wolf," as a play, was a disappointment, although its brief list of characters prevented it from being a costly one.

Frank Keenan, the sheriff in "The Girl of the Golden West," is throwing out his chest a little more than usual these days owing to the recent success on the stage of the other F. Keenan—his daughter Frances—whose work in a stock-company at Washington in support of Miss Charlotte Walker has won all sorts of praise.

In July, Cohan & Harris will launch the George Evans Honey-Boy Minstrels, which will include, among others, George Thatcher, John King, Harry Shunk, Henry M. Morse, Waterbury Brothers and Tenny, Rice and Prevost, Julian Eltinge, Eddie Leonard, and the Gordon Brothers. The feature of the new minstrel venture will be a ragtime review, written by Cohan.

The Cohan & Harris minstrel-troupe was duly realized and gave a varied and enlivening performance; the personnel differed somewhat from that given in The Tribune of twenty years ago today. The belief of the writer of these memoranda is that the venture was represented in the firm's bookkeeping by a heavy deficit; and that was taken as a sign that the public preferred shows with girls.

LETTERS POSTED TO THE DRAMA-EDITOR

LETTERS about plays, actors, and the like meant for publication may be addressed to Mr. Donaghey. . . . But do not send in letters about matters that are properly the concern of the theater-managers, nor letters about alleged wrongs the correction of which is for the theater-goer, himself, and not for The Tribune.

'Tis the Old V.-H. Wheeze!

SIR: If you consider your job one of those hit-and-run things, then you have no sense of your responsibility to the public. When you say a show is good or is bad, you should keep in mind your responsibility to the public. Here is the case of "A Man with Red Hair," which you advised your readers to see. I took your word for it, bought four tickets, and went. I don't say it was bad or hopeless as a show; but I say very emphatically that it wasn't the kind of show one expects to see plugged hard in THE TRIBUNE. Others in the theater that night liked it, apparently; but I failed to understand why you should have gone out of your way to recommend it to such an extent that I, although I care little for the theater between-seasons, felt I should be missing something good unless I went. Nor do I see wherein Crane Wilbur is "as good as Mansfield," as you said he was. True, these things are matters of opinion; but, after all, why throw away words in a useless "plug"? I'm sure it was you who, some time ago, said that critics cannot compel people to go to a show not wanted.

LESLIE H. HARRIS.

P. S.: Have shown above to my daughter—less for her opinion of my letter than to show how well I'm getting along on her portable typewriter; and she tells me that the article I read was not in THE TRIBUNE, but in another paper—in spite of the fact that I don't read other papers! Anyway, she showed me what you had written: she keeps TRIBUNE reviews in a scrap-book; so, I ask you to treat the above as if it hadn't been written.

L. H. H.

Chicago: June 30, 1928.

About Vanished Players.

SIR: Permit me to say that I regard the article of the 26th instant on the late Holbrook Blinn as one of the finest things of the sort I've ever read about a dead celebrity, regardless of his profession or place in life. Some of us may have thought less than he deserved about Mr. Blinn's skill and ability, and some of us more; but it seems to me that we laymen should be able to adjust our views nicely as a result of what THE TRIBUNE printed. I have much the same to say of the article of the 25th—that signed F. D. and following the dispatch telling of his death the night before. Most of the biographical sketches printed about dead actors are nothing save an array of dates and play-titles—such a play such a year, and so on. Estimates of talent usually appear six or eight weeks later in a magazine, and by that time are too far from the timeliness of the subject. A dead actor is soon forgotten.

JOHN T. YARNELL.

Indianapolis: June 29, 1928.

SIR: The estimate of the late Holbrook Blinn, in last Tuesday's TRIBUNE, and the sketch of Robert Mantell's varied career, in today's issue, are excellent. I think such writing must have the same effect on all intelligent theater-goers as it has on me. I mean, the article in each case has served to help me to recapture Blinn and Mantell as I saw each years ago for the first time—Mantell in "Monbars," wherein he had a "big scene" showing the hero in the act of cauterizing a dog-bite with a hot poker, and Blinn in "The Cat and the Cherub," which has since been turned into the little opera entitled "L'Oracolo."

HENRY P. JONES.

Chicago: June 28, 1928.

SIR: I think the statement that the Holbrook Blinn of recent years was of about the standard of Richard Mansfield in the last years of his career an expression of sound judgment in matters of the stage. There was less competition in Mansfield's time—a fact some of us who remember him are about to overlook when we say that nobody else so good has come to take his place. Also, F. D. is, I should say, correct in implying that, had Mansfield been in the competition of the last twenty years, he would have turned to plays other than those that make up his répertoire, varied as it was.

JAMES M. MCMAHON.

Chicago: June 28, 1928.

SIR: The three most desolate nights I have ever spent in a theater were spent in the Illinois when the late Robert B. Mantell acted there late in 1923. I had been among his admirers in earlier years. I remember attending his performances fourteen nights in three weeks about twenty years ago in the old Grand Opera-House. He had then a fine company, good scenery and costumes, his own orchestra-conductor, informative playbills or "programs," and seemed to have careful, intelligent representatives for the newspapers and the operation of his enterprise. The Mantell of the 1923 engagement was more like a backwoods actor bewildered at finding himself in a big city. The article about him in today's TRIBUNE explains a great deal.

ELLA GORE HINCHMAN.

Aurora (Ill.): June 28, 1928.

SIR: I should have thought that so fine an actor as the late Leo Ditrichstein deserved more at his death than was given to him in either yesterday's or today's TRIBUNE. If Richard Mansfield had a successor on the American stage, it was Ditrichstein. My memory of him goes all the way back to when he played with Mrs. Fiske in the original cast of "Leah Kleschna." He was with her later in "Rosmersholm." I don't think even Mansfield could have been as good as Ditrichstein was in "The Concert," "The King," and "The Great Lover."

HELEN THOMAS BROOKS.

Chicago: July 1, 1928.

[Mr. Ditrichstein did not appear here or elsewhere in any play with Mrs. Fiske.—ED.

So, Why Not Say So?

Ziegfeld, like O'Neill, has drawn so much praise from the critical gentry in past years that they now arbitrarily lean back in order to convince themselves and their readers that they are gifted with balance, poise, or what not. It is unfortunate, however, that they should have picked out this time to give their little show, for both men—the producer, on the one hand, and the dramatist, on the other—are embarrassingly doing some of the best work of their respective careers. Of O'Neill's, I have already spoken at length in this place. Of Ziegfeld's, suffice it to say that both in the exhibitions called "Show-Boat" and "Rosalie" he still proves himself to be what he has proved himself in the past: the one outstanding music-show producer in the world-theater.—George Jean Nathan in the American Mercury.

Of the players drawn as he sees them by Mr. Packer, all save Mr. Spottswood are come into the cast of "Excess Baggage" since it was moved from the Princess to the Garrick, eighteen weeks ago: he, in his clown's make-up, was a figure in a cartoon by Mr. Packer printed at the end of the first week of the run. . . . Miss Martin succeeded Miss Nina Penn; Miss Learn, Miss Julie Ring; Mr. Downing, Frank Beaston; and Miss Davis succeeded, first, Miss Helen Carrell, and, then, Miss Ethel Wilson: the respective parts acted by her predecessors have been merged. . . . The gargoyle of a messenger-boy is Mr. Packer's reaction to William Mackin, who acts as the leader of the three-a-day quartet in the play.

Sunday Concerts to Play National Music

By Edward Moore.

presentations, and the lovely, though smaller, Kroll, where most of the lighter works are presented. The same artists are used in both theaters.

Then there is the Municipal Opera, which has quite a satisfactory company presenting grand opera on a bargain basis. Its manager often brings in stars and even companies from other countries for guest performances. Recently an Italian company made quite a success there, and our own Kipnis was featured in two or three performances of "The Love of Three Kings."

The recent Russian season, while it was a great success artistically, did not do so well financially. Only six of the advertised ten performances of "Boris Godunoff" were given. The scale of prices, which ranged from $17 downward, made it impossible for the bulk of Berlin's opera lovers to attend.

The season brought to light a most interesting director, Emil Kuper of the Riga State Opera, whose profound knowledge of Mussorgsky's music contributed in no small measure to the artistic success of the performances.

Splendid costumes and fine stage decorations by Jan Kugas of Riga were an interesting feature of the production. The chorus of the Lettish State Opera was brought to Berlin, and its work more than repaid the management for the expense involved. It contained a group of young, well trained voices, capable of handling Russian as well as German.

New Opera Completed.

A new opera, "The Basque Venus," has just been completed by Hermann Hans Wetzler. The libretto, by Lini Wetzler, is based on a story of Merimee, famous as the author of "Carmen." It will have its premiere next season in Leipsic under the direction of Gustav Brecher.

We will shortly go to Dresden to hear a performance of "The Egyptian Helen," the new Strauss opera, and will also hear "Electra" and some other works.

The quaint old town of Schwerin was host to the General German Musical union in its 58th annual festival, and from all reports a high class program was presented.

Schwerin, although it boasts only 50,000 inhabitants, has always enjoyed a reputation for the importance of its musical events. It is the capital of the old grand duchy of Mecklenburg, and for centuries first class artists were members of the court opera and orchestra. The court passed with the German revolution of 1918, but Schwerin's love of music has remained.

Artistically Schwerin is one of the most interesting of German cities. The ducal palace and the cathedral are both places of pilgrimage for the tourist, and it was in this fitting background that the society founded by Franz Liszt in 1861 gave its 1928 program.

One operatic performance, three orchestral concerts, and two chamber music concerts constituted the festival. Young composers were given the call, and an unusual group of novelties was the result.

Here and There in Music.

Moissaye Boguslawski will give a piano recital at the Central theater next Thursday afternoon, playing Beethoven's Sonata in C sharp minor, Debussy's "Minstrels," Chopin's Sonata in B flat minor, and six Paganini-Liszt Caprices. On the same stage Saturday morning Leon Sametini, violinist; Richard Hageman, pianist, and Alfred Wallenstein, cellist, will play the trios in B by Brahms and in G minor by Chausson.

Brock Peterson, tenor, and Lucile Gagin, violinist, will appear in joint recital in the parlor of the Hotel Windermere West tonight.

Under the caption, "Let Lindbergh Have His 'We,' She Has 'It,'" Opera Topics, the official organ of the Chicago Civic Opera company, has something to say about Maria Olszewska, the contralto who will make her American debut with the company next season. She is now at the Colon theater in Buenos Aires, but she would seem to have accumulated a considerable European reputation before crossing the ocean. European critics have been saying that she is the greatest Carmen of the generation, and Richard Strauss is quoted as naming her "his peerless Octavian," referring to the boy's part in "Der Rosenkavalier." She will sing both these parts in Chicago, also Ortrud in "Lohengrin" and Delilah in "Samson and Delilah." These schedules would seem to indicate quite a bit of versatility on her part.

Fannie Bryce Joins the Movie-Talkies

By Rosalind Shaffer.

HOLLYWOOD, CAL. — [Special Correspondence.]—Fannie Bryce was located lying restfully on a warm colored leather sofa on a hot day this week between shots on her first movie venture.

She is making a picture named "My Man," for Warner Brothers. Vitaphone is going to perpetuate in celluloid her "I'm an Indian," "My Man," "I'd Rather be Blue," "Spring Song," and other famous stage numbers with sound accompaniment.

It should be terrific. Miss Bryce is most enthusiastic, as is her director, Archie Mayo. Mayo, when it was remarked that it should be great with the ever popular Irish-Jewish combination in director and star, remonstrated and said it was all Jewish, his "maiden" name being Meyer, not Mayo.

Starting All Over.

Fannie says she is getting an unholy kick out of starting in movies. Starting a new career all over, it seems to her. No thrill being at the top; it is the beginning that is exciting according to Fannie, who should know. She has been both places. Her film rushes seem to show a striking resemblance to Nazimova.

"By the Blue Alsatian Mountains" is her present plaintive ditty. Her two children, Billie, 7, and Francis, aged 9, are summering with their nurse in that person's native Alsace and Fannie misses them plenty.

The children, thanks to a polyglot nurse and vacations abroad, are now being painlessly inoculated with their fourth foreign language. The public schools of New York claim them through the winter.

"I was raised in them [the schools of New York] and they're good enough for my kids," says Fannie. "I could not stand it to raise a pair of snobs." Both children seem to inherit their mother's musical gift; the little boy may yet write lyrics for his mother's songs. He has a great rhyme sense and it's confidently hoped that the future will take care of the sense of humor necessary to suit his talented parent's comedy needs.

Celebrities Ill.

What the old southern servants used to call "the summer misery" seems to have gripped the screen colony. A dozen actresses, actors, and writers have their current lodging in hospitals, many of them there for different reasons.

Mrs. Jim Tully, who, as Margaret Myers, local college girl, married the author several years ago, is improving slowly from an operation performed by Dr. W. L. Howerth at Hollywood hospital. Due to the serious nature of her illness, Mrs. Tully, it is said, will be in the hospital for weeks.

Mrs. Warren Doane, wife of the general manager of Hal Roach Studios, Inc., is in Methodist hospital convalescing from an appendicitis operation.

Dudley Murphy, young director; Jack Pickford, and Ward Crane are all in a sanitarium outside of Los Angeles, each, it is said, with an uphill fight to health ahead of him. Murphy's illness was sudden and severe and on first diagnosis had the appearance of food poisoning.

THE ART OF COLORATURA

FLORENCE MACBETH.
[Apeda Photo.]

SHE sings coloratura parts during the Ravinia season, and sings them uncommonly well. One of the most melodious of all, "Martha," is on the bills for Wednesday night, and Miss Macbeth will have its leading soprano role. The music is by a German; the story tells of England in the time of Queen Anne; and it is sung in Italian.

Voice of the Movie Fan

Praise for Clive Brook.

Dear Mae Tinée: Will you please tell me why we do not see Clive Brook in more pictures? I have just seen him and, as usual, find him superb in his part; so real, not particularly handsome but such a strong face. And his acting is so real, too!

Don't you think his acting in "Underworld" should have made him a star, rather than a "support" for actresses who have not gotten their reputations by their acting?

I'm not alone in my opinion. There are a lot of people who agree with me.

G. G.

Editor's note: I think we see him in a good many pictures. He is a fine actor.

From a Harold Teen Fan.

Dear Mae Tinée: How do you get that way, picking "Partners in Crime" as one of the best pictures of the month when the public is fed up on Beery-Hatton comedies? If you were so hard up for a last selection why didn't you give "Harold Teen" its just dues? Photoplay picked it as a best picture of the month and certainly it shaded "Partners in Crime" by far.

"Harold Teen" was unique and there probably will never be another one like it. Aren't you being a bit disloyal? Give even the devil his dues. It was evident from your review you were not a "Teen" fan. Long live the world's greatest comic!

IRMA McN.

Editor's Note: H'ray!

Dear Everybody's Friend Mae Tinée: Charles Ray is one of the real [and reel] actors and your review of his "The Count of Ten" justly makes us anxious to see it, but being one of the really good ones the—O, let it out, the d——d exhibitors of Chicago will think it not a moron drawer, so are not putting it on.

Because of success in a previous appeal to you I am again asking your good services in using your influence in having some uptown theater put this on.

Yours hopefully and gratefully,

HELEN F.

Editor's note: Here's printing your appeal. Who knows but it will soften some exhibitorial heart?

wise gave such animalistic evidence of rhythmic joy that the audience was momentarily electrified.

Baltimoreans Bring Sad Comedy.

We also had some young visitors over from Baltimore this week. They came representing the Play Arts Guild and brought with them an amateur troupe to sing the Gilbert and Sullivan "Patience."

Their singing is excellent, their comedy sad.

The Baltimoreans are interesting adventurers, however. It appears that down in Baltimore there was a Johns Hopkins student named Cushing—Thomas Morris Cushing. This was six years ago and the Little theater movement was just getting a good start. Mr. Cushing decided that his college should have one. He organized a Little theater group and called them the Homewood Players.

Profited by a Quarrel.

The second year out, a squall arose over a play that one of the faculty wanted done because, Mr. Cushing believes, he had made the adaptation. Mr. Cushing did not like the play. There were words or something and Mr. Cushing resigned everything and became a drama editor on Paul Patterson's Sun.

That was the beginning. The Play Arts Guild followed. Revivals were staged not only of "Iolanthe," "The Mikado," and "Patience," but also of "Fashion," "Tweedles," and "Sun-Up." These prospered. "Patience," in fact, which shows the neighbors to comic advantage, ran for twenty weeks in the old home town. Which stimulated the Guild's courage to such an extent that they decided to try Broadway.

JOSEPH'S COAT

VINCENZO CELLI.
[Badodi Photo.]

Vincenzo Celli, Chicagoan, is being rated in Europe among those who have achieved prominence in the art of the ballet. The picture represents him as he appeared in the rôle of Joseph in "The Legend of Joseph," by Richard Strauss, when that work was given at the famous La Scala Opera house in Milan, Italy. It is being hinted that he will soon return to dance in Chicago.

Best Movies

Once in a Blue Moon.

In my opinion, "Stella Dallas" is the best movie I have ever seen. That picture achieved a realism throughout which makes the performance a memorable one, and the laurels go to Belle Bennett, who made Stella Dallas a completely understandable character and drew sympathy from her audience without any trace of soppiness.

The story with a good, sound moral had a modern background and left no vague, strange feeling of something beyond the conception of the ordinary movie patron, as some pictures do.

O, for more evidence of perfect performance and direction such as that!

M. H.

Need for Smiles.

Pathos we find in life, but in the world of make believe, we want happiness. In my opinion the actor who supplies the world with a hearty laugh is doing a great service.

So, let's give Harold Lloyd in "Speedy" a hand. It is brimful of laughs and chuckles from start to finish.

The interest never lags. Clever ideas and splendid acting keep one in a state of constant merriment.

Never have I seen a cleaner, jollier play. May we have more like it? We need them.

I. W. K.

A Human Story.

Of the many pictures I have had the pleasure and enjoyment of seeing, "The Way of All Flesh," starring Emil Jannings, is the most outstanding, in my estimation. Its environment was that of so many of its spectators and was not laid in the unfamiliar atmosphere of millionaires or the titled gentry of other lands or of other days.

The family appeal was so understandable—depicting the trifles in the earlier part of the picture that make up life and the unfortunate slip of the estimable husband, father, and employé was so human that it again serves as a much needed reminder of how we should forgo temptation, no matter how lurid its appeal.

J. A. S.

RUBES

CHIC SALE

He's bill-topping in the Palace, where he may be seen for the first time here since, last Summer, he took part with Miss Sophie Tucker in the run of "Gay Paree." . . . Mr. Sale's studies of rubes and goofs, hicks and boobs make good entertainment, as has frequently been said in The Tribune.

$5 for War Letters

If you're a World war veteran with vivid memory of some thrilling experiences ten years ago, back in 1918, tell us about it in 300 words or so and we'll send you $5 if we print your letter. Address War Letters, Chicago Tribune.

Tricked by Fate.

We were up on the Chateau Thierry front. Three weeks had passed and cigarets were scarce.

Luckily, the Y. M. C. A. man attached to our regiment got ahold of several cartons. He counted cigarets against men and found that one package of twenty had to be divided between two men.

It was evening when we lined up and every other man was given a package; the man receiving the tobacco was to divide with the man behind.

The company had to go up for front line duty immediately afterwards, and, since it was dark, no one could smoke. On the trail to the front line we ran into considerable shell fire, and there was Mike Garutto with his half-owned package of cigarets in his front trousers pocket.

Shells were coming thick and fast—and one shell brushed Mike, tearing his blouse and literally cutting off the top half of his pocket, the shell landing in some mud nearby as a "dud."

"That shell mighty near got you, didn't it, Mike?" shouted his buddy.

"Nope," replied Mike, "but it got my cigarets—here's yours."

And Mike tossed the bottom half package to his buddy, feeling that he, though a trick of fate, had lost his half.

NEWS OF THE RELIGIOUS WORLD

Camp Meeting On at Des Plaines

By the Rev. W. B. Norton.

WITH the services today Des Plaines camp meeting is in full swing. A special attraction will be the welcome to Bishop Edwin Holt Hughes at 7 o'clock this evening on his return to the Chicago area for a second quadrennium. Bishop Hughes will preach, the Suburban Male quartet will sing and there will be other features of interest. The morning service will begin at 9:30 and be led by the Rev. F. F. Farmiloe; at 10:30 Prof. Edmund D. Soper of Duke university, Durham, N. C., will preach; at 2:30 the preacher will be Dr. Charles A. Tindley, pastor of the Tindley Temple, Philadelphia, Pa. The children's meeting at 1:30 p. m. will be in charge of Mrs. Georgia Coyne and Leo Montgomery. At 6 p. m. the Young People's service will be led by the Rev. Charles H. Draper.

Tomorrow is Preachers' day and the Rev. Dr. Horace G. Smith will preside. At 10:30, at the morning service, Bishop Edwin L. Lee, Malaya and Philippines area, will preach and the Chicago Methodist Preachers' quartet will sing. At 12:30 the pastors of Rock river conference will be served a complimentary luncheon. The annual meeting of the campmeeting association will take place at 1:30 p. m. At 3 o'clock Dr. Charles A. Tindley will again preach and at the evening service at 8 o'clock the preacher will be Prof. Edmund D. Soper.

The following Chicago districts will hold special days with picnic dinners in the grove: Chicago northern district, Tuesday; Chicago western, Wednesday; Chicago southern, Thursday. Friday will be woman's day: at 10:30 a. m. the Woman's Home Missionary society will hold its anniversary; at 1:30 p. m. the Deaconess society and at 2:30 the Woman's Foreign Missionary society.

In separate buildings in different parts of the grounds will be found the Norwegian-Danish section and the Swedish section. The Rev. S. Fosdel, district superintendent, will have charge of the Norwegian-Danish meetings and the Rev. Eric P. Swan, district superintendent, of the Swedish meetings. The Rev. A. E. Peterson, Kansas City, Mo., evangelist, will preach every evening during the encampment in the Swedish tabernacle.

Luther leaguers, the young people of the Michigan synod from points in Northern Indiana and Michigan, will meet in their annual convention at the Grace Lutheran church, Syracuse, Ind., today and tomorrow. This evening the opening sermon will be preached by the Rev. W. C. Zimmer of South Bend, Ind., and Clarence D. Dittmer, national president of the Luther League of America, will also make an address. The convention will close with a banquet at which the Rev. F. W. Otterbein, pastor of the North Austin English United Lutheran church of Chicago, will be the principal speaker. Other speakers will be the Rev. A. H. Keck, D. D., South Bend, Ind.; the Rev. R. J. Wolf, Philadelphia, Pa.; and Miss Phyllis Glenn, who represents the Oesterlin Orphan Home, Springfield, O., for the benefit of which a check from the Luther leaguers will be presented to her.

Immediately following on Tuesday and continuing until Sunday evening, July 15, the Lutheran summer school will be held at Lake Wawasee, near Syracuse, Ind. This gathering attracts large numbers of Lutherans from Michigan, Indiana and Kentucky and the daily program provides lectures on Bible study, missionary activities, Luther league work and pastoral problems.

On the lecture staff from Chicago will be found the Rev. F. W. Otterbein of the North Austin church, and Miss Carrie Anderson of the Lutheran Bible School of Chicago. Others prominent on the program are: Dean L. H. Larimer, Hamma Divinity school, Springfield, O., the Rev and Mrs. G. C. Leonard, missionaries from Africa, now Indianapolis, Ind.; the Rev. R. J. Wolf, Philadelphia, Pa.; the Rev. J. C. Finefrock, missionary from India; Prof. F. H. McNutt, Wittenberg college, Springfield, O., and Mrs. W. C. Stump, Pontiac, Mich.

Next Sunday, July 15, will be a great Lutheran rally day at which the Rev. H. M. Bannen, D.D., of Rockford, Ill., will be the preacher at the morning and afternoon services. Dr. R. D. Wheadon will preach at the sunrise service. Dr. A. H. Keck of South Bend, president of the Michigan synod, will have general charge.

This afternoon at 2:30 the corner stone of St. Victor church at Calumet City, 152d street and Harsch avenue, will be laid. The parish was founded by His Eminence Cardinal Mundelein, April, 1925. A temporary building was erected and the first mass celebrated on May 21, 1925. The community has grown so rapidly that the building now to be erected is to have a seating capacity of 1,000. It will be of brick with stone trim and red tile roof.

John R. Mott, LL.D., has resigned from the Young Men's Christian association and will become the president of the International Missionary council. Dr. Mott has served the Y. M. C. A. forty years. During the war he directed the expenditure of nearly $200,000,000 for the men engaged in war, and prisoners. In recognition of his work the American government awarded him a distinguished service medal and he was decorated by Italy, France, Poland, Greece and Japan. The International Missionary council recently met at Jerusalem, where he was the chief executive.

It is announced that Dr. Charles W. Gilkey, after a pastorate of nineteen years at the Hyde Park Baptist church, has resigned and becomes dean of the University of Chicago chapel this fall. Dr. Gilkey has been for some time professor of preaching at the Divinity school of the university. He was graduated at Harvard college and at Union Theological seminary, New York.

The New York Times has recently in its magazine section given a symposium of 19 leading thinkers of America on the subject of immortality. Ten of these were ministers and all affirmed their belief in the doctrine. Of the others four announced themselves as agnostic: John Dewey, David Starr Jordan, W. E. B. Du Bois and Upton Sinclair. The following affirm their belief: Robert A. Millikan, Frank P. Walsh, Charles P. Thwing, Clarence A. Little, Mary E. Woolley and Sherwood Eddy. Only Clarence Darrow, criminal lawyer of Chicago, positively denies immortality.

[Walinger Photo.]

The Rt. Rev. Msgr. O'Brien, pastor of old St. John's church and president of the Catholic Church Extension society, will celebrate his silver jubilee of ordination to the priesthood on Wednesday at the old St. John's church, 18th and Clark streets. Following his 25th anniversary mass, he will spend the rest of his day at his desk in his office in the Lemoyne building, 180 North Wabash avenue.

Msgr. O'Brien has taken a unique way to choose his own present. It is the custom to give priests who celebrate a silver jubilee a gift of some character. Msgr. O'Brien's request is that every friend of his send him $3 for a new subscription to the Extension magazine, which is the official organ of the Home Missionary society, the Catholic Church Extension society and has reached a total list of 300,000 subscribers. Msgr. O'Brien's aim is 500,000. Therefore, his request is not a personal one, but for the extension of the church.

A few steps in Msgr. O'Brien's upward career are as follows: Ordained to the priesthood on July 11, 1903, by the late Archbishop Quigley; Dec. 1, 1907, assigned to assist Father Kelley in the work of church extension. For nearly twenty years he served the Church Extension society in every capacity until he was unanimously elected president, Nov. 11, 1925, having been previously nominated by Pope Pius in March.

He was the first Catholic priest to receive honors from the pope at the hands of Cardinal Mundelein. In 1924 His Eminence Cardinal Mundelein appointed Msgr. O'Brien pastor of old St. John's church, which, under his direction, has been entirely renovated and redecorated and has taken on a new lease of life.

Many ministers are today preaching their last sermons until September, and leave at once for their vacations. A few churches discontinue services during the summer months, but a large number have made adequate provision for the maintenance of the Sunday services during their absences. Among these are St. Paul's-by-the-Lake, Rogers Park, the Rev. Charles T. Hull, rector, whose pulpit will be occupied by the Rev. Clinton B. Cromwell, rector of St. Andrew's church, Peoria; St. James' church, Cass and Huron streets, Dr. Duncan H. Browne, rector, whose pulpit will be filled at the 11 a. m. service in July by the Rt. Rev. Ernest V. Shayler, bishop of Nebraska; the First Congregational church, Oak Park, Dr. Albert W. Palmer, pastor, members of the faculty of the Chicago Theological seminary until Sept. 2 will supply; the Temple Mizpah, Rogers Park, Dr. Jacob Singer, rabbi; the First Presbyterian church, 64th street and Kimbark avenue, Dr. William Henry Boddy, pastor, whose pulpit will be occupied every Sunday until his return Sept. 9 by leading theological professors and ministers. Dr. Singer will deliver two lectures each at the University of Nebraska in Lincoln and at the University of Colorado in Boulder while on his vacation in the west. Dr. Boddy is on the program of the Chautauqua assembly, Chautauqua, N. Y., for morning and afternoon addresses, July 22 to 27, and speaks before the national student council of the Y. M. C. A. at Lake Geneva, Wis., Aug. 17.

For a church to lose a minister and a church secretary at one fell stroke is unusual, and in the case of the Lake View Presbyterian church, it is interesting. On Monday evening the Rev. Emerson O. Houser, pastor of the church for the last eight years, married Miss Helen M. Jones, daughter of Lawrence C. Jones, 3553 Reta avenue, the secretary of the church, and the occasion was a church wedding. The brothers of the groom had a special part in the fact that the Rev. Charles M. Houser performed the ceremony and the second brother, S. O. Houser, business manager of the Chicago Y. M. C. A., took the part of best man. The church presented the fortunate couple a complete set of solid silver at the reception which followed the ceremony. The bridal pair is spending their honeymoon at Glacier National park during July and at a reunion of the Houser family they will spend the month of August at Brookdale, Colo.

The Rev. Mr. Houser has been appointed one of three associate secretaries of the general council of the Presbyterian church, with headquarters at 156 Fifth avenue, New York City. In September he will take up a temporary residence in Indianapolis, Ind., for three months, after which he will go to Pittsburgh Pa., for the next three months in the prosecution of his new office. Thus the pulpit of the Lake View Presbyterian church is vacant.

On account of the growing strength of the sisters of the diocese, His Eminence Cardinal Mundelein has appointed four priests a vicars general pro Monialibus, for the spiritual guidance of the nuns. This week the announcement of the resignation of the Rt. Rev. Msgr. Francis A. Rempe, P. A., has been made as vicar general and the following are the four priests who will carry on his work: The Rev. Stanislaus Bona, D. D., pastor of St. Casimir church; the Rev. Francis J. Magner, pastor of St. Mary's church, Evanston; the Very Rev. A. Pelletier, S. S. S., pastor of Notre Dame church; the Very Rev. John Ilg, O. F. M., of St. Augustine friary, 51st street.

There has just been issued from the Abingdon Press "The Life of Edward Rector," a biography of De Pauw's greatest financial benefactor, by Bishop George R. Grose. It was during the presidency of De Pauw university of Bishop Grose, now of China, that Edward Rector, then a member of the law firm of Rector, Hibben, Davis and Macaulay of Chicago, became interested in De Pauw through the close friendship of Roy O. West, president of the board of trustees, also of Chicago.

Mr. Rector has given De Pauw more than four million dollars. Two and one-half million of this was used to establish the Rector Scholarship foundation, which pays the tuition fees for more than 500 young men graduates of commissioned high schools and who "rank high in character and excell in scholarship."

Last year there was an enrollment of 532 Rector scholars, representing 667 high schools in 84 counties of Indiana, and high schools of 15 other states and two foreign countries.

One of the important changes in the Methodist officiary is the election at the General conference at Kansas City in May of Dr. W. B. Farmer who will come to Chicago as corresponding secretary of the Board of Pensions and Relief of the Methodist Episcopal church. Dr. Joseph B. Hingeley, who has been for many years corresponding secretary, will now become general counselor and research secretary of the Board. He will codify the pension laws of the Methodist Episcopal church and rulings thereon; he will also be engaged in the preparation of a comprehensive historical statement concerning the pension movement in the church, a collection of data concerning American missionaries in foreign lands, looking toward future pension arrangement and investigation of matters regarding the pension and relief of supply pastors. The work will occupy the next four years.

The Board of Home Missions in the United Church of Canada, composed of the merger of the Congregational, Methodist and Presbyterian churches, reports that during the last two years the church has occupied more than 1,000 points in new mission territory in Canada. The board has expended more than $1,125,000 annually. During these two years 375 fields have become self-supporting, and by a rearrangement of fields and amalgamation with former competitive home mission charges, rendered possible by the union of the churches, 65 charges have reached self-support the last year, while 32 additional charges have gone off the home mission fund by normal growth and the prosperity of the country.

The pulpit of the Lake View Presbyterian church, Broadway and Addison street, will be filled today by the Rev. Frank M. McKibben, instructor in summer conferences under the auspices of the International School of Religious Education, and occupying the chair of Religious Education in the University of Pittsburgh, Pa. On Wednesday evening at 8 o'clock he will lecture on the subject, "The Scope and Significance of Religious Education," at the Lake View Presbyterian church, to which the public is invited, and on Wednesday, July 18, he will deliver the second lecture on the subject, "Essentials to Success in Church Schools."

THE ARMCHAIR PLAYGOER

By Fanny Butcher.

AT RAVINIA.

TOMORROW night "Faust" will be sung again, and if you didn't read Goethe's "Faust" a week or so ago, when it was sung before, do not miss it this time. It is one of the greatest of all epic poems, and is written on a theme which was one of the legendary ones of the middle ages, when bartering one's soul for one's desires was looked upon as a perfectly possible transaction.

"La Bohême," which will be sung on Thursday evening, uses Murger's famous tale of Bohemian life in Paris as its foundation, although only the plot is used, and the book of the opera was not written by Murger, who, poor dear, was long dead when the opera appeared in 1896. His "Scenes de la Vie de Boheme" was dramatized during his lifetime, however, and when he was 26 years old he himself took the part of Rodolphe in a production of it in Paris. The novel in translation is called "Bohemian Life," and is one of the French classics.

On Friday "Romeo and Juliet" will be given, with, of course, Shakespeare's tragedy as the book of the opera. If Shakespeare wasn't too much ruined for you when you were in school and had to read, and dissect, his immortal plays, or even if he was, read "Romeo and Juliet" just as if you were discovering a great drama, and you will find that it has more thrills than most of the modern thrillers, and more beauty than all of the modern plays of love tied together with enormous box office receipts. It is the perennial love story. It has more quotable lines of ecstasy than any other single piece of writing about the grand passion. It is the peak of portrayal of the magic of adolescent love. It is one of the great tragedies of all literature.

The two operas to be sung on Saturday, "Pagliacci" and "Cavalleria Rusticana," both have literary backgrounds. The plot of "Cavalleria Rusticana" was taken from a tale by the famous Sicilian novelist, Verga. The words of "Pagliacci," as well as the music, were written by Leoncavello, but it is the traditional Punchinello, Harlequin, and Columbine triangle, which has been, the basis of so many dramas, "Columbine" by Reginald Arkell, "Prunella" by Granville Barker, and lately "He Who Gets Slapped" by Andreyev, and the moving picture "Laugh, Clown, Laugh." They all, and many other delicate and tragic plays, are eithers sons or step-sons of the same traditional play which forms the play within the drama of "I Pagliacci." Read some of them and trace the literary relationship—it is an amusing pastime.

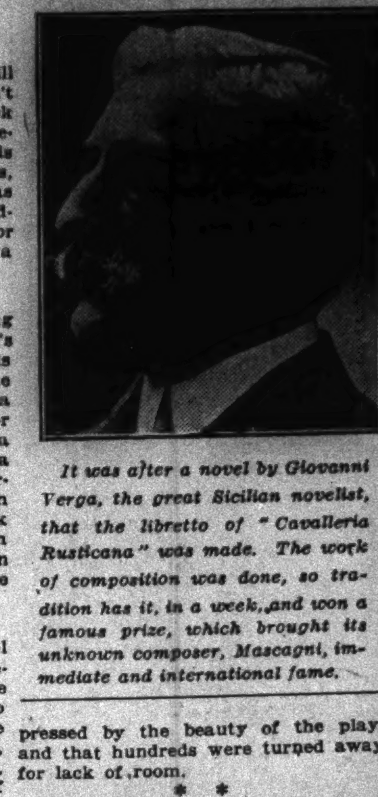
IN ENGLAND.

I must tell you immediately that I was wrong when I said that John Masefield's "The Coming of Christ," which was published a few weeks ago, would probably be a play for armchair playgoers only. When you read it you can't imagine it's being produced, but produced it has been, in Canterbury cathedral. Current newspaper accounts, just reaching us, say that the audience was deeply impressed by the beauty of the play, and that hundreds were turned away for lack of room.



It was after a novel by Giovanni Verga, the great Sicilian novelist, that the libretto of "Cavalleria Rusticana" was made. The work of composition was done, so tradition has it, in a week, and won a famous prize, which brought its unknown composer, Mascagni, immediate and international fame.

ELMER GANTRY DRAMATIZED.

A dramatic version of Elmer Gantry has lately had its first presentation in Cleveland. It was made by Patrick Kearney, and it is said to be headed for New York in the fall. They say it is a highly sensational play. For the first act the audience is considered as assisting at a revival meeting, with numerous actors planted beside you never can tell whom. In the Cleveland presentation four women dressed in white blew trumpets and started a revival meeting in front of the theater. Can't you just picture that on Broadway?

PUBLISHED.

Eugene O'Neill is probably now on his way to Russia, where "Lazarus Laughed" is to be produced by the incomparable Moscow Art theater. It had its American première on the Pacific coast in the Pasadena Community Playhouse, not the first time that an O'Neill play has had its first performance at the hands of a little theater. His first plays were written for the Provincetown Players when they were just as eagerly amateurs as the most ardent of them. The Pasadena production was, according to the critics, a great feat (as it would be. The play seems almost unproducible.) It was directed by Gilmor Brown and Miss Lenore Shanewise. Miss Shanewise was once of our town. She went to college with the editor of this column, has a natural genius for the stage, and but for a modesty so ingrown that it has kept her from even trying to act professionally probably would have been one of the great actresses of our day. She has in her shy way devoted herself to production. Incidentally, she is almost the only person I ever heard "read" that I didn't want to hitch a pair of roller skates on and start toward the electric chair.

Best Plays

Send us a letter telling about the best play you have ever seen and we'll pay you $1 if we print it. Address Best Plays, Chicago Tribune.

The Second Chance.

The play which stands out in my memory is Barrie's "Dear Brutus." The beauty, the lovely fancy, the fine teaching of this play are to me, unforgettable.

The magic of that midsummer eve, the beauty of the depths of the wood, the enchantment of the moonlight, and most beautiful and yet saddest of all, Dearth with his lovely daughter Margaret, the might-have-been, will always linger in my mind.

Much of the meaning of the play is revealed in Barrie's delightful whimsical way, by sparkling dialogue, and by subtle characterization which unmistakably shows us our own pathetic, and some times ridiculous weaknesses and vanities.

Would we all be different if we had a second chance? Could we make more of a second opportunity than the first? Has fate really made us what we are? Through the characters of the play we learn that "what really plays the dickens with us is something in ourselves"—that only the very brave would be essentially different, even with a second chance!

Memories of Forbes Robertson.

The best play I have ever seen was "The passing of the Third Floor Back," by Jerome K. Jerome, in which Forbes Robertson played so wonderfully. It will always stand in my memory as one of the finest sermons ever preached.

Although there was but one scene throughout, a plain second rate boarding house, the wonderful personality of Forbes Robertson as he transformed characters in that humble home, and finally said "Adieu," leaving the chair by the fireside vacant, with only the after-glow shining across it, can never be effaced from my memory.

G. W.

For the Children.

About twenty years ago when I was a small child I saw a play that will last in my memory longer than any play I shall ever see. It was Maeterlinck's "Bluebird." The children in it were so adorable and so earnest in their parts they carried off the whole audience with them in their search for the Bluebird of Happiness.

The story itself is sweet and appealing and so worthwhile, but not lacking in humor with such characters as Milk, Bread, Sugar, Water, Fire, and the dog and cat, Tylo and Tylette. It stimulated the imaginations of child and adult alike.

I wish there were more such wholesome plays for children today.

R. M. S.

Arliss at His Best.

George Arliss in "Old English" did some of the finest acting I ever saw on the stage. And the play was a perfect vehicle for his talents. The cast was exceptionally fine, too, so that the whole production was memorable.

The meeting of the board of directors in the second act was as British as mutton chops and cold potatoes. And the dinner scene in the last act was marvelously done.

It will be a long time before there is a real successor to "Old English."

The Tenderfoot.

Bob—What happened to the tenderfoot stranger who was here last month?

Texas Pete—O, that poor feller? The second morning he was here he was brushing his teeth with some of that foamy tooth paste, and one of the boys thought he had hydrophoby and shot him.

Something Practical.

A keen eyed mountaineer led his tall son to the country school house. "This yere boy's arter larnin'" he said. "What's yer bill o' fare?"

"Geography, arithmetic, trigonometry," began the schoolmaster.

"That'll do," interrupted the farmer. "Load 'im up well with triggernometry. He's the only poor shot in the family."

Aha!

Fond mother—Guess my girl has changed her mind about tennis. She is evidently going out for something more useful.

Friend—How so?

Fond mother—Now she says she has made the scrub team.

Why Procrastinate with Deafness?

THERE'S ONLY ONE WAY to find hearing, and the health and happiness that go with it. And that's to look for it. Each day that you put off the search is only another lost day of nervous irritation and social embarrassment.

So why not look for hearing today? And why not start the quest in the private consultation rooms of the

New Acousticon

We honestly believe that you will find it there, as so many others have, through the medium of the new and finer Acousticon—a scientific hearing aid with a tiny receiver, or earpiece, no larger than a silver dime.

TEN-DAY FREE TRIAL

Take the instrument home with you if you wish. Test it for ten days. Be sure that it's the sort of hearing aid you've always hoped to find. Learn how clearly, how distinctly it transmits sounds to subnormal ears. Probably you'll keep it, but if you don't you may return it without charge or obligation.

If you find a call impossible, merely send your name and address to Dept 73, for a free home test.

Beware the Balmy Breeze That Burns

Summer motoring, with the soft wind fanning the face, brings roses to cheeks, but it also brings a burned and dried-out skin that wrinkles easily, unless the skin is kept soft and supple with Eptol cream. Make it yourself. Simply mix two ounces of eptol with a half-pint water and two tablespoonfuls glycerine, till it creams. You'll find this an ideal summer cream, both for daytime as a guard against sun and wind, and nighttime as a skin-beautifier. Ask your druggist for eptol.

Annual Event Offers Prizes Totaling $3,000

By Mme. X.

JUST when it was that the horse became a factor in man's life it is hard to say, but it was before any written history that has come down to us. Ancient stone carvings and bas reliefs depict warriors and horses, and oriental potentates astride much adorned steeds. So that it is safe to say that the horse emerged with man from that mysterious borderland beyond which we have only surmise as a guide to instruct us as to the first steps of our original ancestor up from the ape age. No ape ever rode a horse; of that we may be pretty certain.

Ever since man first bestrode a horse the two have come along the broad highway together. Even these motor run days do not separate them, except in highly developed, machine run countries like the U. S. A., where motor cars and motor trucks are superseding horses in most directions as a means of conveyance. But the horse as a means of high class sport, as an appanage of leisure and luxury, as a fourlegged friend and companion, is still a big fact in our lives. Therefore, the announcement of two horse shows, the first at Fort Sheridan and the second at Lake Forest, in the immediate future and close at hand, will interest thousands of people.

At Fort Sheridan.

Fort Sheridan will put on its fourth annual horse show Friday and Saturday, July 13 and 14, under the management and direction of the officers of the post. Col. Perry L. Miles, commanding Fort Sheridan, is chairman of the horse show committee; Capt. William C. Chase is executive officer; Capt. Thomas B. Kennedy is treasurer, and Lieut. Wilmer G. Bennett is secretary.

Walter Palmer of Detroit, and A. S. Thompson of Paducah, Ky., will act as judges. Col. George T. Langhorne and Lieut. Col. Ben Lear Jr., both of the cavalry division of the army, will judge all the military classes.

There will be forty-four classes, for which $3,000 in prizes have been donated, "all in plate," says the announcement, which means, I suppose, trophies that can be taken home and put on the front parlor mantelpiece.

A long list of patronesses beginning with the Mesdames B. F. Affleck, Jacob Baur, Benjamin L. Behr, William McCormick Blair, John Borden and Joseph T. Bowen, and continuing through the alphabet until it concludes with the Mesdames Lawrence H. Whiting, Leander L. Winters, William Wrigley Jr. and Robert E. Wood, escorts the announcement of the event, which will be held on that spacious review field that occupies the central position in Fort Sheridan. There is a roomy grandstand and plenty of parking space for the thousands of automobiles which will convey people to and from what will be a "corking good show," to use the language of those who know.

Notables Are Boxholders.

Among the boxholders, and I believe that all of the boxes have been sold, are:

Mrs. Jacob Baur, Mrs. R. E. Wood, Mrs. W. A. Rafferty, Mrs. Robert R. McCormick, Mrs. Joseph T. Bowen, Mrs. B. L. Behr, Mrs. Samuel Insull, Mrs. William Wrigley Jr., Mrs. Edith Rockefeller McCormick, Mrs. Walter S. Brewster, Mrs. Martin J. Insull, Mrs. Lowell Chapin, Mrs. Leander L. Winters, Mrs. William McCormick Blair, Mrs. Donald T. Ryerson, Mrs. Clarence N. Goodwin, Miss C. Jane Ellwanger, Col. L. J. Owen, Lieut. Col. Morris M. Keck, and Capts. H. L. Harries, William C. Chase, Hans W. Nachtigall, and Arthur M. Cox.

Those who early reserved parking space include Mrs. John Andrews King, Mrs. Frank O. Lowden, Mrs. R. E. Wood, F. P. Hixon, Maj. G. K. Franklin, John F. Jelke Jr., B. L. Behr, and Frederick H. Poole. The morning sessions will begin at 10 o'clock; the afternoon ones at half past one. Luncheon in an airy and capacious military tent will be served by the women of the post under the direction of Mrs. Paul B. Malone, wife of Maj. Gen. Malone, commander of the Fifth army corps. This feast will be a delightful affair and give an opportunity to people along the north shore to become acquainted with the members of the post.

The proceeds from this al fresco luncheon and from the sale of tickets to the show will go to two objects—the Army Relief society and the fund necessary to provide education for the children of the post.

These two objects have an overwhelming importance not generally understood by the public. In fact, if there is any subject on which we Americans are totally and almost hopelessly ignorant it is of the needs of the men who compose our small but highly efficient army and the conditions that surround life in the service. May this p. p. p. be permitted to present a few of the drawbacks to military life as a career in this country?

Life in the Army.

Every man likes to become the head of a household and father of a family. For the officers and soldiers who make up our army every sort of obstacle to this natural desire is put in the way of the accomplishment of this aim.

No matter how peacefully inclined a nation may be, the men who enlist in an army are supposed to undertake a greater life risk than their kind in any other profession. To offset this disadvantage the government is supposed to guarantee to them and their families a permanent care not to be found in other occupations. The widows and orphans of soldiers become the charge of the nation.

I don't know what pension is paid to the families of the men in the line who are killed or otherwise perish in service, but I do know that the wives of officers can look forward to a pension for life, (or until remarriage?) of $30 a month with the additional payment of $3 a month for each child up to the age of 16, after which this Summer Debuts at Newport Growing Gayer Each Year

By Nancy Randolph.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—Having found that summer débuts were the most successful sort of affairs last year, Newport has been gathering a bevy of girls to make their bows at the Rhode Island resort this summer. Last year such notable youngsters as Betty Tailer, who becomes Mrs. Walter Gurnee Dyer this week at Honeysuckle Lodge, the Newport home of the T. Suffern Tallers, Beatrice Goelet Greenough, Edith Cram, and Romaine Bristow formed part of the summer debutante list.

This year, while there will still be merely a handful of girls to make their bows, they will be of equal importance. Indeed, one of the most prominent of next winter's town debutantes made her Newport curtsey last night—Nadejda De Braganza, or more properly, Princess Nadejda De Braganza, since she is the daughter of the late Duc De Braganza, of the Portuguese royal family.

Nadejda is also a daughter of the former Anita Stewart, daughter of William Rhinelander Stewart and sister of William Rhinelander Stewart Jr., recently divorced from Laura Biddle of Philadelphia.

Hundreds Were There.

The country club was the scene of the ball, which was given jointly for Nadejda, by her mother, Princess Miguel De Braganza, and her uncle, Willie Stewart, who seems to have put on quite an avuncular air since Nadejda has so suddenly grown up and demanded the attention that she is getting on all sides.

Every one in Newport was at the De Braganza ball, some four or five hundred guests attending. Prior to the gathering there were scores of dinners throughout the colony. Mrs. William B. Bristow had 40 of the younger people to dine at the Baldwin villa. Dr. and Mrs. George Bolling Lee also gave a dinner for more than a score of guests.

Colored lights made a fairyland of the Casino, and the warmth of the night made the cool of the ocean breeze a thing to be appreciated. Many yachts being in the harbor for the Fourth of July week, resulted in yacht guests arriving also for the De Braganza dance.

Among those present were Betty Tailer and her fiancée, Walter Dyer, Mr. and Mrs. Edson Bradley, Mr. and Mrs. Louise Van Alen, James Van Alen, William H. Vanderbilt, Mr. and Mrs. Frederic Cameron Church, Commodore and Mrs. Arthur Curtiss James, Mrs. J. Francis A. Clark, Mr. and Mrs. Forsyth Wickes, Mr. and Mrs. Willing Spencer, Mr. and Mrs. Peter A. B. Widener, Mr. and Mrs. Herman D. Kountze, and Admiral and Mrs. Cameron McR. Winslow.

Nadejda, however, is not the only girl to make her debut at Newport this summer. Diana Dodge, daughter of Mrs. George D. Widener, will make her bow at a party that Dr. and Mrs. Alexander Hamilton Rice will give later in the month. Mrs. Rice is mother-in-law to Mrs. Widener, and Diana is also a granddaughter of Henry T. Sloane, who is also in Newport at present.

Louise Van Alen, who made such a furore in Palm Beach this last winter, is also to occupy the pedestal with Diana and Nadejda. The daughter of Mrs. James Laurens Van Alen, Louise, is to be sponsored by her brother, James, now the head of the Van Alen house, at a dance to be given at Wakehurst.

Concerts in Full Swing.

The concert season at the Queen City has been in full swing for a week now. Whenever the men get tired of fussing on board the yachts whose white wings mark the blue of the harbor, they can be certain of finding their matrons at the casino, where the afternoon concerts and the pot of tea are the rage this year.

Bailey's, of course, is deserted at the hour of the concerts, and Newport somehow isn't at all feverish about the cocktail hour, so that the close of the concerts at six finds almost every one still sitting and anxious for more.

Tuesday is the big day of the week, for on Tuesday night the Casino theater season opens with Rollo Peters in "Peter Ibbetson." Next week Ina Claire is to appear in "The Last of Mrs. Cheney." With the season lasting for only eight weeks, Newport's regulars are determined not to miss a performance. All the boxes have been subscribed for, and among the newcomers to the subscription lists are Mrs. Paul Fitz Simon, who was absent in South America last summer; Mrs. Henry Clewes, Dr. and Mrs. Alexander Hamilton Rice, and Mrs. Nicholas Brown.

Southampton, always busy in a quiet, lazy way, has been occupied with the American Legion carnival on the Bridgehampton road. Ferris wheels, merry-go-rounds, tombolas, and the inevitable hot dogs marked the carnival as a real summer festival.

WEDDINGS

No wedding or engagement announcement will be published in The Tribune unless it bears the signature, address, and telephone number of a parent of either the bride or the bridegroom. Announcements should reach the society editor not later than the Wednesday morning preceding the Sunday they are to be published.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles S. Dingee of Wilmette announce the marriage on June 23 of their daughter, Leonora, to James Brewster Kimball.

Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Cutting Van Pelt of 6243 St. Lawrence avenue announce the marriage of their daughter, Dorothy Elizabeth, to George Carl Phipps, which took place last Tuesday.

The marriage of Miss Dorothy C. Ertz, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Ertz of 4349 West 21st place, to William F. Roach, son of Mrs. Millie Roach of 3604 Ogden avenue, took place on June 30 at Epiphany church.

Announcement is made by Mrs. Ducie Shure of 1457 East 54th place of the recent marriage of her daughter, Luba, to Bert Nechtow.

NEWS OF CHICAGO SOCIETY

young person need expect nothing more from Uncle Sam.

This is the pension rate that has existed for the last twenty-five years. While the expenses of life in every direction have more than doubled in that period of time, while the taxes of the country have tripled and more in size and the income of the government has reached such figures as to look more like an astronomical report than a financial statement, the men whose lives are supposed to be dedicated to the existence of the nation are receiving the same pay before and after death that they or their predecessors did in the good old days when the cost of living was what now seems absurdly low.

No Schooling Provided.

Fort Sheridan is probably the least well equipped of the posts near large cities. For one thing it has no chapel of any sort where religious services can be held. Nor does it provide any schooling for the children of the post. This the youngsters have to get in nearby villages. For some years they were sent to Highland Park, where the local powers said that their tuition was none of the concern of Highland Park and must be paid for, although the people at the fort used Highland Park as their place of purchase of all supplies required and not attainable at the post. So they, the residents at the fort paid for this tuition.

Then Highwood came into existence, largely because of the neighborhood of Fort Sheridan which used this community for its needs. To the Highwood public schools went the children of the post, still paying for their schooling although the children of every foreign born citizen were educated free from all expense. The fort spent its money in Highwood and when Highwood had a fire it is the post fire department that goes to the aid of Highwood. To pay for the tuition of the children of the soldiers at the post the women in charge of the luncheon booth at the horse show dedicate a part of the proceeds of their enterprise. The rest goes to swell the funds of the Army Relief.

Important Work.

I've written about this society before, but do not mind giving it more space because of its splendid and important work. The latter attribute is evidenced by the fact that it is the only society in which the President of the United States, ex officio, holds the highest position. He is both President of the U. S. A. and of the Army Relief society.

This organization tries in every way in its power to make up in a measure for the tragically inadequate support given the widows and orphans of our army. It collects annually funds from all over the country for this purpose. It is a nationwide enterprise and to it may be sent contributions, not only of money, but of all kinds, which will be distributed carefully and wisely.

Its annual income is in the neighborhood of $80,000, entirely from memberships and voluntary contributions. An annual membership of $5 would be helpful and would not overtax the resources of anybody.

Before I close this diatribe on the trials of being a soldier of Uncle Sam I hasten to say that none of this information came from the post at Fort Sheridan. It is a point of honor and of military discipline among soldiers never to comment on or complain of their condition in life. Any man who takes up soldiering as a calling knows that he thereby abandons all hope of anything in the shape of worldly remuneration or success, and sentences himself and his family to a more austere mode of life than their kind in any other walk of life.

Even if an officer be well to do, he cannot parade the fact among his compeers, but has to live the same sort of life that they do, and so do his wife and children. It is not etiquette to do otherwise.

My information as to conditions came from outside, but from trustworthy sources in no wise connected with the service. And "I haven't told the half of it," either.

So Soon Forgotten.

There are at present stationed at Fort Sheridan a thousand men and eighty officers. These are divided into a battalion of cavalry, a battalion of infantry, and a battalion of artillery. Besides these, during the summer there are the camps of the reserve officers' training camp and the citizens' military training camp, so there is plenty of picturesque and interesting life to be seen there. There will be some fine and fancy horsemanship and the show will be well worth your while as a visit, not only to see fine horse flesh, but to inspect one of the most important divisions of our national service.

It is not yet ten years since the bugles sounded the end of the war across the water on Nov. 11, when the world went mad with joy. Do you remember Armistice day? That was the day of greatest emotion that any one then living will probably ever know.

A week after the Fort Sheridan horse show that of Lake Forest will be held, but more of that next week.

A Varied Calendar.

The summer's calendar is a varied and entertaining one, what with the sporting events in all our suburbs, the polo at Lake Forest, the golf and tennis everywhere, and the Saturday evening dances which every country club puts on once a week. Ravinia's open air opera continues to make an ever wider and deeper appeal. How I wish that I could plant in the consciousness of every dweller in this part of the land the tremendous value and high quality of this the most remarkable musical feature to be found anywhere on this globe of ours at this time of the year.

Not Paris, nor London, nor Rome, nor Buenos Aires, nor any German town can equal the work being done up there at Ravinia, twenty miles from the center of Chicago, by Louis Eckstein's company, both in operatic productions and in the concerts that are given three times a week by that assemblage of the greatest musical artists of today in their line. It is the most distinguished thing Chicago gives to the artistic world, because it is unique.

Other cities have splendid grand opera; other cities have fine orchestral bodies; other cities produce large and intelligent audiences, but no other city presents the most renowned artists in the summer time in just such surroundings, in an open pavilion with remarkably perfect acoustics, set in a lovely wood, with a fragrant garden sending forth sweet odors, with the setting sun on one side, the rising moon on the other, and the everlasting stars blinking down from the night sky—that is, they usually do.

This year there have been some redoubtable storms just at the outset of the season which proved the heroic qualities of the whole company, but these are practically all over and we may hope henceforth to have all the above mentioned conditions to add that matchless luster which makes Ravinia so utterly beyond anything of its kind elsewhere.

War Against Mosquito.

Thorough in every direction of activity, the Ravinia people have been going after the anopheles, otherwise known as the "pesky mosquito." Haven't you travelers of the North Shore lines noticed that band of men spraying the wayside along the tracks with oil to exterminate these pests of our summer?

A dozen or more trained experts have been at their task for weeks now, at a cost of more than $11,000 to Ravinia's promoter, Mr. Eckstein.

All along the North Shore this anti-mosquito campaign has been going on since the beginning of May, with the result that, in spite of recent overwhelming and unseasonable rains, there are comparatively few mosquitoes in north shore gardens.

Some ten or more years ago a similarly rainy spring bred such a crop of mosquitoes as made life unendurable in gardens, or on the golf links or on tennis courts. The anti-mosquito war is a campaign that will in time prove to people hereabouts its supreme importance as a summer adjunct, and will make gardens much more of a factor in our daily lives than they are today. Up to now they have been more for show than for daily enjoyment.

When we become accustomed to the fact that we can sit out of doors without discomfort we shall do as they do in other more mosquitoless countries; i. e., pursue our daily avocations in the open air; eating, reading, chatting, playing cards and so forth in our gardens. Then truly shall we know the real joy of summer.

But we hereabouts will have to rid ourselves also of flies. They have done this in the model communities of Panama, Long Island and New Jersey whence we take our inspiration for the present mosquito war. In those places they screen all stable refuse and other breeding places of flies and are reported to be as free of these unhealthy insects as they are of mosquitoes. They no longer have any use for screened porches near Oyster Bay and neighboring communities, and only keep wire nettings on their windows and doors to keep out errant birds, bees, bats and other things that fly by day or night.

British Envoy to France About to Retire from Office

By La Dauphine.

LORD CREWE'S decision, announced nearly a year ago, to relinquish the post of British ambassador in Paris will soon take effect. As ornamental as the late Robert Bacon of the American embassy, Lord Crewe has always showed just enough aloofness, and consciousness of his rôle as a grand seigneur, to keep him from being uproariously popular. Nobody would think of slapping him on the back and calling him "Bob." The Thursday afternoon receptions at the embassy, while cordial, are not exactly Bacchanalian orgies.

When, to his native British reserve is added the full weight of his officialdom, Lrod Crewe almost makes us think of the Englishman who, after surveying for a long time in Washington the portrait of Daniel Webster, exclaimed: "No man could be as important as Webster looks!" When, for example, Lord Crewe rises from a large dinner party at the Ritz and waits majestically, drawn up to his full height, for the swanlike Conseulo Vanderbilt Marlborough Balzan to pass before him, those dining at other tables feel that they are assisting at a veritable affair of state.

It is only just to remark, however, that Lord Crewe's hauteur is largely external. In his youth, like Disraeli, he was delivered of a poem which won the prize at Trinity college, Cambridge, and about 1890, instead of following the tradition of late Victorian Liberal statesmen and doing a life of Cromwell or translations from Horace, he published a volume of "Stray Verses."

Another of Lord Crewe's hobbies is collecting autographs of historic personages, and of adding to his treasures of books and paintings at Crewe Hall in Cheshire or at Crewe House in London.

Visited America.

At the age of 17, Robert Offley Ashburton Milnes, as Lord Crewe was then known, visited the United States. His father, who had been created Lord Houghton in 1863, was the well known literateur and poet, Richard Monckton Milnes, classmate at Trinity of that Arthur Hallam for whom Tennyson wrote "In Memoriam," friend of Carlyle and Matthew Arnold, supporter of Gladstone. He came to know intimately perhaps more celebrities than any man in Europe. He had already played the host to Emerson and Longfellow when they came to England.

At the time Lord Houghton came to America, the visit of so distinguished a Britisher was rare. It aroused all that social emulation—not to say heartburning—which America can experience when an outstanding lion comes for entertainment. Lord Houghton and his handsome son had a perpetual round of feasting. Gifted with humor, great admiration for America, and a marked talent for after dinner speaking, Lord Houghton's stay was a kind of triumphal progress.

He had expected, two years earlier, as did friends on both side of the Atlantic, that Gladstone would put him on the commission to adjust the Alabama claims. Lord Houghton's failure to get this appointment, so far from diminishing, only increased his remarkable American popularity. He marveled before Niagara; in Chicago, he not only felt amazement at the growth of a city which had been founded within his own lifetime, but was especially interested in the New England church, to which he had contributed a stone from the old meeting house at Bawtry. There his Yorkshire ancestors had lived, and there such leading Puritans as Brewster and Bradford met and worshiped before starting for Plymouth Rock. Lord Houghton contrived to reach St. Louis a day in advance of his son, now Lord Crewe, who had lingered in Illinois to engage in a chicken hunt—not in the Lake Michigan metropolis but on the prairies.

A Garbled Interview.

In one midwest city, after Lord Houghton had gone to bed, his old valet woke him up to announce that a newspaper man insisted on seeing him. Lord Houghton, who was courtesy itself, soon learned that the reporter desired his views on the American press.

"What strikes me is the violence of language here toward political opponents. This morning I read a description of President Grant as a drunkard, a liar, and a thief. Even if he were all that—which I do not admit—wouldn't his opponents show more respect by remembering that he heads your nation and represents it in the eyes of the world, and that an attack upon him looks like an attack on the republic?"

The next morning, on opening the paper, he found first a highly colored description of how he looked in bed. This followed: "Lord Houghton is not inclined to admit that President Grant is a drunkard and a thief; and he thinks that, even if he is, the fact should not be published to the world in the newspapers."

ENGAGED

MISS VILENE KATHRYN MacDONALD.

John Roger MacDonald of Flint, Mich., announces the engagement of his daughter, Vilena Kathryn, to Eugene M. Zuber of Detroit and Chicago, son of Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Zuber of 6743 East End avenue. The wedding will take place early in September.

MISS BERNICE BUNKER.

Mrs. Frederick Albert Petrie of 3000 Sheridan road announces the engagement of her daughter, Bernice Bunker, to Lieut. Howard Graham Bunker, son of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Graham Bunker of South Bend, Ind. The wedding will take place Aug. 29.

American Students Fill Paris Courses

By May Birkhead

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]
[Copyright: 1928: By The Chicago Tribune].

PARIS.—[Special Correspondence.]—The Franco-American educational experiment, supported by a group of wealthy Americans, which was launched here some months ago, may now be termed an assured success. Like all living programs, certain modifications were introduced which cannot but enhance its interests. This undertaking is the development of Gen. Charles H. Sherrill's idea to provide American students with instruction in Paris in fine and applied arts. The winter courses in this movement, launched here last January under the auspices of New York university, now are under the active resident direction of Charles Chasse. So enthusiastic and widespread was the response that a large extension is being arranged for these courses.

During the last few months instruction has been given entirely in English, and concerned chiefly courses in history or art in the Louvre and visits to leading establishments, where jewel setting, bronze founding, dressmaking, and other examples of the applied arts were seen.

Gen. Sherrill presided last week at the opening exercises of the summer school held at the Louvre.

One of the big social events of the week was given by Ganna Walska McCormick at the Theatre des Champs Elysees, to celebrate her taking final possession of the house which her husband purchased at the time of their marriage and presented to her as a wedding gift. While the famous diva actually has owned the building now for several years, she has been unable until recently to buy off the lease.

Mrs. Ogden Armour is among the prominent Chicagoans now in the capital.

The Feminine Realm

Mlle. Marcelle Francois, second deputy prefect of police, is Paris' first woman police official.

Mrs. Ida M. Walker, a Norton, Kas., farm woman, is seeking a seat in congress from her district.

Women in the United States now are showing great skill in the difficult work of cutting diamonds.

The women in India have lately obtained the privilege of voting for the all-India legislative assembly.

Women are not entitled to sit in the Canadian senate under the terms of the British North American act.

Prizes for Paintings May Be Bait or Reward

Texas Enthusiast Lures Artists by Generous Gifts

By Eleanor Jewett.

A MEMBER of the Palette and Chisel club, which is an extremely alive organization of Chicago artists, has taken exception to the praise which was given the Chicago Art institute two weeks ago in the statement that the sum total of prizes offered in the museum during a year was larger than the sum total offered in any other American institute in any one year. The Palette and Chisel club member claims that Texas is far more generous than is Illinois in its efforts for artists. According to his suggestion:

"The San Antonio [Texas] Art league offers $31,000 at their annual exhibition, which is about double the amount offered by the institute [Chicago] for all the exhibitions held throughout the entire year. The first prize at the San Antonio exhibition is $7,500."

The situation in Texas is peculiar, unless I am very much in the wrong. As I understand it, last year a novel exhibit was arranged there at the instigation more or less of one extremely wealthy oil man. This man has a passion for Texas and things Texan. He thinks and sees and speaks of Texas flowers and Texas cottonwoods and Texas plains in superlatives. To incite painters to paint Texas he has instituted an annual exhibition of canvases depicting the state. He has endowed the exhibit with huge prize awards in money. He is trying to make the Texas art exhibitions, at least those with which he is connected, so interesting in the opportunities offered that the biggest men who are painting today will go to Texas and paint Texas.

That is my firm conviction. The San Antonio prize list is out of the purse of one man; the Art institute prize list is made up from several benefactors. The San Antonio prizes are bait (but this is not suggested in a hostile spirit) and the Art institute prizes are rewards. Still, it would do the Chicago Art institute no harm to have more and larger rewards. Perhaps some year an Illinois enthusiast may spread the bread of exhibits with the honey of enormous notes.

Off on Vacations.

Meanwhile this is a time of year when vacations come to the fore. The Art institute art school staff, those members of which are not concerned with the activities of the summer session, are going or have gone east, west, south and north. Antonin Sterba is enjoying a year's leave of absence and for the greater part of that time he plans to paint in California. Karl A. Buehr will be in California, too, at least for the summer, for he has undertaken to teach in the art school of the university of California at Berkeley, the next few weeks.

Helen Gardner will start a year abroad with a prolonged visit to Italy. Miss Gardner has written an extremely readable and instructive book on art. Katherine Stilwell, Albin Polasek and Ernest Detterer are spending the summer in Europe. Mr. Polasek might be said to be just back from there, for surely it was just this last year that we heard of him working in Poland and later busying himself in a studio in Paris.

John G. Wilkins will teach for two weeks in Cleveland, then go on to New York, where he will give instruction in design in the Grand Central School of Art. Elmer Forsberg and Lloyd H. Cowan have planned a summer in northern Michigan. Bailey's Harbor, Wisconsin, is claiming again Frederic V. Poole and F. DeForrest Schook, who will continue for another season their interesting summer school.

Many Artists Go West.

Miss Jessie Lacey will go to California and Matilda Vanderpoel will be with her friends and associates at Gold Hill, Colorado. Alfonso Iannelli will teach in Colorado. Thomas Wood Stevens, who is now in Seattle, will settle himself shortly in his pueblo home in Santa Fé. Mr. Stevens is head of the Art institute drama department. Much of the excellence of the playing in the Goodman theater each winter is due to his leadership and his enthusiasm.

Speaking of the Goodman theater, its manager, Cloyd Head, will spend the summer in Santa Fé. Laura Van Pappelendam is planning to take her studio automobile [it, or another, has traversed nearly every inch of the west, capturing paintings at every turn] into Mexico and many will be the sketch her travel book will show upon her return to civilization. Miss Van Pappelendam is an inveterate painter.

Louise Perrett will summer in Connecticut and Mary C. Scovel will go to Boothbay Harbor in Maine. Ruth Hutchins will teach in the Berkshires and Allen Philbrick will go to his summer cottage at White Lake, Michigan.

This runs that stream of information dry, but a last trickle must flow to wish every one a perfectly glorious summer—with less rain and lots of sun.

Portraits Sent to Atlanta.

The portraits of four prominent Chicagoans, lent to the Chicago Association of Commerce by the Art institute, will be sent to Atlanta, Ga., for exhibition in the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce where space in their new building has been prepared for them. The portraits are of Dr. Frank G. Logan, honorary vice president of the Chicago Art institute, painted by Louis Betts and of the late Edward B. Butler, trustee of the Art institute, also painted by Betts, and of Benjamin F. Ferguson, painted by Ernest L. Ipsen, a New England painter, and of George B. Harris, painted by Adeline Munn of New York.

Mr. Ferguson is notable for the reason that aside from his other generous activities he bequeathed one million dollars to the city of Chicago [presumably] or it may have been the Art institute, the principal of which is known as the Ferguson fund and the income derived from it is to be used and has been used in the erection of enduring statuary in Chicago's parks and boulevards. One wonders if the fund sponsored the Goethe statue or the Theodore Thomas memorial—that stiff concoction of Polasek's brain?

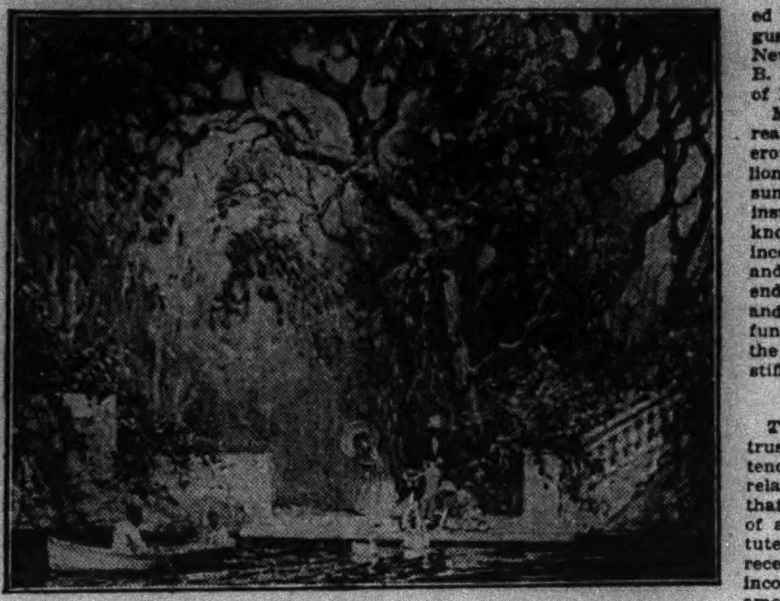
Harris Gift to the Institute.

There is a difference between a trust and a gift. The following sentence points into intriguing paths. It relates to Mr. Harris and says of him that he left, on his death, the sum of a million dollars to the Art institute, which is the largest bequest ever received by the museum. Probably the income from this sum does an infinite amount of good in the conduct and affairs of the institute. If left unqualified, there is no end to the possibilities that may be achieved through its wise expenditure and wise investment. It might be interesting to know what so far the Harris gift has done for the museum.

Cablegrams from London announce the acquisition by the Art institute of the famous painting "Au Moulin Rouge," by Toulouse-Lautrec. The painting was purchased by Frederic Clay Bartlett with the intention of adding it to the Birch-Bartlett collection of Modern French paintings that already engages the walls of one gallery on the second floor of the Art institute. It will be shown in New York before being hung in the Chicago museum.

Eva Kemeny opened an exhibit of her etchings, drawings and water colors at the Playhouse last Sunday. She is a Hungarian and has been in America but a few months. She has had successful exhibits of her work in Budapest and in California. The Playhouse lounge is the gayer for Miss Kemeny's art.



"THE LAGOON," by Glen Sheffer. This pleasantly cool painting was one which was greatly enjoyed by those who saw Mr. Sheffer's one-man show at the Palette and Chisel club some time ago. Since then Mr. Sheffer has been represented in a number of exhibitions both in and out of Chicago. His paintings are noted for their delicacy of construction and purity of color. He might almost be called a romantic, a painter who saves the dreams which otherwise might be trampled underfoot.

NEWS OF CHICAGO SOCIETY

with charming illustrations by her daughter, Sylvia Shaw Judson. From the start of the day, in the "Wake-Up-Song," the small atom of humanity is carried through to the "Here-I-Am "Dark Song." Here's the "Heard in the Bath Song."

"I heard her say my hair would curl,
I cried upon the spot;
'Twill be the business of my day
To see that it does not.
I'll rub my head from side to side
On pillow, tub, and knee.
So when she comes to comb my curls
There'll be no hair on me."

Mrs. Shaw and her youngest daughter, Miss Frances Theodora Shaw, are motoring in England now, while Mrs. Judson, co-partner in the creation of this epic of baby life, is a recently arrived member of the colony of young matrons who are making Annisquam, Mass., their summer headquarters. Others there are Mrs. Aime Millet and Mrs. John Mechem.

This Hurrying World.

How quickly we are forgotten in this hurrying world! Wallace Wakem, who died suddenly a week ago today, was formerly a well known figure in Chicago's social and sport loving world. He used to be a great fancier of high class dogs, and had much knowledge of horses. He was also much seen in social circles, and was a member of a formerly conspicuous family. One sister is Mrs. George Higginson, now of Lenox, but once prominent in social circles here. Another sister married Roy Johnston, son of the late William Johnston, a conspicuous personality years and years ago. Another sister married Max MacMurry, a former Chicagoan.

Mr. Wakem's wife was Miss Mabel Johnston, a daughter of William Johnston. Yet today Mr. Wakem's death does not evoke even a brief obituary on the same page with the radio announcements. Nothing was there but a curt mention for two days in the death notice column telling that he died suddenly and would be buried at Oakwoods on Tuesday.

Verily man's life is as the blade of grass that cometh up and is cut down. Yet Wallace Wakem once had friends, and many of them, too. But some years ago he retired from any part in social life and led the life of a hermit in his apartment on East Pearson street. He left a wife and two children, Selden Wakem and Mrs. Madeline Wakem Banes.

MRS. GEORGE FREDERICK CHURCH.
[Walinger Photo.]

Mrs. George Frederick Church was, before her marriage, Miss Catherine Crane Harrison, daughter of A. H. Harrison of Deerfield, Ill. The ceremony took place at the Briergate Country club and was followed by a reception and dance.

Women the World Over

All elective offices open to men in the United States are equally open to women.

Unionized artists' models and mannequins in Chicago are demanding a wage of $3 an hour.

Forty years ago there were 470 divorces annually per million of population. Now there are 1,540 divorces per million.

Within four years after being graduated in law, Miss Lelia Russell has advanced to the position of United States assistant attorney and president of the Florida League of Women Voters.

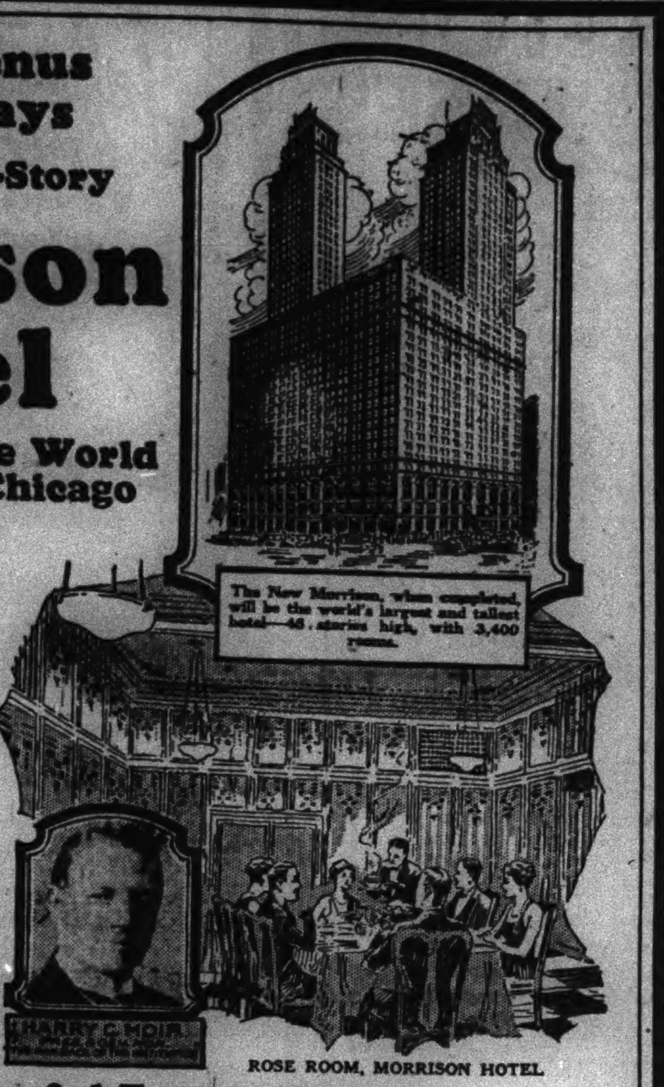
Tasteful Menus For July Days

At Chicago's 46-Story

Morrison Hotel

Tallest Hotel in the World Most Central in Chicago



The New Morrison, when completed, will be the world's largest and tallest hotel—46 stories high, with 3,400 rooms.

ROSE ROOM, MORRISON HOTEL

MANY of the banquets and receptions given in July at the Morrison Hotel show a more picturesque character than any held at other seasons of the year.

The Artistic Rose Room

Through long experience in making preparations for all types of formal and informal affairs, the exact conditions are arranged to suit each party. By means of movable partitions, the size of the Rose Room and other rooms is adapted to the number of guests present.

The Wonderful Terrace Garden

The delicious menus served at all these affairs are carefully selected to suit the warm season. They are well in keeping with the traditions which have made the Boston Oyster House and Terrace Garden a proverb with travelers. The latter is equally famous for its brilliant entertainments and superb dance music.

1944 Rooms, $2.50 Up

The singularly low room rates at the Morrison are due to the central location, which makes subrentals so valuable that they pay all the ground rent, and rooms are therefore rented at $2.50 to $5 that would cost $5 to $8 elsewhere.

Every Room With Bath

All rooms are outside with bath, running ice water, bed-head lamp, telephone and Servidor, which assures absolute privacy. Every floor has its housekeeper, and all guests enjoy garage privileges.

The Greatest Two-Week Vacation Trip Ever Offered

Down East

Thru the Switzerland of America

In America's finest Motor Coaches—equipped with washroom and lavatory, high back deep-cushioned seats and ice water containers. The most comfortable and easy riding cars ever built.

If you are fed up on the "usual" tour offerings, here's a two week's vacation trip that will thrill you—it has that romantic "something" we call adventure, it has scenic beauty, real natural scenery, points of historical interest and many other things that no other vacation suggestion has to offer.

Next Tour July 15 and Weekly Thereafter

Every minute will be an interesting one. You'll enjoy the picturesque Irish Hills, the trip across romantic Canada, and your visit to that never-to-be-forgotten wonder Niagara Falls. You'll love the Thousand Islands, the forested ranges of Adirondacks, beautiful Lake Placid and you'll be thrilled with your visit to Ausable Chasm and your trip across Lake Champlain. Your journey thru the Green and White Mountains, over the Mohawk Trail, thru the Berkshires, along the Hudson River on the Storm King Highway, over the Poconos, thru the Delaware Water Gap and Watkins Glen, will provide scenes you'll never forget and things to talk about, for rest of your life.

Then there's a day in Boston—two full days and three glorious nights in New York—with a heavenly night and an enchanted day at Alexandria Bay, and the grand climax—a trip across Lake Erie.

All of these scenic thrills are packed into the greatest vacation trip ever offered, the result of five years' of successful operation and experience.

Sail the Great Lakes THIS SUMMER the Luxurious D&C way

Four Day Cruise to DETROIT via MACKINAC ISLAND

Strs. Eastern States and Western States

No Summer vacation is complete without a lake trip and the Detroit & Cleveland Navigation company would be pleased to help you plan an outing of two, four, six or eight days in the Great Lakes region, and supply you with pictures and descriptions of many pleasant places including Niagara Falls, Mackinac Island, Les Cheneaux Islands, Coryell Islands and St. Ignace.

Automobiles Carried

On your automobile tour plan to avoid the congested highways for a time and include a lake trip on the big D. & C. steamers plying on regular schedules between Chicago, St. Ignace, Detroit and Cleveland; also steamers every night in both directions between Detroit and Cleveland; and between Detroit and Buffalo on the way to Niagara Falls.

Mackinac Island, Detroit, Cleveland

The popular tourist steamers Eastern States and Western States cover the route between Chicago, Mackinac Island, St. Ignace, Detroit and Cleveland, sailing every Thursday, Saturday and Monday at 1:30 p. m., from the Municipal Pier.

Music, Dancing, Golf, Deck Games

This is one of the most delightful Summer tours and traverses the most beautiful sections of the Great Lakes during the daylight hours. Famous meals by chefs who know how. Stopovers permitted at Mackinac Island and all other ports for any period during the season. Various forms of entertainment on shipboard—not a dull moment.

Travel the Great Lakes First.

Spend the week-end at Mackinac Island. Lv. Chicago any Thurs., Sat., Mon., 1:30 p. m. C. T. Ar. 9:30 next morning; Lv. Mackinac Island any Wed., Fri., Sun., 11:30 a. m.; Ar. Chicago 8 next morning; $30 r. t. including all expense on steamers, $16 one way.

To Detroit

Four day tour of the lower lakes to Detroit, $60 r. t., including all expense on steamer; $31 one way.

To Niagara Falls

Chicago to Buffalo and return, $79; including all expenses on steamer; $40.50 one way.

To CLEVELAND

Chicago to Cleveland, Ohio, and return, $71.50; including all expense on steamer; $37 one way.

OVERNIGHT SERVICE

The D. & C. operates steamers every night in both directions between Detroit and Cleveland, $3 one way; $5.50 r.t., meals and berth extra; Steamers City of Detroit III and City of Cleveland III, Lv. 11:30 p. m., Ar. 6:45 a. m.

Detroit and Buffalo, $5 one way; meals and berth extra; Steamers Greater Detroit and Greater Buffalo, the largest of their type in the world, Lv. Detroit 5 p. m., Ar. Buffalo, 8 a. m. Lv. Buffalo, 6 p. m., Ar. Detroit, 9 a. m.

More Plutocrats than Aristocrats Here, a Butler Says!

Rule No. 1 for Saleswomen: "No Flirting"

One Who Runs a Factory Offers Advice.

By Helen Dare

DON'TS for traveling saleswomen:

Don't try to make sales by flirtations.

Don't date your customers.

Don't become masculine.

"The thing to do," said Miss Anna Doetsch as she conducted me through her furniture factory at 1534 Altgeld street, "is to think like a man and act like a woman."

She speaks from an experience of more than ten years. Since her father's death she has carried on in the establishment he founded in a triple capacity—as secretary, treasurer, and active director of the selling organization.

* *

Like a Family Reunion.

But now she was showing me through the big plant—the mill, she calls it—and our tour was a sort of continuous family reunion.

The workmen looked up from their benches and machines and smiled their responses to her greetings. The smiles came from the heart. Many of the older employés had watched Anna grow up from childhood.

"Have you had your tonsils out yet?" she asked one.

"No," he replied, sheepishly.

"Well, you better do it next week. Get it over with while the weather's warm. It isn't so terrible, you know," and she smiled reassuringly as we passed on.

They come to her when they are sick, or in trouble, or in love.

"Yes," she said, "I even play Doris Blake to them."

* *

On Through the Factory.

We paused before a carving machine. Twenty-four needle-like knives whirring in the air to provide solid comfort for the tired business man or the weary housewife. Twenty-four squat little legs, some of them for that new parlor sofa you are going to buy next year, being carved in intricate designs. The operator guides his blunted tool in and out over the pattern and the myriad knives whirr in synchronization to his movements.

Then on to the gluing room, where each part is glued and then clamped together, and the stockroom, where the frames for hundreds of chairs and sofas are piled, looking like so many skeletons.

There were specimens of the Louis Quatorze and Louis Quinze periods, high backed Spanish and plain tuxedo styles, all meant to be overstuffed in the future, but looking quite starved at present.

One chair with arms carved into a lion's head, Miss Doetsch had nicknamed Bernard Shaw, because it looked far more like the lion of English letters than the king of the jungle.

Miss Doetsch is proud of her mill, of its cleanliness, its order, and most of all, of its brisk and busy atmosphere.

"It hurts me to see a factory or mill idle," she said. "During the fuelless days of the war, when we could

A FREAK OF BIRDLAND

A WHITE bluejay sounds all wrong, but that's what Mrs. Ben E. Buttles of 9515 South Robey street has perched on her finger. Whitey is so much a freak that the Lincoln park aviary would like to have him, and the famed Field museum has asked the privilege of stuffing him should he die suddenly. Whitey is a pale and pink-eyed specimen, but he has the crested topknot and saucy manners of his family and the bluejay call. Mrs. Buttles found him in a tree nest in her back yard with a cluster of regular bluejays.

Chicago's Rich Aren't So Good on the Tipping

They Think a Handshake Serves for Cash!

Tradition tells us that butlers never talk of their work, but Miss McLaughlin found some butlers in Chicago who were more than willing to shatter that tradition; and here is the third story of her series, "The Butler Broadcasts."

BY KATHLEEN M'LAUGHLIN.

NEXT time you spend the week end at a multi-millionaire's home, give the butler a handshake if you will, on leaving—but don't imagine you're getting away with anything if that is all you give him. [Nay, nay, the sentiment is not mine, but the butler's!]

For the ancient custom of crossing the palm with silver may have fallen upon evil day in these modern times, wherein what the social code outlines as proper is the least of the worries of those who are "in," but remembrance of the largesse that once was theirs rankles in the bosoms of the serving craft, and tips their tongues with scorn of the ungenerous.

What Butlers Think of Tips.

To tip or not to tip is an individual problem—or privilege, as you will—and concerns me not at all except as it reflects the attitude of the butlers who talked with me about butlering, its assets and its liabilities, and about themselves and their employers.

It remained one of the most amusing episodes of the three interviews, that two of the trio embraced the opportunity to decry the newer type of house guest, who has given up tipping and taken up handshaking insofar as the butler is concerned.

One of the two who mourned has worked only in America. The other has had years of experience in the British Isles and on the continent.

"Why," advised the latter, "of all the people who have stayed at this house while I've been here the last few years, there are only three or four who have given me a tip. There's Mr. M———, who stayed over the week end several times and always gives

Chicago's Rich Aren't So Good on the Tipping

They Think a Handshake Serves for Cash!

me $5 when he leaves; and that young Mr. B——, who doesn't forget me. But the others—

"Well, they just look at me sheepishly and shake hands and say, 'Good-bye, Bush, glad to have seen you again.' They seem to think it's such an honor to shake hands with them you'll forget all about the tip. Really, I don't like to criticize, but it does seem, as long as you've given them service and they've accepted hospitality, they'd at least remember you with whatever they could spare.

They Do Tip in England!

"It wasn't like that in England. Of course, there's no comparison in other things—I mean it's much easier to work here and things are far better and more convenient to work with—but there, a guest seldom if ever left a house without tipping the servants.

"That's the difference between an aristocrat and a plutocrat. If the aristocrat has only a little, he'll give you a little. If he hasn't any, he'll tell you he hasn't, and you know he would give it if he had it. But a plutocrat will put his hands in his pockets and jingle his money, and think you are presuming even to expect any."

As Bush put it, it did seem rather an imposition on the butlers and a reflection on American generosity.

"Are you implying," I asked him suspiciously, "that there are more plutocrats than aristocrats in Chicago?"

"Rather," acknowledged Bush, but with a twinkle in his brown eyes that purged the remark of anything caustic, "even if this is a democracy."

"Now, if only they would give a little, it would be appreciated. I remember one young chap who used to stay with a family in England where I was working. He hadn't much money, but he was fine to have around. He used to give me half a crown, and always treated me wonderfully. He's what I call a toff."

For the benefit of those who are not familiar with British slang, it might be explained that the comment was complimentary. A toff indicates a gentleman.

"There was one time," recalled Bush, "when he was broke. He felt terribly about it, and when he was leaving he said to me, 'Bush, this is really too bad, but I can't spare a thing this time.' And I had to cheer him up, he felt so badly about it. People like that you'd serve gladly. But here they bluff it through by shaking hands and not mentioning it, though I suppose some of them really don't have it to give."

Bush and I were seated in garden chairs on the lawn back of one of the most pretentious mansions in Lake Forest, as he discoursed on the relative merits of the Yanks and the British as tippers. By training and experience he is probably as efficient a servitor as could be found in metropolitan Chicago, and his employers, by virtue of wealth, culture, and long residence here, are counted among the creme de la creme of local society.

Sporting Set Best—and Worst!

A mutual acquaintance who knew something of his background had suggested that I might find it profitable to talk with him about his profession, since one of his colleagues had found my earlier series on maids not to his liking, and had ventured to set me right by talking, so to speak, from the butler's pantry. Bush, like Barkis, was willin', I found when he was approached on the topic. And here we were.

"I have worked," he told me impressively, "for all kinds of people. There's the sporting set, and the business set, and the social set—I've worked for them all. And the sporting set is the best—and the worst."

"Begin at the beginning," I requested. "I'd like to know all about how you have trained for your work, and what experiences you've had, for I've been told they are rather unusual."

Bush—which, by the way, isn't his name, his real identity being sacrificed to the wish of his employer—had two hours to spare. It was midafternoon of a glorious day, and to have time after my visit, he had togged himself out in his tuxedo before my arrival, that he might hurry through his own dinner and be prepared to serve the family later.

He is a slender man of middle age, slightly more than medium height, with black hair, the aforementioned twinkling brown eyes, and the scrupulously groomed appearance of the first class butler.

"Well," he recollected, "the beginning is when I was 9 years old, over in Munich, Germany. I was a page to an old, old lady whose nephew was a courtier at the court of Bavaria. She was 106 years old, and just how old she was when she died I couldn't say. I know I stayed there three years, and she was still alive when I left.

"Being so old, she naturally was rather childish, and didn't go many places, but when she did I went with her. I have to laugh now when I remember how I was dressed. The outstanding thing about the costume was a huge bow tie that stuck out on either side of my chin. I had satin knee trousers, too, I remember, and a velvet hat with a feather.

Apprenticed to Hotel.

"Three years there, and then my father apprenticed me to one of the big hotels in Munich. I got fifteen marks a year, my clothes and board—and plenty of thrashings.

"There I was to learn to be a waiter, though of course it took quite a while to learn that. I was at first what you call in this country a bus boy. And never shall I forget the first big dinner at which I was allowed to serve in the dining room, as a real waiter. It was a tremendous thrill—the people, the great chandeliers, everything bustle and flurry!

"Then an English gentleman who had been staying at the hotel wanted to take a boy back with him to his home near London, to keep up his German. Eventually, after a long argument, I was allowed to go with him.

"Not long after we arrived at his home he took me with him to London, and somehow I got lost. I met another boy, stranded like myself, and after the manner of boys of fifteen, we swore eternal friendship. But both of us were broke, and when it came to starving together, the pact didn't hold. Neither of us could find work at any hotel in London, so finally, in desperation, I set out to walk the 126 miles back to my employer's home.

"It is evidence of a pretty good memory, I think, that I finally arrived at my destination, only getting off the road once. They were delighted to have me back, not knowing what had happened to me. And there I remained for several more years, learning from their butler and serving as a footman, and valeting the young man. There were just the two of them—himself and his mother.

Employer Like a Brother.

"From there I was hired by another young Englishman who had a luxurious private yacht, on which he spent about six months a year cruising the east coast of England and the rest of the time at his country place. But even that life, which I loved at first, grew monotonous, and I looked about again, though that man was always more like a big brother than an employer to me.

"Then came an offer from an English lady who was ambitious to break into politics. Her husband was immensely wealthy. He had gone over to Africa and established an importing shoe business, and had built her a magnificent home there. All the marble was imported from Aberdeen, Scotland, and the doorknobs were gold plated—I never saw it, but I've heard a great deal about it.

"She went out to Africa, but she stayed only two years, then came back to England and began her campaigns. I didn't want to work for her, so I named a price I didn't think she'd pay, but she hired me. I thought I'd try it out, but I'd been there only a short time when I went to her and said I was quitting.

"Well," she asked me, "what do you want to stay?" I told her I wanted her to employ another maid for the parlor work, that I'd take her houseboy into the butler's pantry and train him to serve, and that she should get another maid to assist the cook. She put everything in my hands and I reorganized that house and had it running like a top in no time.

He Bossed the House.

Soon we were entertaining large parties of her political friends, and I managed everything from start to finish. I bought all the wines and liquors, all the cigars and cigarets—a butler has to be a connoisseur on both. I carried the keys to all the linen and liquor closets, and when the family went to Scotland or France, as they did several times, I went ahead and rented a house and got everything in readiness. I took the silver with me, and what other supplies we needed to help out. There's no denying I was the majordomo of that house.

This woman had been nobody much—only the daughter of a Presbyterian minister—but she was quite successful in politics. I think she counted me an asset, for she said to me once when I had been there quite a while.

"Bush, I waited a long time for you, because you were the very man I wanted—that's why I paid what you asked when you came. I knew you could handle this place just the way you're doing it."

From which it may be inferred that Bush has all the pride of expert in his own accomplishments. It was apparent that nothing could please him more than a favorable comment on his butlering. And he relished acquainting me with the fact that Lady So-and-so, next door neighbor to the aspiring politician, never gave a garden party or other entertainment without borrowing him to help out, although she had not only a butler but also four footmen.

"And after that?" I wanted to know.

"After that came the sporting element," Bush resumed. "I became butler to the master of hounds of Herefordshire—a very responsible position. He was a very wealthy man [a master of hounds generally is, because of the work and expense involved, and it's an honorary job, with no salary], and I found I had much to learn.

"They kept on the butler they had for two weeks extra, just to teach me the things I didn't know—reds and whites, for instance. I'd never done reds and whites, and there's quite a trick to it."

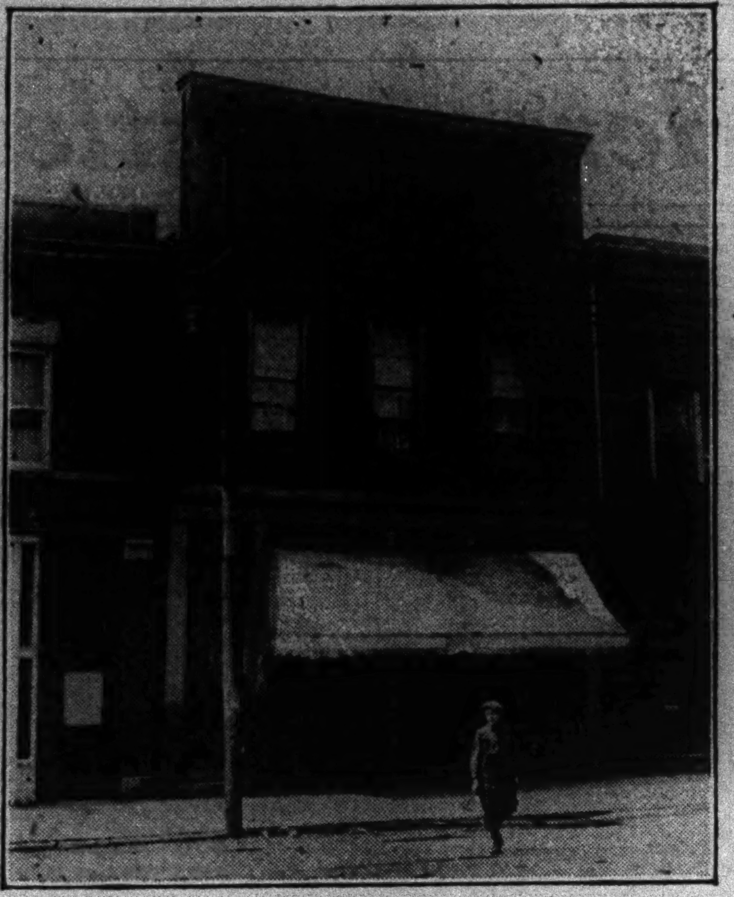
"Reds and whites?" I puzzled, "what are they?"

"Red coats and white trousers," returned Bush, in a tone that indicated unmistakably that not to know that was to have achieved the depth of abysmal ignorance.

"O—reds and whites," I echoed lamely.

[The next installment curtails Bush's recital and brings him back to Chicago and his jobs here.]

THE MARCH OF PROGRESS



ONCE the Cook county hospital at 14th and Canal streets, this wooden building was used for cholera patients in the epidemic of 1866. Forty years ago it was moved on river tugs to Archer and Bonfield, where it became the Bridgeport morgue. And now from within its ancient walls are dispensed soft drinks and other things.

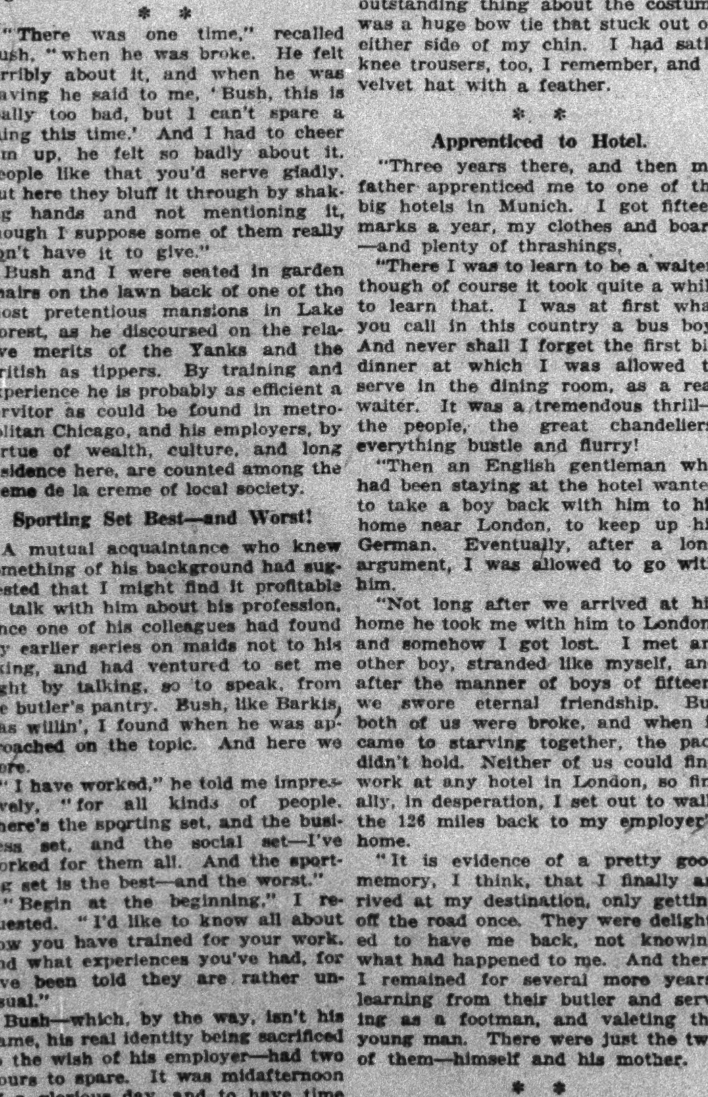
FAMOUS HOMES



THE old 19-room stone residence of Philip D. Armour, founder of the packing firm of Armour & Co., was a show place in its day. Now used as a rooming house, it still stands at 2115 Prairie avenue. The stables in the rear, where the Armour horses were kept, are elaborate, the woodwork being partly of mahogany and walnut. The historic property was recently purchased by a syndicate.

Hungary Builds Sepulcher for Unknown Hero

BUDAPEST. — (AP) — Hungary's "unknown soldier" will soon find heroic sepulcher alongside Hungary's famous "Millenium Memorial," typifying a thousand years of the nation's existence.

Symbolizing his own death and that of 658,000 comrades who were killed in the world war, a magnificent tomb of white Hungarian marble, bearing the simple inscription, "1914-1918," will be erected.

It will be unveiled in the autumn by Admiral Horthy, Hungarian regent, and Count Bethlen, prime minister.

Born on North Side.

Miss Doetsch was born and raised on the north side of Chicago and has never left it. She lives now with her mother at 424 Melrose street. After graduating from Lake View High school, she took a business course, which her father had suggested as a matter of insurance.

"And it was," she said. "Father hadn't intended me to go to work, but I got a job at once when he was on the road. So when he died suddenly and my brother was too young to take his place, I did."

Her first task was to cover his territory on the road, selling. There were many consultations in the Doetsch household before she was allowed to go.

"I had never traveled unchaperoned before and mother was upset over the idea. But she gave her consent finally and I left, a bit nervous myself."

She made good. She kept her father's old customers and even added new ones. They may have been surprised to find a shy but level-eyed young girl waiting to see them about selling furniture rather than buying it. But she sold, and they bought.

"They were all very kind to me on that first trip," she said. "They went out of their way to give me advice, something they wouldn't do to a man. He might resent it."

* *

"Vamps Don't Keep Customers."

From the start she made it a rule never to go out with her prospective buyers. She does not consider that this put her at a disadvantage with her male competitors, who could and did show their prospects a gay time.

"A night owl may be up when the early bird comes along," is her thought on the subject, "but he's too sleepy to be a match for him or her.

"And women who try to make a sale by vamping may make that particular sale, but will not keep a steady customer."

Not content with the necessary traveling on her spring and fall trips, she spends most of her vacations searching out the parts of the country she cannot reach on business, particularly the mountains.

Last year Europe was her goal, and although she didn't forget to note down new ideas in furniture, the wardrobe she picked up in Paris thrilled her far more. For Miss Doetsch may have a man's job and be all business in business hours, yet she doesn't miss the latest in feminine fads and fashions. When beige is in you may be sure she wears beige, and when they are attaching fur around the cuffs, she is not wearing it about her neck.

Think Like Man, Act Like Woman.

Femininity, she thinks, is something women should not cast aside merely because they are in business. And if clothes are important to the business man, they are just as important to the business woman.

"It is foolish," she said, "for a woman to acquire a gruff voice and a forbidding masculine manner—the less admirable qualities of a man. By that I don't mean she should capitalize on her sex, but on the good qualities that go with it. What I try to do is think like a man and act like a woman."

If women are interested in manufacturing, Miss Doetsch thinks they have an equal chance with men.

"It is not a question of man against woman," she said, "but of brains against brains."

* *

"Art Moderne."

As I was leaving a New York buyer dropped in. She showed him her samples of modern art. But they call it "art moderne," and the last is pronounced mow-dairn. Miss Doetsch thought it ought to go over big in a modified form but admitted she didn't car for these new chairs that looked "like coffins standing on end."

But the buyer wasn't so sure.

"They might go crazy over it," he said, "and then again they might prefer looking at it to buying it. You never can tell," this with a sly grin at Miss Doetsch, "what these women are going to do."

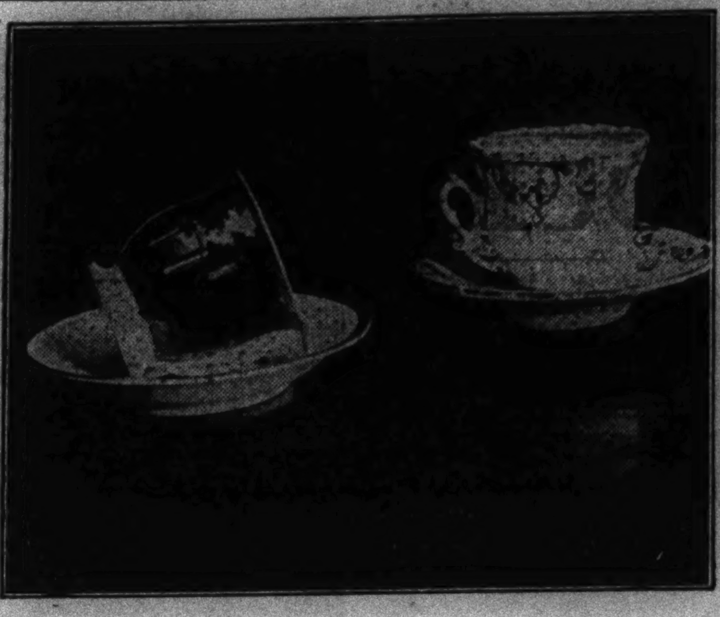
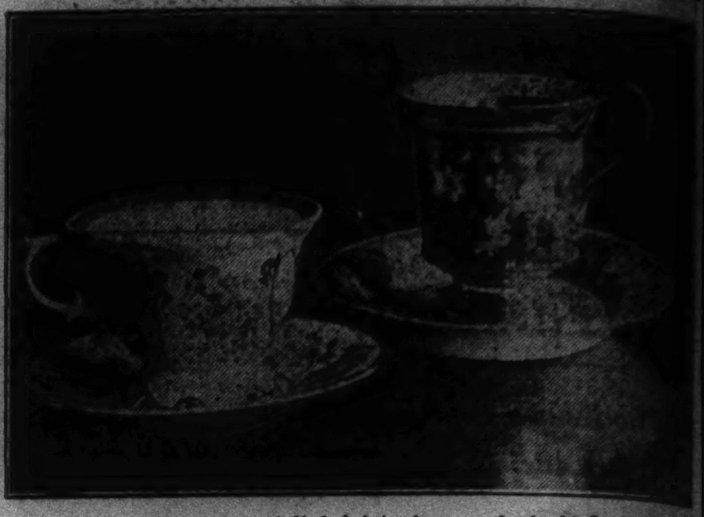
A Study in Contrasts of New and Ol

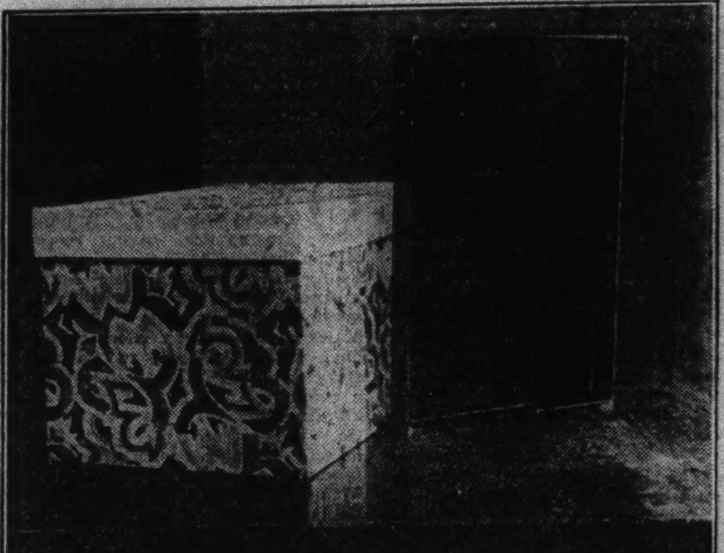
Clever and Stunning Are the Effects Achieved in These Novelties



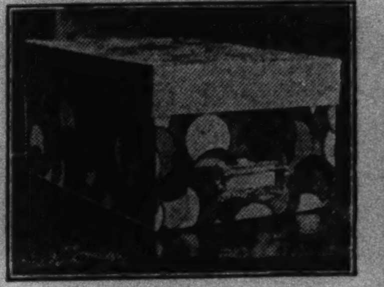
A group of old cups and saucers which, paradoxically, are the newest thing in which to serve afternoon tea or coffee. One is of Mizen, with a scene as fine as a miniature painted on its chaste white glaze. The other is English bone China.



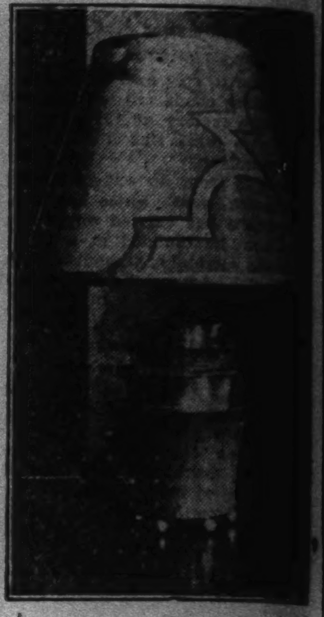
More antique cups, delightful in form and of old Staffordshire and like ancestry. They have withstood the knocks of several generations and their colors are gold and white, with pink and blue touches.



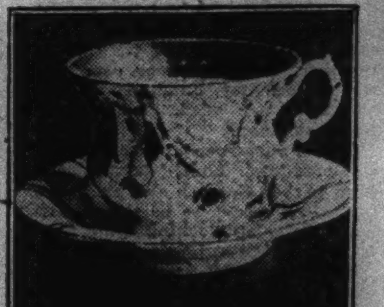
A shoe box for a modern apartment closet where space must be conserved. It holds two pairs of shoes and the matching stockings can fit nicely into the tray. It is of strong material and covered with bright paper.



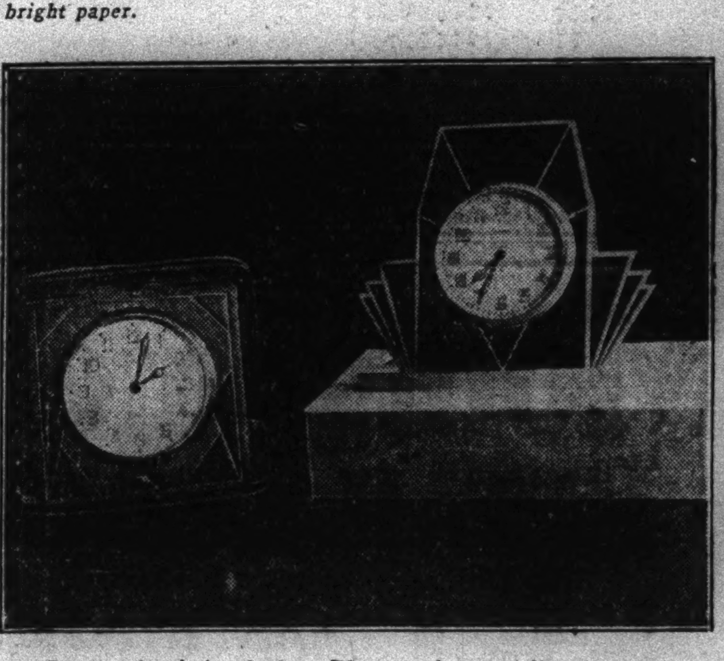
Another shoe box of strong material, covered with bright paper, with a label to tell what it contains and a handle to pull it out of the rack. It is attractive enough to stand with its companions in the bedroom or can be placed on a closet shelf.



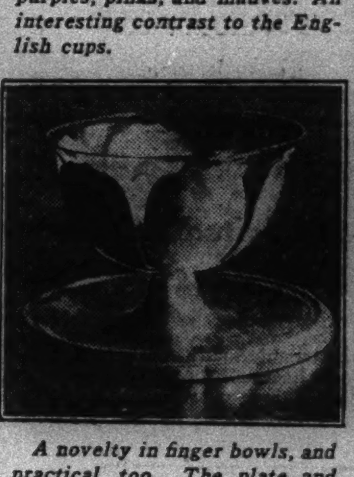
A stunning lamp for a most modern bedroom—that place so difficult to find a suitable lamp for. It is of wood and paint. The shade is parchment and designed to accompany the base both in design and severity of form.



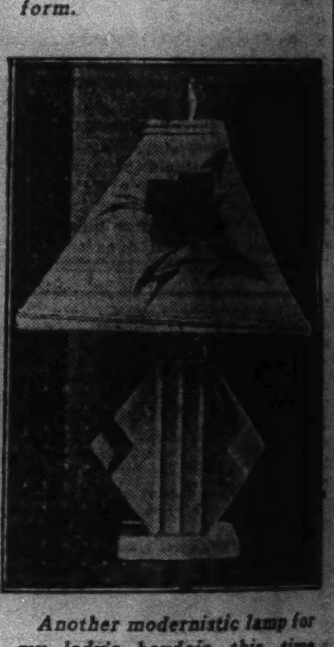
An antique cup of royal Vienna ware, gold lined, with a row of naturalistic flowers in purples, pinks, and mauves. An interesting contrast to the English cups.



Two modernistic clocks. The one for traveling is made of leather, tooled, and painted in a new way. The one for a mantel or desk is made of silver, enameled in jade green or black. Both have radiant dials.



A novelty in finger bowls, and practical, too. The plate and the holder are of silver plated metal and the bowl of colored glass. A charming thing for the less formal type of country house.



Another modernistic lamp for my lady's boudoir, this time of delicate apple green pottery, with a silk shade so cleverly handled that it, too, looks as if it might be made of the pottery. And its transparency startles.

New Air Route Links Balkans Up with Italy

TIRANA, Albania.—(AP)—Italy has been brought within 40 minutes of the Balkan states. A bi-weekly air service linking Brindisi and Valona, Albania, has been inaugurated, the flight across the Adriatic taking just 40 minutes. This is the first stage in an air route which will eventually connect Italy and Constantinople, via Valona and Salonica.

The new service is operated by an Italian company, the "Adria Aero-Lloyd," which has replaced the former German company in Albania. It is regarded as further evidence of Mussolini's policy of commercial penetration in Albania and the other Balkan states. The new enterprise is looked upon with disfavor by Jugo-Slavia, which fears the air line will be used ultimately for Italian military purposes.

French Movies Show Poe Story in Color

PARIS.—(AP)—Edgar Allan Poe has got into the French movies. "The Fall of the House of Usher," including the fall itself in slow-motion, has been presented in colors. France, which has always been in the forefront of Poe's admirers, is giving the new film of the "sombre, delicate poet" an excellent welcome. Poe's romantic story is particularly admired for its modern, scientific skill in photography.

NO USE WAITING.

"O, I shouldn't worry!" replied old Brown. "Let her wait until the right sort of man comes along."

"Why wait?" retorted Mrs. Brown.

Leopard Given His Spots by N. Y. Furriers

Rabbits Are Changed to Minks and Seals.

WHEN a man tells you that his trade is making spots for leopard skins it is only natural to ask that the evidence of your ears be corroborated by that of your eyes. The man in this case complied readily and convincingly. He had no objection to telling the truth. So here it is.

With rare and valuable exceptions every leopard skin found in the United States has acquired its spots within four days. Moreover, all the moles, minks, wolves, seals, and other expensive furs have, with again valuable exceptions, acquired their supposedly nature given markings right on Manhattan island.

Thirty million jack rabbits imported annually from Australia to the western section of 28th street, Manhattan, supply the main basis of this country's fur supply. Every one knows "Coney seal," of course. That is a recognized and highly respectable institution, for jack turned into seal stays turned and is not readily detected even by an expert. Transforming it is tedious, if one wants to be thorough, for it requires fifteen different dyeing processes to get the correct shade in the leather and the reddish tinge about the root of the hair. The rest is only a matter of shearing to the proper length and of extracting the so-called "wild hairs."

Assisted by Luck.

Other furs coveted by women are more exacting on the ingenuity of the fur dealer. How luck assists, when brains are lacking, is revealed by the following story, which indirectly leads us eventually to the leopard.

Some years ago—perhaps you remember when "viatka squirrel" was the rage of a fashion season?—a consignment of Australian rabbits had lain neglected overlong on the shelves of a certain West 28th street fur dealer. When he remembered them, they were showing unmistakable signs of homesickness for their native air. These had gone a long way off, it seems, and, irritated by their inability to adapt themselves to their good American home, their owner seized a brush laden with a certain dye and took an angry swipe at them. They appeared to improve under this rough treatment, so he took another. Their looks continued to improve. From a tint that can only be described as mouldy they began to assume the attractive hue of a well preserved, valuable squirrel.

"Viatka squirrel," he christened them promptly.

"Not so shaggy!" said the trade.

"No, I pulled all the 'wild hairs,'" he admitted.

The trade decided to try them.

Wolves Out of Goats.

In the case of the leopard the furriers first acquired an animal of unimpeachable ancestry and very lovely skin. His spots, according to the authority for these facts, were the most beautiful obtainable in any jungle. Over his striped coat the dealers laid a fine tracing paper and made a perfect pattern. This paper they placed on a thin sheet of metal, and next they etched out the original design of spots. The rabbit skins were then stitched together to the proper size, and on them was put the stencil. A brush and good dye did the rest. In four days a "genuwine" leopard skin was ready for the market and some woman's back.

While rabbits are the most useful of all anmials—after death—others, too, are adaptable to the purpose of the harassed dealer. Goats make quite convincing wolves, when properly treated. For the best wolf, however, outside nature's own, you must go to the Manchurian dog. Mandell makes the best fox, and "processed" lamb the American broadtail. The lamb, indeed, in the "process" sometimes takes a turn even for the better and becomes "genuwine" caracul.

Due to Public Demand.

A candid informant seemed genuinely to regret the fact that the deception practiced in his business was necessary. He said it was entirely due to the public demand for an object not obtainable at the price the public could pay.

"I don't suppose there are as many leopards alive in the world now as there are walking about on woman's backs. They must know that, if they think at all," he said.

He insisted, however, that there was no deception in the matter of price.

"No reputable dealer," he declared, "would think of charging the figure for faked fur that he does for the real article. But there are different grades even of the fake stuff, and the cost varies accordingly."

MIXED FOURSOME.

Four Negroes were having little success in moving a piano up some stairs. In exasperation, one of the front team called to those in the rear:

"Hey! Quit dat quitting'."

The retort came immediately, "Dat ain't the trouble. It's you'all stoppin' dat startin'."—Christian Science Monitor.

Unsolicited Favor.

Last spring I bought a second hand portable typewriter at a stationery supply store, paying cash, though that was very little, as the machine was old and had no case. My husband was with me and I remarked that perhaps I'd better have paid more and gotten one with a case to make it handier in traveling.

The next day I was much surprised and gratified when the K—— delivery truck stopped at my door bringing me a brand new case which they explained was an extra they'd found in stock.

On a cash purchase I naturally wondered how they had discovered my address, but I learned that the salesman had made a note of it the previous day from my indorsement on the check, intending, if possible, to "scare me up" a case. Not being sure he could, he hadn't said a word to me about it.

I was greatly pleased at such thoughtfulness for, once the sale is made, unsolicited favors to customers are usually rather rare. G. M. S.

A Kindly Storekeeper.

Facing an eggless, butterless breakfast Saturday morning if I were turned down, I walked into a small delicatessen store one Friday night and asked for credit. The owner took my name, said he didn't need my address, and gave me what I needed without question, though I had visited his place but twice before.

Next day he could not cash my pay check, but told me not to worry about the bill and insisted that I accept a loan of five dollars to tide me over Sunday, as the banks were closed until Monday.

These two favors made me a steady cash customer at his store and I've often wondered since if I am the only one he had helped. So many people go there. Perhaps politeness does pay, after all. C. H. S.

Tax On Yankee Tourists Urged by Oxford Isis

OXFORD, England.—(AP)—A tax on American and other tourists is suggested by the "Isis," the Oxford university magazine, in the course of an editorial directed against overseas visitors.

The tax, the magazine suggests, should be devoted to the Oxford Preservation trust, which has been formed to prevent the encroachment of manufacturing plants into the university part of the city.

The "Isis" exclaims against "Oxford baring her beauties to the kodaks of Kansas and Khartoum, receiving nothing in return save paper bags. If tourists must come to Oxford we see absolutely no reason why they should not be obliged to pay for what they apparently consider a privilege. The manners of these tourists are apt to be boorish in the extreme."

AL UNLOADS HIS CONSCIENCE

And Indites a Sizzling Series of Crude Confessions

By Snowshoe Al.

I HAVE just finished reading the contents of six different "confession" magazines in which working girls bare their innermost secrets, truck drivers tell why they ain't millionaires, millionaires tell why they ain't truck drivers, etc., and I wish to say that these stories have left me in a very confessional mood, so I believe I shall now write a flock of confessions and henceforth have a clear conscience. Here goes:

Mr. Charles Bidwell, Druggist,
Chicago, Ill.

Dear Mr. Bidwell: You may remember that several days ago you ran a sale on alarm clocks; in fact, you put about two hundred of these sleep disturbers on display in one of your windows. You probably also remember that some villainous vagabond wound all the clocks when you wasn't looking and set the whole bunch to ring at nine o'clock p. m., daylight savings time. If you say you don't remember it you are most certainly a terrible liar, because I know for a fact that you spent an entire half hour galloping around in that window shutting the damn things off. Well, Charlie, old kid, my conscience is annoying me, and I have decided to inform you that Pat Hanley is not the gink which did it. I am the baby what created all the orchestral din. You're welcome.

He Tells Her All.

To My Wife,
Same Address as Me.

Dear Madam: One day last week you came home from town much earlier than I expected, and therefore I wasn't home. I stuck my mug in the door an hour later and you asked me if I had went to the ball game. Remember?

I told you I had went to the public library to do some research work [whatever that means], and you says to me, "Aw, apple-grease, I bet you was at the game." Then I says to you, "Well, this is a helluva a world when a guy can't make anybody believe the truth, and now I wish I had went to the game because I am accused of it anyhow." And then you says to me, "Aw, don't get sore—I won't doubt your word any more." Remember? Well, I was at the ball game.

Furthermore, when our six goldfish died about a month ago I immediately convinced you that it was on account of the chlorine which the city shovels into our drinking water, although I knew right away that the reason the little brats croaked was because I had forgotten to feed them for almost two weeks. I'm sorry.

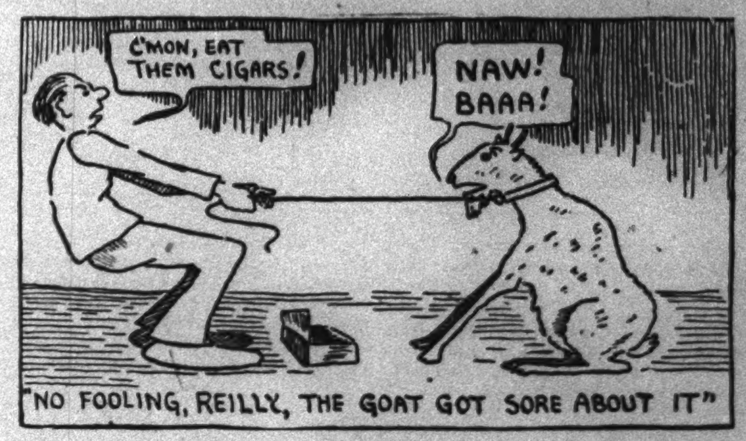
Santa's Little Helper.

Bill Reilly, care Reilly's Café,
Burlington, Ia.

Dear Reilly: Every Christmas for the last six years I have sent you a beautiful necktie and you have sent me a large box of cigars. I always write to you and tell you how much I enjoyed the smokes, don't I? Well, the truth of the matter is, every time I lit one of them terrible hunks of dried spinach I always got cramps in my stomach and purple spots in front of my eyes. Last Christmas I gave a handful to our janitor and he retaliated by not giving us any heat for the next twelve weeks. I hate to say it, Reilly, but they are positively the only thing which I have ever saw a billy goat refuse to eat and, believe me, I have saw billy goats eat some awful junk. So hereafter, Reilly, I wish you would send me a pipe.



C'MON, EAT THEM CIGARS!
NAW! BAAA!

The Dance of the Demons.

Mr. Harry Caplan, Promoter,
Somewhere in America.

Dear Mr. Caplan: A few weeks ago you promoted a Champion Dance Marathon in Chicago, and every day of the contest I would send a telegram in, reading as follows: "Tell Couple Number —— that they are sure to win. Good luck." Remember? Well, I considered that pair of dancers to be very dangerous, and I sent those telegrams in hopes that said couple would become so encouraged that they would work fast and break their legs, because I was really betting on Couple Number 100 [Lois Henry and James Pedrow of Pittsburgh] to grab first prize.

Just a Memory.

To a Certain Chinese Restaurant Near Times Square,
New York, N. Y.

Dear Bunch of Slant Eyes: One evening five years ago a certain young man breezed into your food-factory and ordered a bowl of Chink Goulash, or Mongolian Hash, or Hongkong Garbage, or Chop Suey or whatever you choose to call it. You charged him entirely too much, you robbers, so when the young man walked out he took several things with him besides his opinion of your establishment. The things included the sugar bowl, salt and pepper shakers, the knife and fork, the napkin, the teacup, the ash tray, etc.; in fact, just as he was going through the door you discovered that he had forgotten to take the table along, so you all ran after him, evidently desiring to call this oversight to his attention. You gave up the pursuit somewhere in the vicinity of the Brooklyn Bridge. All right, you flock of Yellow Peril, send me the bill.

Mr. Buzzard Bill,
Fairbanks, Alaska.

Dear Buzz: When I left Alaska you had a phony gold mine which you hoped to sell some day to some rich sucker. Lately you have been doing a lot of corresponding with a Mr. M. Bezzler of this city, who wrote to you offered him your valuable workings for a measly six thousand dollars, and he recently wrote you and stated that he was coming right away to look at the property. Well, don't hold your breath till he gets there, Buzz, old dear, because there ain't no Mr. M. Bezzler. That was me kidding you along under an assumed name. Six thousand dollars! Shame on you, you dirty crook—your mine ain't worth six cents and you know it, too. There ain't enough gold in it to plate a cuff button; in fact, there never was. Well, Buzz, slip my regards to Yukon Pete.

The League of Nations.

Mr. and Mrs. Bruno Andersen,
Chicago, Ill.

Dear Friends: Every time me and my wife gallops over to your wigwam you always drag out your ten months old son and display him in a very proud manner, and we always tell you how cute the little rascal is. We never fail to remark that we wish we had him. To be frank with you, folks, we are tickled cock-eyed that we ain't got him, because my wife is German-American and I am Scotch-American, so what would we want with a little gink which is half Danish and half Irish? You can see for yourselves that it would be damned embarrassing. Anyhow, he cries too much.

* *

Landing Lindy.

Mr. Charlie Lindbergh,
Somewhere in America.

Dear Colonel: When you first announced that you intended to fly to Paris I laughed up my sleeve, because I figured you was just making a lot of noise. However, you did it and I understand your next deposit at the bank was large enough to make the Receiving Teller fall over unconscious. Then you decided to write a book, and this caused me to go into a regular spasm of mirth, because I have had lots of experience when it comes to writing books; in fact, my stomach ain't had the pleasure of shaking hands with a square meal since I became an author. Later on I learned that you collected about one hundred and fifty thousand bucks in royalties off your volume. Well, Charlie, old boy, you have knocked all the laughs out of my system; so I am thinking of trading my typewriter for an airplane and making a nonstop flight to the closest poorhouse.

Meet the Wife.

Mrs. Erna C. Abel,
Palatine, Ill.

Dear Mother-in-law: It was just one year ago that I married your only daughter and you told me what a meek, gentle, patient, economical child she was. Remember? Well, yesterday she breezed out and bought two new dresses, a new bathing suit, six pairs of stockings, and a couple hats, and when I howled about it she slapped me between the ears with a patter of boiled ham an' cabbage. So meek . . . so gentle . . . so economical . . . BLAH!

Doc, who happens to be president of the Illinois Golf club, thus starts the back seat driver as well as the putter argument all over again.

WELL, all the friends and neighbors joined in congratulating Mr. and Mrs. Frank P. Taubeler of 2626 South Tripp avenue, Lawndale, on the occasion of their silver wedding anniversary. They were remarried in Epiphany church and were attended by the original bridesmaids, Mrs. Annie Schorn and Mrs. Clara Martzell; also the original best men, John A. Boehler and John Washbish. And their daughter, Miss Orielda Taubeler, topped off the day by giving a surprise dinner for them in the parish church. Frank P. Boehler, brother of Mrs. Taubeler, was toastmaster. Associates of Mr. Taubeler in the county clerk's office, where he is register clerk in the marriage title department, presented him with twenty-five silver dollars. By and large, it was the happy occasion it deserved to be, and ye ed cherishes the hope there'll be many mose silver wedding anniversaries like it in our village.

Radio Waves to Tell of Icebergs in Torrid July

Government Vessel Leaves for Arctic Soon.

Washington, D. C., July 7.—(AP)—From the ice infested seas near Greenland and Labrador, radio will bring to the world in torrid July reports of scientific observations of ocean currents, weather conditions and plant life.

The coast guard patrol boat, which is to carry a crew of government oceanographers and "iceberg experts" into the perilous waters, will be equipped with the most modern radio apparatus. Communication will be maintained with amateurs and government shore stations in this country and with ships in the North Atlantic.

Leaves This Week.

The expedition, under the command of Lieutenant Commander Edward H. Smith, oceanographer, is scheduled to leave Boston next week.

Arrangements have been made to maintain a regular schedule of communication with Station 1 MK of the American Radio Relay league at Hartford, Conn. Operators on the boat will work with the Hartford station on a wavelength of 41.93 meters between 10 p. m. and midnight on Monday, Wednesday and Friday nights. No definite schedule will be followed in communicating with amateurs, the boat broadcasting on 24 meters in the daytime and 36 meters at night.

Communicate with Ships.

Owing to the erratic quality of high frequency transmission caused by "skip distance" and other atmospheric phenomena, the coast guard vessel may be compelled to use different frequencies in various localities, Lieut. E. M. Webster, head of the radio division, says. For the transmission of shore messages on short waves, a vacuum tube set with master oscillator and power amplifier will be used.

All information received by the shore and amateur stations will be relayed to coast guard headquarters here. In addition to the high frequency transmitter, the boat will be equipped with a 200 watt set for communication on intermediate frequencies with ships. While the primary purpose of using radio will be communication, observations will be made of the effect of atmospheric conditions on transmission.

NEW VET ON COMMISSION.

In Louis G. Caldwell, its new chief counsel, the Federal Radio commission adds a third world war veteran to its roster. Caldwell served in a French artillery regiment. Commissioner Sam Pickard and Secretary Carl Butman were aviators, the former having had his plane shot down in action.

SUNDAY, JULY 8

HENRY DIXON

HENRY DIXON'S HAWAIIAN TRIO TODAY AT ONE O'CLOCK . . . So appropriately languid music is the Hawaiian for early on Sunday afternoon—yet sharply defined and true—it pictures the cool shade of palm trees . . . or even an evening on a shadowy beach while the notes of the two guitars and the ukulele coquette with each other in a close, deft harmony. Henry Dixon plays one of the steel guitars, while his two native Hawaiian musicians play on the other guitar and ukulele. Tune in W-G-N at one o'clock.

THE THIRD GAME OF THE CUBS-BROOKLYN SERIES . . . Quin Ryan is back! Today's game is the first Sunday game Quin has broadcast to you for a long time. Be there in your front room. You hear every detail of the game . . . the smack of the bat, the enthusiasm of the crowd. . . . "Ice Cold Pop" . . . each ball out of the box accounted for to you . . . follow each play of each player through W-G-N today at three.

THE WALTER PONTIUS-MARK LOVE RECITAL . . Two of W-G-N's best staff singers are in recital this afternoon at 1:25. They are Mark Love, basso, and Walter Pontius, tenor. Mr. Love is gifted with that deep, toneful bass voice so familiar to W-G-N listeners, and is able to sing those deep, toneful songs as only the best singers can. And Walter Pontius shares this program singing sweetly animated songs with dextrous ease . . . a remarkable tenor, this man Pontius.

MIDNIGHT MARDI-GRAS

Whoops! ! ! A tuneful tangle of tearing tunes is ready to spout at 11 o'clock tonight at the Midnight Mardi-Gras! The dance band is throwing a party for you tonight . . . just listen . . . it's more than a good time.

100 CLUB . . .

You should belong! Hear W-G-N for 100 hours without another station being tuned in, and you are eligible for membership in W-G-N's 100 Club. Send us your name.

Scotch Hero's Story on Radio Tomorrow Night

Robert the Bruce Feature of Program.

"Robert the Bruce," liberator and hero of Scotland, will feature the drama broadcast tomorrow night in the Family Party series over W-G-N, THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE station on the Drake hotel. The program will be one of Scottish songs and instrumental selections.

Famed in song and story as the founder of the new kingdom of Scotland, Robert the Bruce, from his wanderings as an outlaw in the mountains to his victory at Bannockburn and then on to his Irish and other wars, typified the Scottish love of liberty and independent nationality.

Is Crowned King.

Descended from Robert de Bruis, a Norman knight who accompanied William the Conqueror to England, this the eighth Robert the Bruce, was born July 11, 1274. After the death of "Red Comyn," whom he had stabbed in the church of the Minorite Friars at Dumfries, Bruce hastened to Lochmaben castle, assembled his vassals, and proclaimed his right to the throne. On March 27, 1306, he was crowned king at Scone, but was later forced to flee to the Highlands and thence to Ireland.

The memorable battle of Bannockburn, June 24, 1314, established him as Robert I. of Scotland. At this famous battle the Scots, to the rumble of drums and with the bagpipes playing "Hey Tutti Taiti," fought their way to freedom, defeating the English army of Edward II., more than 100,000 strong, with less than half that force.

Old Highland Bagpipe.

The bagpipes have furnished the military music of the Scots since their introduction to the British isles by the Romans. They have gladdened the weddings and all festivals. The pipes have also served to lighten labor, as on the Isle of Skye, in 1786, when the inhabitants were engaged in roadmaking and each party of laborers had its bagpiper. The oldest still in existence is a Highland bagpipe dated 1409.

The early Scottish minstrels are said to have told their stories and sung to the accompaniment of the harp, but it was the fiddle that became the popular accompaniment of song and the dance in Scotland.

British Stations to Broadcast Radio Moving Pictures

LONDON, July 7.—(AP)—British radio fans are to be given opportunity to see pictures by radio this fall.

J. L. Baird, inventor of the televisior, will make his first broadcast of moving pictures, accompanied by sound radio, in September. In the following month will take place the first broadcast of "Fultograph" pictures, the invention of Captain Otto Fulton.

The two ventures will at first be private, but as a result of experiments conducted with the British Broadcasting Corporation, it is probable that all the English broadcasting stations will be equipped with the new apparatus.

Photographs of the duchess of York and the prince of Wales have already been broadcast in London, as part of the experiments. It is planned to broadcast the photos of the various performers on the radio, pictures illustrating children's stories, fashion, plates, daily weather charts and photos giving news events of the day.

To broadcast the Baird system a television transmitting station has been completed on the roof of a building near Covent Garden. The studio will be completed within a few weeks. The initial Baird broadcast will cover a radius of fifty miles around London.

Church Federation Names Pastors for Radio Family Worship

Radio speakers for the family worship, as conducted at 7:30 o'clock in the morning, Chicago daylight saving time, by Central department Y. M. C. A. and the Chicago Church federation over WMAQ, are announced for the next month as follows:

July 9 to 14—The Rev. Frederick W. Raymond, North Oak Park Congregational church.

July 15 to 21—The Rev. John C. Spencer, [illegible] Park Methodist church.

July 23 to 28—The Rev. Phillip E. Gregory, Morgan Park Congregational church.

July 30 to Aug. 4—The Rev. Karl M. [illegible]rowsky, St. Peter's Evangelical church.

OFF FOR VACATIONLAND

THIS big crowd of stockyards youngsters was found at 47th and Halsted streets waiting for the special street cars that were to take them to the North Western station where they were to embark for Camp Harlo-Alden, out at Algonquin. The United Charities sees to it that the youngsters get a bit of country life every summer. Algonquin, you know, is also the place where The Tribune maintains its summer camp where poor children and their tired mothers are given a dandy vacation every summer.

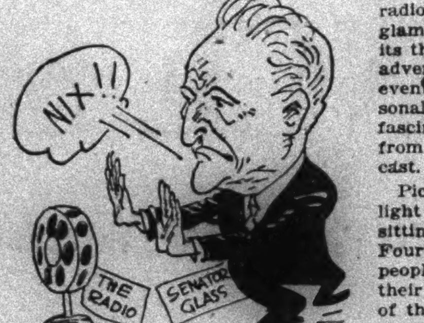
BY QUIN A. RYAN.

DID you ever think of how lost a broadcaster is when his radio station goes off the air for a few minutes? Every transmitter has its weak moments and quits transmitting for a spell, until the engineers and operators can make the necessary repairs.

When a station goes off the air the listeners, of course, can hear nothing in their tuning. Many of them believe the trouble lies in their own receivers and they tinker and tap all over the sets. They worry and fume, and there is no way for the broadcaster to inform his audience of what has happened.

One of those moments came just a half hour before the opening of the first night session of the Democratic convention at Houston. We were switched on and we greeted the audience, and we had uttered no more than a hundred words when we were informed over the telegraph wire that the transmitter back home was not functioning and that we were spilling our pearly words into space—but not on the air lanes.



We felt as though we were on a sinking ship. We could picture thousands of listeners seated at their sets, hearing our first few words and then finding that we had suddenly departed. There we were, waiting helplessly, with no way to tell them to stand by for just a few minutes and to relieve their worry about the suspected faults in their own sets.

SEN. CARTER GLASS of Virginia has peculiar notions of the radio. He strongly opposed holding evening sessions of the Democratic convention for the benefit of the radio audience. He declared that radio "is mostly static." He was refuting the plea of George T. Brennan, Chicago, Democratic leader, whose efforts brought about the night meetings for the sake of the vast listening public who could not sit before their receiving sets in the daytime.

Mr. Brennan said: "Let us give the farmers a chance to hear this speech over the radio. Let's put it into the homes of millions who will listen to the loud speakers in their homes at night. Let's put it on the radio, not during the day, when only a few are at home, but at night when the whole family is at home."

But although the Democrats did themselves some good, probably, by staging their keynote speech and platform oration at night, still it was to no advantage to put on innumerable seconding addresses to bore the listeners.

WE'D LIKE to tell you a little human interest story this morning. We suppose that there are many people in more routine and less glamorous professions who envy the lot of the radio announcer. True, there is a glamour about it, for us who taste of its theatricalism in the studios and its adventures in broadcasting the news events from distant places. But, personally, we believe it is not that which fascinates us; it is the mail that comes from listeners after a feature broadcast.

Picture, if you will, only as a sidelight on another man's profession, our sitting through five hours on the Fourth of July reading letters from people seeking voluntarily to express their appreciation of the broadcasting of the Kansas City and Houston conventions. In five years of broadcasting we have received more letters for certain broadcasts, but never such human—and may we say?—moving letters.

Commentary letters to the radio announcer can assume an intimacy and a tenderness that are contained in the communications to no other public performer, we believe. They are friendly and appreciative beyond telling. They tell of how familiar and welcome a daily visitor the announcer is. All announcers receive them. They contain sincere invitations to visit homes or spend holidays or vacations with the listeners.

They are compensations enough for any effort that any man might extend. Of the thousands we have received over a period of years we have read them all and we have often wondered whether or not we should save them. As a young man we wonder whether they will bring feelings of cheer or sadness when we should read them over in our declining years.

The every day programs bring in a consistent total of listeners' letters, but a large feature broadcast, like the Kentucky Derby or the two conventions, really prompts the vast audience to note writing, and the majority of the writers, in the course of fulsome expressions, state that they have never before written to a radio station, although always intending and resolving to do so.

Consider, for instance, receiving in return for a few days' work a thousand warming letters like this—[and we print this only to illustrate the human story there is in this business, not through any sense of vanity]:

"God bless you, for we have just snapped off the radio after hearing that fine farewell from you, with the fatigue and strain showing so clearly in your friendly voice; and we feel my mother and I, after four days almost glued to our chairs before the loud speaker, that the curtain has gone down on the most colorful and entertaining and stirring drama that has yet crossed our lives.

RADIO FAN MAIL

"We want you to know from us, as you do from thousands of others, no doubt, how much pleasure you have given us. It is a wonderful thing that old people, and those who are tied at home through various circumstances, can sit down in their own living rooms and have the world brought to them by the simple turning of a switch, and a more wonderful thing that there are people like you, with the power and personal charm to make it all so graphic. We feel that we know all the actors in this great play, and that we have greeted them personally, though our eyes have not rested on them. God bless you!"

That, ladies and gentlemen, is why we stay in radio.

Blues Singer and Hawaiians on W-G-N

Billie Allen Hoff, "Blues" singer, and Henry Dixon's Hawaiians will headline the late evening program W-G-N, THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE station on the Drake hotel, is to present tomorrow night starting at 11:15 o'clock. The three Hawaiians will be heard in a group of Hawaiian selections, coupled with a popular number or two.

BIG RADIO PAY ROLL.

The staff of the British Broadcasting corporation, it is said, includes about 1,000 persons, not counting artists.

Soprano, Orchestra and Quartet Will Give W-G-N Program

Madame Belle Forbes Cutter, lyric soprano, will be heard again over W-G-N, THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE station on the Drake hotel, next Tuesday night between 9 and 10 o'clock. In addition to solo selections she will sing with the W-G-N Male Quartet, whose membership consists of Walter Pontius and Gilbert Ford, tenors; Bryce Talbot, baritone, and Mark Love, basso.

The program will also be occupied with orchestral selections by the W-G-N concert orchestra under the direction of Gaston du Moulin. Both Mme. Cutter and the male quartet will sing a number of their selections to orchestral accompaniment.

Damrosch's Lectures on Air Again This Fall

Chain Head Predicts More Features Will Follow.

An extension of the music recital lectures, broadcast during school hours last winter by Walter Damrosch and designed to assist music instruction in both public schools and colleges, is to be provided again during the next school year. The lectures will be broadcast over the system of the National Broadcasting company, which will make them available to virtually every schoolroom in the United States.

These music lectures, first tried out as an experimental venture in the use of radio in the schools, are expected to be followed by school hour courses in science, history, economics, and the languages. The results of the experimental series by Damrosch were so encouraging, according to M. H. Aylesworth, president of N. B. C., as not only to justify a continuance of the lectures next year on a more comprehensive schedule, but as actually to forecast a very definite field for radio in the field of pure education.

Applause Mail Heavy.

"The necessary arrangements for a series of recital lectures for students, to be given by Dr. Damrosch during the coming fall, winter, and spring, have been completed," Mr. Aylesworth states.

"The manner in which the radio audience responded to the experimental lectures by Dr. Damrosch last winter was little short of amazing. Thousands of letters from all section of the United States, testified to the fact that these concerts struck a responsive chord in the hearts of the people. Concrete results of Dr. Damrosch's work is evidenced by a distinct upward trend in the taste of broadcast audiences.

Radio's True Destiny.

"I believe the work of Dr. Damrosch along supplementary education lines is but the forerunner of radio education in many other fields. While broadcasting to date has developed principally along lines of entertainment, with enlightenment as a secondary feature, I look forward to its future progress largely along lines of enlightenment and education. The day is not far distant when leading scientists, historians, lecturers, and others will speak to the school children of the entire land through our broadcast networks. Not until this is done will radio have achieved its true destiny."

Stations Listed for Removal Have Hearing Tomorrow

Washington, D. C., July 7.—(AP)—Political and other extraneous influences will be ignored by the federal radio commission in considering appeals of broadcasting stations slated for elimination Aug. 1, Judge Ira E. Robinson, chairman of the commission, has indicated.

The cases of individual stations will be judged solely on their merits as shown by operation in the public interest, Judge Robinson says. While charges of favoritism have been made and members of congress, politicians and others have interceded with the commission in behalf of affected broadcasters, Judge Robinson declares he has told them that station owners will have an equal opportunity to present their pleas at the hearings on Monday.

The commission believes it has the support of the listening public in its determination to reduce substantially the number of stations in order to improve radio reception. A large majority of the letters received from fans express approval of the elimination procedure. Followers of some of the stations listed for removal have protested.

STRAIGHTEN OUT PROBLEMS.

Nearly all the European broadcasting organizations came together three years ago and formed the Union Internationale de Radiophonie to straighten out the interference problems.

Lessons in Bridge

BY R. M. ROGERS.
ARTICLE XVI.
RULE OF ELEVEN.

As we have said before, the opening lead of a long suit against a suit for trump should be as follows: When holding the king-queen, the queen-jack-ten, the jack-ten-nine or ace-queen-jack at the top of the suit you should open with the top card; having ace-king at the top, open with the king; having king-jack-ten at the top, open with jack. In all other cases lead the fourth best. We are not overlooking the fact that if the long suit was headed by the ace you would seek some other opening unless the player had bid five or more, in which event you would open the suit with the ace, although the most valuable thing the ace can do is to kill a king and is generally held in reserve for that purpose.

R. M. ROGERS.

When a long suit is opened with the fourth best card that card is always a "spot" card and if you subtract the number of spots on the card from eleven, the remainder is the number of cards of the suit higher than the "spot" card led that are not in the hand of the opener. For example, one holds the king-jack-nine-six-four, from which the proper opening is the fourth best or the six spot. Subtracting six from eleven leaves five and there are just five cards higher than the six spot that are in the other three hands.

If you count the cards all together above the six spot, namely seven, eight, nine, ten, jack, queen, king, ace, a total of eight cards, and recall that the opener had three of them, this leaves five for the other three hands and subtracting six from eleven gives you that fact. If the three spot was led, three from eleven is eight, making eight cards higher than the three spot in the hands other than the leader's.

By using the rule of eleven the player of the hand, being able to see what higher cards there are in dummy and his own hand, can tell how many cards higher than the one led are in the leader's partner's hand and, by the process of elimination, in many instances, tell just what those cards are. Such knowledge is invaluable in determining whether or not to take a finesse.

The usefulness in play of the "eleven rule" has been recognized during the 35 years that it has been known.

It must not be taken for granted that when a principle is laid down its application will always win, but only that experience has shown that it will win practically 75 per cent of the time, perhaps more.

In the system of preferred leads which appeared in a recent article, a singleton was given a place although the short suit players of duplicate whist years ago in New York City after trying the system for several years found it would not win as against opening a long suit, but the short suit opening has its place.

It cannot be too often called to the attention of all players and particularly of beginners that every bid made and every play made or not made tells a story that the thinking player comprehends and enjoys. For example, there are eight quick tricks unless the king and queen of the same suit are separated, in which event there are only six quick tricks, and when the opening lead is made and the dummy displayed upon the board, the location of the aces and kings in the various hands can be calculated almost to a certainty.

The declarer should never play to the first lead until he has counted up the number of tricks that can be made from his own hand and dummy without any finessing and has assumed the location of the suits and the high cards and this can be done with a great deal of certainty from the bidding, the opening play, and the 26 cards he can see.

Another Old La Salle Theater Song Hit on W-G-N Thursday

Next Thursday night will see W-G-N, THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE station on the Drake hotel, reviving another of the old La Salle theater productions which made Will Hough, Frank Adams and Joe Howard famous. The new revival is "The Prince of Tonight," one of the lesser know works by this trio.

The same cast of players that has made this series of revivals so interesting will be at the microphone, working under the personal direction of Harry W. Spingold, whose producing genius has had much to do with the success of the series so far.

In planning his radio adaptations of these old successes, Mr. Spingold has had great success in retaining every ounce of inherent drama without sacrificing any of the best music or annoying the listener with too much dialogue. Mr. Spingold has been connected with the theater practically throughout his life, appearing at the age of six with the great Joseph Jefferson. He has spent years in stock and is well known as a producer.

President May Have Job Finding Member for Radio Commission

Washington, D. C., July 7.—What easterner will want an appointment to the radio commission whose active life may only last from September or October until February? This is the question which President Coolidge will have to face when he appoints a successor to Commissioner O. H. Caldwell of New York who has announced that he will resign in the fall.

In the entire administration of the President, no administrative organization has been as difficult to keep filled as the radio commission, Mr. Caldwell with the exception of Judge Sykes being the only original member of that body. Out of the five original members, two—Bullard and Dillon—have died and Bellows has resigned. Now Caldwell announces his resignation.

It is understood now that it is getting so that whenever any one mentions radio commission vacancies to President Coolidge, he throws up his hands. There is, of course, a possibility that congress may extend the active life of the commission another year, but this will not be definitely known until next February and, in the meantime, despite the uncertainty of it all, the position will have to be filled.

That being the case, although the President has all of New England to draw from, to say nothing of New York, New Jersey, Delaware, and Maryland, he may have his usual trouble in finding the right man. The salary is $10,000 a year during the actual life of the commission and thereafter $30 each day the commission is in session.

Radio Fans Will Hear Herb and Al Get the Good News

The official notification of the presidential candidates will serve as the opening guns of the 1928 campaign insofar as the radio campaigns are concerned. Already plans are under way for country-wide hookups to carry these events to the homes of voters throughout the land and then the most interesting campaign of many of our lifetimes will be really underway.

Mr. Hoover will be notified the first week in August at Stanford university and in addition to this being a great event for the Pacific coast fans doubtless the network will be extended from coast-to-coast and from border-to-border.

It is a foregone conclusion that Gov. Al Smith will be notified at Albany, although at this writing the time and place have not been designated. Senator Charles Curtis will be notified at his home in Topeka and very likely Senator Joe Robinson at Little Rock, Ark.

THE new 1929 ELECTRIC SET!

ATWATER KENT RADIO

Ready now—
Get it before the rush starts

OF COURSE you're going to have a self-contained electric set. Why not get it in time for the Tunney-Heeney fight, the baseball games, and all kinds of news and musical programs which are being broadcast through the summer?

All we have learned in twenty-six years of manufacturing, including six years of radio, is summed up in this new 1929 lamp-socket receiver. Everything that has made Atwater Kent Radio the choice of 1,600,000 families in the past is here, with improvements only recently made possible by laboratory research.

Now you have greater power, greater sensitivity. This new set hears programs that used to be too faint, too far away—and passes them on exactly as it hears them. Its reach is wide, its tone pure, its selectivity unusual, its compactness and beauty adapted to convenient placing in your home, its reliability assured by 222 factory tests or inspections before shipment.

In every respect this new Model 40 is a worthy successor of the Atwater Kent 37 (which went into 200,000 homes in four months, setting a new record of sales and satisfaction). Yet—because of ever-increasing demand the price is lower—only $77!

(without tubes)

Model 40 A. C. set. Satin-finished in brown and gold or deep golden bronze and gold. For 110-120 volt, 50-60 cycle alternating current. Requires six A. C. tubes and one rectifying tube, $77.

Also Model 42 A. C. set with automatic line voltage regulator, $86, and Model 44, an extra-powerful, extra-sensitive seven-tube A. C. set, $106.

Battery sets, $49 and $68 (less tubes and batteries).

When you ask an Atwater Kent dealer for a home demonstration, remember that high quality and low price do go hand in hand—when your radio is an Atwater Kent.

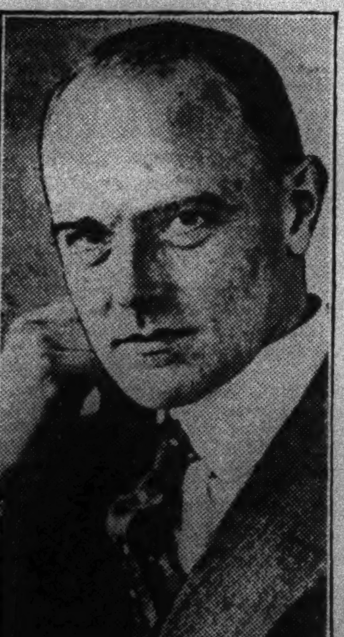
Venus de Milo of California Seeks Charity

Beauty Weds Not Wisely But Too Well.

ADMITS SHE'S BROKE

Mrs. Milo Abercombie-Brincken-Swanson, in 1925, after her second divorce.

FIRST



Baron Wilhelm von Brincken, first husband of Milo Abercrombie.

SECOND

Lieut. Lyman K. Swenson, U. S. N., Milo's second husband.

MRS. MILO AMERCROMBIE-VON BRINCKEN-SWENSON, San Francisco society beauty, the center of several marital and countless legal sensations, is broke. She recently made this announcement in appealing to the Associated charities for aid for herself and two small children, Cecelia, five, and Laurence, three. These are Swenson's children. Mrs. Swenson has two other children by her first marriage to Baron Wilhelm von Brincken.

At the time Mrs. Swenson appealed to the charities for aid, she declared that while she has made her home with her stepfather and her mother, Mr. and Mrs. George A. MacGowan, at their fashionable San Mateo estate, this arrangement is no longer conductive to happiness.

Mrs. Swenson first attracted nationwide attention when, at the age of eighteen years, she was adjudged one of America's fifteen most beautiful women. Her fame and notoriety advanced by leaps and bounds, until today newspaper headline writers need only place the name "Milo" over a story and the entire populace knows at once who is meant.

Flees to Oregon.

The announcement by Mrs. Swenson that she is destitute follows close upon her latest escapade, when, after obtaining a divorce from Lieut Lyman K. Swenson of the United States navy, stationed at Washington, she was ordered to relinquish custody of the two children to him on the grounds that she was unfit as a mother.

Rather than obey this order Milo fled from the home of her mother with a governess and the children to Portland, Ore., there to await the time when Swenson's leave of absence should expire, and he would be forced to return to his command of a submarine stationed at San Pedro. She then contemplated journeying to Washington to make her home with wealthy relatives. Incidentally, the society gossips had it that the migration to the national capital was to be made also in order that she might be near Lieut. Commander Hugo Koehler, U. S. N., said to be the wealthiest officer in the navy, and to whom Mrs. Swenson announced her engagement or, rather, her mother, Mrs. MacGowan, announced it—in October, 1925.

First Marriage a Failure.

Milo Abercrombie's first marital venture was a decided failure. She was wooed ardently and passionately by Baron Wilhelm von Brincken, the dashing, dandified son of a wealthy farmer.

In 1918 the Baron was convicted of complicity in a German conspiracy to violate the neutrality of the United States in attempting to foment a revolution in India. He was sentenced to two years in the federal prison on McNeill's island. While he was doing his "jolt," the baroness, unable to withstand the taunts of friends, and being given the glacial shoulder in society, obtained a divorce.

Her maiden name was resumed and she gradually regained the social position which she had lost.

Two years later the society elite of San Francisco assembled at St. Mary's cathedral to witness the marriage of the baroness and Lieut. Swenson.

Hitch In Ceremony.

But there was a hitch. No priest appeared to tie the nuptial knot and, after waiting an hour, the wedding party dispersed to the tune only of Milo's sobs and the reproachful utterances of Mamma MacGowan.

It was learned that the interruption had been caused by an investigation conducted by a Catholic church court into certain phases of the status of von Brincken and his first wife.

The matter was cleared up, however, by the decision that the church would not recognize Von Brincken's divorce from the first wife; that in the eyes of the church the baron was still married to his first wife when he married Milo Abercrombie; therefore, the latter marriage was without clerical sanction, and so void; that Miss Abercrombie had never been married to the baron, so far as the church was concerned, albeit, there were two children from the union, and that she was now free to marry Swenson within the Catholic church.

The ceremony was performed Aug. 12, 1920, in the presence of a handful of guests who had been hastily summoned by telephone. The couple, from all reports, spent a joyous honeymoon.

Society Again Shocked.

Under orders of the government, Lieut. Swenson moved to various stations, and his wife followed him. However, just prior to the departure of the United States fleet from San Francisco for Australia in May, 1925, San Francisco society was shocked to learn that Mrs. Swenson had filed suit secretly for a divorce from Swenson.

With her second divorce, Mrs. Swenson faded into oblivion, and although Mrs. MacGowan tried many times to crash back into the fold with her daughter, society circles were polite but firm in striking the pair from their lists.

At one time, shortly after the divorce from Swenson, Mamma MacGowan and Milo appeared at a fashionable naval function given in honor of officers of the Pacific fleet. Presenting their invitations at the door, the two women attempted to sweep into the ballroom in a grand display of finery—for which later they were sued by a modiste.

The hostess pronounced the invitations forgeries, and Mrs. MacGowan and Mrs. Swenson were ejected, after making a scene.

The once radiant Milo Abercrombie-von Brincken-Swenson, having lost out in society, and barely missing a jail sentence for contempt of court in refusing to deliver the two children to Swenson, as awarded by court order, is now living in complete obscurity.

Following her appeal to the Associated charities, that organization communicated with naval officials in the east, but the navy department replied that the appeal did not call for official notice.

Diplomat Known as Music Fan by Dutch

THE HAGUE.—(AP)—Richard M. Tobin of California, United States minister to the Netherlands, is known in Holland as the music fan of the diplomatic set. He is not only to be found at every concert of note given in The Hague, Amsterdam, or Rotterdam, but to American artists giving concerts in Holland he is of great assistance.

Working Hours of Queen Mary Have No Limit

Marble Halls Demand Her Constant Attention.

LONDON.—(AP)—Queen Mary of England dwells in marble halls, but her daily life is busier than the average typist who casts awestruck glances toward Buckingham palace as she hurries toward the timeclock every morning.

If the little typist knew it, her queen has already been up for an hour or two, attending household duties. By nine or ten o'clock in the morning Queen Mary has probably dealt with more correspondence than the typist will handle in an eight hour day. Her majesty, aged 61, is a tireless worker.

There is no trades union to limit the hours of the queen's working day. She rises at the call of a maid each day at 7 o'clock. Much of her correspondence consists of appeals for aid.

Excellent Housekeeper.

After disposing of her mail, Queen Mary turns to household matters. She is an excellent housekeeper, and no detail of the huge task of running Buckingham palace fails to reach her observant eye. Her sitting room is turned into an office for the remaining hours of the morning and there she receives her ladies in waiting, her housekeepers, her private secretaries, and even certain of her tradespeople. She gives her own orders and carefully checks the reports and expenditures.

The queen usually lunches at home. The hour is one of the few respites in a crowded day and is often brightened by the presence of the prince of Wales or Princess Mary, or of the beloved "Little Duchess" of York, who brings news of the latest cute sayings and doings of the baby Princess Elizabeth, to whom the queen is a devoted grandmother.

Dinner with King.

The afternoon is generally spent in public work. She can not enjoy the privilege of other women, of just running off for an afternoon at the movies and forgetting the petty irritations of the daily routine.

England sometimes wonders why more small dinner parties are not given at the palace and why their majesties do not accept more invitations to dine with friends. They suggest that the king and queen are unsocial in their tastes. Nothing is farther from the truth.

Dinner time is the one hour in the day that Queen Mary can spend quietly with the king, and after all, they are just a very human and very devoted couple who like to talk over the little family affairs nearest their hearts in a modicum of privacy, at least once in a while.

Loves to Go Shopping.

If queens sometimes allow themselves to "pretend," as most other folk do, no doubt at that hour Queen Mary pretends she is just Mrs. George Windsor with nothing on earth more important to do than to think of her husband.

Queen Mary shares with all womankind a love of shopping. Wherever she goes, she slips away at the first possible moment to poke about little antique shops in search of something for a particular corner of her home, or for her children, or for a friend. Any one receiving a gift from the queen knows it represents her majesty's personal thought.

One-third the Price.

I am a reporter on a newspaper in my home town and call daily at the various stores to ask my friends for news items, thereby becoming well acquainted with the employés.

One day I stepped into one of the most up to date stores. They were unpacking some pretty rubber aprons of various hues. I had no idea of buying one, for I believed they were rather expensive. However, I asked the clerk what they were worth. She told me 50 cents. Thinking she was joking, I said, "Wrap up this one," selecting the most elaborate one in the lot. She then spoke to another clerk, the manager being absent from the store, and asked if he had received the bill for the aprons. He said he had; they were 50 cents. I accepted the package, paid for it, and walked out.

The next morning I again went into the store and was met by the smiling clerk who had sold me the apron and who said, "The apron you bought of me yesterday was a sure enough bargain, as the price was $1.50 instead of fifty cents."

I wanted to pay the difference, or return the apron, but the manager insisted that as it was their mistake I should keep the apron at the price they sold it. Now this is what I call a "real" bargain.

One Good Thing Leads to Another.

At a prize package sale recently where they were selling packages guaranteed to be worth a dollar, I was one of the first ten arriving and thereby received an extra package free.

One contained an article that was worth the dollar, no more, but the other had in it a coupon which entitled me to a seven piece tea set.

The tea set was really a work of art, probably worth many times a dollar. And as I bore it home proudly, I felt inspired to write of my bargain. If it brings me an additional two dollars I will feel highly repaid for my initial outlay of one dollar.

A Dress for 43 Cents.

My best buy was made last summer when I was hunting for dress material for a frock and I came across a piece of orchid linen, 85 cents a yard quality, marked down to 15 cents because a bottle of red marking ink had been spilled on it.

I bought 2½ yards and by cutting the goods so the largest ink spot was carved out for the arm holes and spending another 5 cents for a skein of deep purple yarn for big lazy daisy stitches to cover the few remaining spatters, I completed a charming dress of good quality for 43 cents. G. W.

Academy Attracts Literati of France

INHERENT RECOMMENDATION.

A Chinese newspaper contained this letter from an applicant for work:

"Sir: I am Wang. I can drive a typewriter with good noise and my English is great. My last job has left itself from me, for the good reason that the large man has dead. It was on account of no fault of mine. So, honorable sirs, what about it? If I can be of big use to you, I will arrive on same date that you should guess."—Tid Bits.

More Plutocrats than Aristocrats Here, a Butler Says!

Rule No. 1 for Saleswomen: "No Flirting"

One Who Runs a Factory Offers Advice.

By Helen Dare

DON'TS for traveling saleswomen:

Don't try to make sales by flirtations.

Don't date your customers.

Don't become masculine.

"The thing to do," said Miss Anna Doetsch as she conducted me through her furniture factory at 1534 Altgeld street, "is to think like a man and act like a woman."

She speaks from an experience of more than ten years. Since her father's death she has carried on in the establishment he founded in a triple capacity—as secretary, treasurer, and active director of the selling organization.

* *

Like a Family Reunion.

But now she was showing me through the big plant—the mill, she calls it—and our tour was a sort of continuous family reunion.

The workmen looked up from their benches and machines and smiled their responses to her greetings. The smiles came from the heart. Many of the older employés had watched Anna grow up from childhood.

"Have you had your tonsils out yet?" she asked one.

"No," he replied, sheepishly.

"Well, you better do it next week. Get it over with while the weather's warm. It isn't so terrible, you know," and she smiled reassuringly as we passed on.

They come to her when they are sick, or in trouble, or in love.

"Yes," she said, "I even play Doris Blake to them."

* *

On Through the Factory.

We paused before a carving machine. Twenty-four needle-like knives whirring in the air to provide solid comfort for the tired business man or the weary housewife. Twenty-four squat little legs, some of them for that new parlor sofa you are going to buy next year, being carved in intricate designs. The operator guides his blunted tool in and out over the pattern and the myriad knives whirr in synchronization to his movements.

Then on to the gluing room, where each part is glued and then clamped together, and the stockroom, where the frames for hundreds of chairs and sofas are piled, looking like so many skeletons.

There were specimens of the Louis Quatorze and Louis Quinze periods, high backed Spanish and plain tuxedo styles, all meant to be overstuffed in the future, but looking quite starved at present.

One chair with arms carved into a lion's head, Miss Doetsch had nicknamed Bernard Shaw, because it looked far more like the lion of English letters than the king of the jungle.

Miss Doetsch is proud of her mill, of its cleanliness, its order, and most of all, of its brisk and busy atmosphere.

"It hurts me to see a factory or mill idle," she said. "During the fuelless days of the war, when we could

A FREAK OF BIRDLAND

A WHITE bluejay sounds all wrong, but that's what Mrs. Ben E. Buttles of 9515 South Robey street has perched on her finger. Whitey is so much a freak that the Lincoln park aviary would like to have him, and the famed Field museum has asked the privilege of stuffing him should he die suddenly. Whitey is a pale and pink-eyed specimen, but he has the crested topknot and saucy manners of his family and the bluejay call. Mrs. Buttles found him in a tree nest in her back yard with a cluster of regular bluejays.

Chicago's Rich Aren't So Good on the Tipping

They Think a Handshake Serves for Cash!

Tradition tells us that butlers never talk of their work, but Miss McLaughlin found some butlers in Chicago who were more than willing to shatter that tradition; and here is the third story of her series, "The Butler Broadcasts."

BY KATHLEEN M'LAUGHLIN.

NEXT time you spend the week end at a multi-millionaire's home, give the butler a handshake if you will, on leaving—but don't imagine you're getting away with anything if that is all you give him. [Nay, nay, the sentiment is not mine, but the butler's!]

For the ancient custom of crossing the palm with silver may have fallen upon evil day in these modern times, wherein what the social code outlines as proper is the least of the worries of those who are "in;" but remembrance of the largesse that once was theirs rankles in the bosoms of the serving craft, and tips their tongues with scorn of the ungenerous.

What Butlers Think of Tips.

To tip or not to tip is an individual problem—or privilege, as you will—and concerns me not at all except as it reflects the attitude of the butlers who talked with me about butlering, its assets and its liabilities, and about themselves and their employers.

It remained one of the most amusing episodes of the three interviews, that two of the trio embraced the opportunity to decry the newer type of house guest, who has given up tipping and taken up handshaking insofar as the butler is concerned.

One of the two who mourned has worked only in America. The other has had years of experience in the British Isles and on the continent.

"Why," advised the latter, "of all the people who have stayed at this house while I've been here the last few years, there are only three or four who have given me a tip. There's Mr. M———, who stayed over the week end several times and always gives me $5 when he leaves; and that young Mr. B——, who doesn't forget me. But the others—

They Think a Handshake Serves for Cash!

"'Well, they just look at me sheepishly and shake hands and say, 'Good-bye, Bush, glad to have seen you again.' They seem to think it's such an honor to shake hands with them you'll forget all about the tip. Really, I don't like to criticize, but it does seem, as long as you've given them service and they've accepted hospitality, they'd at least remember you with whatever they could spare.

They Do Tip in England!

"It wasn't like that in England. Of course, there's no comparison in other things—I mean it's much easier to work here and things are far better and more convenient to work with—but there, a guest seldom if ever left a house without tipping the servants.

"That's the difference between an aristocrat and a plutocrat. If the aristocrat has only a little, he'll give you a little. If he hasn't any, he'll tell you he hasn't, and you know he would give it if he had it. But a plutocrat will put his hands in his pockets and jingle his money, and think you are presuming even to expect any."

As Bush put it, it did seem rather an imposition on the butlers and a reflection on American generosity.

"Are you implying," I asked him suspiciously, "that there are more plutocrats than aristocrats in Chicago?"

"Rather," acknowledged Bush, but with a twinkle in his brown eyes that purged the remark of anything caustic, "even if this is a democracy."

"Now, if only they would give a little, it would be appreciated. I remember one young chap who used to stay with a family in England where I was working. He hadn't much money, but he was fine to have around. He used to give me half a crown, and always treated me wonderfully. He's what I call a toff."

For the benefit of those who are not familiar with British slang, it might be explained that the comment was complimentary. A toff indicates a gentleman.

"There was one time," recalled Bush, "when he was broke. He felt terribly about it, and when he was leaving he said to me, 'Bush, this is really too bad, but I can't spare a thing this time.' And I had to cheer him up, he felt so badly about it. People like that you'd serve gladly. But here they bluff it through by shaking hands and not mentioning it, though I suppose some of them really don't have it to give."

Bush and I were seated in garden chairs on the lawn back of one of the most pretentious mansions in Lake Forest, as he discoursed on the relative merits of the Yanks and the British as tippers. By training and experience he is probably as efficient a servitor as could be found in metropolitan Chicago, and his employers, by virtue of wealth, culture, and long residence here, are counted among the creme de la creme of local society.

Sporting Set Best—and Worst!

A mutual acquaintance who knew something of his background had suggested that I might find it profitable to talk with him about his profession, since one of his colleagues had found my earlier series on maids not to his liking, and had ventured to set me right by talking, so to speak, from the butler's pantry. Bush, like Barkis, was willin', I found when he was approached on the topic. And here we were.

"I have worked," he told me impressively, "for all kinds of people. There's the sporting set, and the business set, and the social set—I've worked for them all. And the sporting set is the best—and the worst."

"Begin at the beginning," I requested. "I'd like to know all about how you have trained for your work, and what experiences you've had, for I've been told they are rather unusual."

Bush—which, by the way, isn't his name, his real identity being sacrificed to the wish of his employer—had two hours to spare. It was midafternoon of a glorious day, and to have time after my visit, he had togged himself out in his tuxedo before my arrival, that he might hurry through his own dinner and be prepared to serve the family later.

He is a slender man of middle age, slightly more than medium height, with black hair, the aforementioned twinkling brown eyes, and the scrupulously groomed appearance of the first class butler.

"Well," he recollected, "the beginning is when I was 9 years old, over in Munich, Germany. I was a page to an old, old lady whose nephew was a courtier at the court of Bavaria. She was 106 years old, and just how old she was when she died I couldn't say. I know I stayed there three years, and she was still alive when I left.

"Being so old, she naturally was rather childish, and didn't go many places, but when she did I went with her. I have to laugh now when I remember how I was dressed. The outstanding thing about the costume was a huge bow tie that stuck out on either side of my chin. I had satin knee trousers, too, I remember, and a velvet hat with a feather.

Apprenticed to Hotel.

"Three years there, and then my father apprenticed me to one of the big hotels in Munich. I got fifteen marks a year, my clothes and board —and plenty of thrashings.

"There I was to learn to be a waiter, though of course it took quite a while to learn that. I was at first what you call in this country a bus boy. And never shall I forget the first big dinner at which I was allowed to serve in the dining room, as a real waiter. It was a tremendous thrill—the people, the great chandeliers, everything bustle and flurry!

"Then an English gentleman who had been staying at the hotel wanted to take a boy back with him to his home near London, to keep up his German. Eventually, after a long argument, I was allowed to go with him.

"Not long after we arrived at his home he took me with him to London, and somehow I got lost. I met another boy, stranded like myself, and after the manner of boys of fifteen, we swore eternal friendship. But both of us were broke, and when it came to starving together, the pact didn't hold. Neither of us could find work at any hotel in London, so finally, in desperation, I set out to walk the 126 miles back to my employer's home.

"It is evidence of a pretty good memory, I think, that I finally arrived at my destination, only getting off the road once. They were delighted to have me back, not knowing what had happened to me. And there I remained for several more years, learning from their butler and serving as a footman, and valeting the young man. There were just the two of them—himself and his mother.

Employer Like a Brother.

"From there I was hired by another young Englishman who had a luxurious private yacht, on which he spent about six months a year cruising the east coast of England and the rest of the time at his country place. But even that life, which I loved at first, grew monotonous, and I looked about again, though that man was always more like a big brother than an employer to me.

"Then came an offer from an English lady who was ambitious to break into politics. Her husband was immensely wealthy. He had gone over to Africa and established an importing shoe business, and had built her a magnificent home there. All the marble was imported from Aberdeen, Scotland, and the doorknobs were gold plated—I never saw it, but I've heard a great deal about it.

"She went out to Africa, but she stayed only two years, then came back to England and began her campaigns. I didn't want to work for her, so I named a price I didn't think she'd pay, but she hired me. I thought I'd try it out, but I'd been there only a short time when I went to her and said I was quitting.

"Well," she asked me, "what do you want to stay?" I told her I wanted her to employ another maid for the parlor work, that I'd take her houseboy into the butler's pantry and train him to serve, and that she should get another maid to assist the cook. She put everything in my hands and I reorganized that house and had it running like a top in no time.

He Bossed the House.

Soon we were entertaining large parties of her political friends, and I managed everything from start to finish. I bought all the wines and liquors, all the cigars and cigarets—a butler has to be a connoisseur on both. I carried the keys to all the linen and liquor closets, and when the family went to Scotland or France, as they did several times, I went ahead and rented a house and got everything in readiness. I took the silver with me, and what other supplies we needed to help out. There's no denying I was the majordomo of that house.

This woman had been nobody much —only the daughter of a Presbyterian minister—but she was quite successful in politics. I think she counted me an asset, for she said to me once when I had been there quite a while,

"Bush, I waited a long time for you, because you were the very man I wanted—that's why I paid what you asked when you came. I knew you could handle this place just the way you're doing it."

From which it may be inferred that Bush has all the pride of expert in his own accomplishments. It was apparent that nothing could please him more than a favorable comment on his butlering. And he relished acquainting me with the fact that Lady So-and-so, next door neighbor to the aspiring politician, never gave a garden party or other entertainment without borrowing him to help out, although she had not only a butler but also four footmen.

"And after that?" I wanted to know.

"After that came the sporting element," Bush resumed. "I became butler to the master of hounds of Herefordshire—a very responsible position. He was a very wealthy man [a master of hounds generally is, because of the work and expense involved, and it's an honorary job, with no salary], and I found I had much to learn.

"They kept on the butler they had for two weeks extra, just to teach me the things I didn't know—reds and whites, for instance. I'd never done reds and whites, and there's quite a trick to it."

"Reds and whites?" I puzzled, "what are they?"

"Red coats and white trousers," returned Bush, in a tone that indicated unmistakably that not to know that was to have achieved the depth of abysmal ignorance.

"O—reds and whites," I echoed lamely.

[The next installment curtails Bush's recital and brings him back to Chicago and his jobs here.]

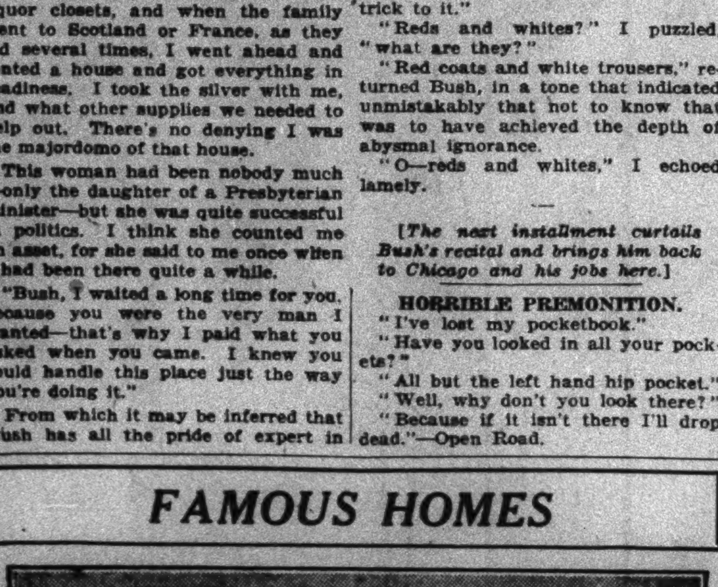
FAMOUS HOMES



THE old 19-room stone residence of Philip D. Armour, founder of the packing firm of Armour & Co., was a show place in its day. Now used as a rooming house, it still stands at 2115 Prairie avenue. The stables in the rear, where the Armour horses were kept, are elaborate, the woodwork being partly of mahogany and walnut. The historic property was recently purchased by a syndicate.

not run, I hated to be around the place."

Part of her job is to estimate the cost of each step in production, so that selling prices may be fairly gauged. She sells the unfinished frames almost entirely to wholesale upholsterers and interior decorators.

Born on North Side.

Miss Doetsch was born and raised on the north side of Chicago and has never left it. She lives now with her mother at 424 Melrose street. After graduating from Lake View High school, she took a business course, which her father had suggested as a matter of insurance.

"And it was," she said. "Father hadn't intended me to go to work, but I got a job at once when he was on the road. So when he died suddenly and my brother was too young to take his place, I did."

Her first task was to cover his territory on the road, selling. There were many consultations in the Doetsch household before she was allowed to go.

"I had never traveled unchaperoned before and mother was upset over the idea. But she gave her consent finally and I left, a bit nervous myself."

She made good. She kept her father's old customers and even added new ones. They may have been surprised to find a shy but level-eyed young girl waiting to see them about selling furniture rather than buying it. But she sold, and they bought.

"They were all very kind to me on that first trip," she said. "They went out of their way to give me advice, something they wouldn't do to a man. He might resent it."

* *

"Vamps Don't Keep Customers."

From the start she made it a rule never to go out with her prospective buyers. She does not consider that this put her at a disadvantage with her male competitors, who could and did show their prospects a gay time.

"A night owl may be up when the early bird comes along," is her thought on the subject, "but he's too sleepy to be a match for him or her.

"And women who try to make a sale by vamping may make that particular sale, but will not keep a steady customer."

Not content with the necessary traveling on her spring and fall trips, she spends most of her vacations searching out the parts of the country she cannot reach on business, particularly the mountains.

Last year Europe was her goal, and although she didn't forget to note down new ideas in furniture, the wardrobe she picked up in Paris thrilled her far more. For Miss Doetsch may have a man's job and be all business in business hours, yet she doesn't miss the latest in feminine fads and fashions. When beige is in you may be sure she wears beige, and when they are attaching fur around the cuffs, she is not wearing it about her neck.

Think Like Man, Act Like Woman.

Femininity, she thinks, is something women should not cast aside merely because they are in business. And if clothes are important to the business man, they are just as important to the business woman.

"It is foolish," she said, "for a woman to acquire a gruff voice and a forbidding masculine manner—the less admirable qualities of a man. By that I don't mean she should capitalize on her sex, but on the good qualities that go with it. What I try to do is think like a man and act like a woman."

If women are interested in manufacturing, Miss Doetsch thinks they have an equal chance with men.

"It is not a question of man against woman," she said, "but of brains against brains."

* *

"Art Moderne."

As I was leaving a New York buyer dropped in. She showed him her samples of modern art. But they call it "art moderne," and the last is pronounced mow-dairn. Miss Doetsch thought it ought to go over big in a modified form but admitted she didn't car for these new chairs that looked "like coffins standing on end."

But the buyer wasn't so sure.

"They might go crazy over it," he said, "and then again they might prefer looking at it to buying it. You never can tell," this with a sly grin at Miss Doetsch, "what these women are going to do."

French Movies Show Poe Story in Color

PARIS.—(AP)—Edgar Allan Poe has got into the French movies. "The Fall of the House of Usher," including the fall itself in slow-motion, has been presented in colors. France, which has always been in the forefront of Poe's admirers, is giving the new film of the "sombre, delicate poet" an excellent welcome. Poe's romantic story is particularly admired for its modern, scientific skill in photography.

AL UNLOADS HIS CONSCIENCE

And Indites a Sizzling Series of Crude Confessions

By Snowshoe Al.

I HAVE just finished reading the contents of six different "confession" magazines in which working girls bare their innermost secrets, truck drivers tell why they ain't millionaires, millionaires tell why they ain't truck drivers, etc., and I wish to say that these stories have left me in a very confessional mood, so I believe I shall now write a flock of confessions and henceforth have a clear conscience. Here goes:

Mr. Charles Bidwell, Druggist,
Chicago, Ill.

Dear Mr. Bidwell: You may remember that several days ago you ran a sale on alarm clocks; in fact, you put about two hundred of these sleep disturbers on display in one of your windows. You probably also remember that some villainous vagabond wound all the clocks when you wasn't looking and set the whole bunch to ring at nine o'clock p. m., daylight savings time. If you say you don't remember it you are most certainly a terrible liar, because I know for a fact that you spent an entire half hour galloping around in that window shutting the damn things off. Well, Charlie, old kid, my conscience is annoying me, and I have decided to inform you that Pat Hanley is not the gink which did it. I am the baby what created all the orchestral din. You're welcome.

* *

He Tells Her All.

To My Wife,
Same Address as Me.

Dear Madam: One day last week you came home from town much earlier than I expected, and therefore I wasn't home. I stuck my mug in the door an hour later and you asked me if I had went to the ball game. Remember?

I told you I had went to the public library to do some research work [whatever that means], and you says to me, "Aw, apple-grease, I bet you was at the game." Then I says to you, "Well, this is a helluva a world when a guy can't make anybody believe the truth, and now I wish I had went to the game because I am accused of it anyhow." And then you says to me, "Aw, don't get sore—I won't doubt your word any more." Remember? Well, I was at the ball game.

C'MON, EAT THEM CIGARS!
NAW! BAAA!

"NO FOOLING, REILLY, THE GOAT GOT SORE ABOUT IT"

Furthermore, when our six goldfish died about a month ago I immediately convinced you that it was on account of the chlorine which the city shovels into our drinking water, although I knew right away that the reason the little brats croaked was because I had forgotten to feed them for almost two weeks. I'm sorry.

* *

Santa's Little Helper.

Bill Reilly, care Reilly's Café,
Burlington, Ia.

Dear Reilly: Every Christmas for the last six years I have sent you a beautiful necktie and you have sent me a large box of cigars. I always write to you and tell you how much I enjoyed the smokes, don't I? Well, the truth of the matter is, every time I lit one of them terrible hunks of dried spinach I always got cramps in my stomach and purple spots in front of my eyes. Last Christmas I gave a handful to our janitor and he retaliated by not giving us any heat for the next twelve weeks. I hate to say it, Reilly, but they are positively the only thing which I have ever saw a billy goat refuse to eat and, believe me, I have saw billy goats eat some awful junk. So hereafter, Reilly, I wish you would send me a pipe.

* *

The Dance of the Demons.

Mr. Harry Caplan, Promoter,
Somewhere in America.

Dear Mr. Caplan: A few weeks ago you promoted a Champion Dance Marathon in Chicago, and every day of the contest I would send a telegram in, reading as follows: "Tell Couple Number —— that they are sure to win. Good luck." Remember? Well, I considered that pair of dancers to be very dangerous, and I sent those telegrams in hopes that said couple would become so encouraged that they would work fast and break their legs, because I was really betting on Couple Number 100 [Lois Henry and James Pedrow of Pittsburgh] to grab first prize.

* *

Just a Memory.

To a Certain Chinese Restaurant Near
Times Square,
New York, N. Y.

Dear Bunch of Slant Eyes: One evening five years ago a certain young man breezed into your food-factory and ordered a bowl of Chink Goulash, or Mongolian Hash, or Hongkong Garbage, or Chop Suey or whatever you choose to call it. You charged him entirely too much, you robbers, so when the young man walked out he took several things with him besides his opinion of your establishment. The things included the sugar bowl, salt and pepper shakers, the knife and fork, the napkin, the teacup, the ash tray, etc.; in fact, just as he was going through the door you discovered that he had forgotten to take the table along, so you all run after him, evidently desiring to call this oversight to his attention. You gave up the pursuit somewhere in the vicinity of the Brooklyn Bridge. All right, you [illegible] of Yellow Peril, send me the bill.

* *

A Gold Brick.

Mr. Buzzard Bill,
Fairbanks, Alaska.

Dear Buzz: When I left Alaska you had a phony gold mine which you hoped to sell some day to some sucker. Lately you have been doing a lot of corresponding with a Mr. Bezzler of this city, who wrote [illegible] offered him your valuable [illegible] for a measly six thousand dollars, and he recently wrote you and stated he was coming right away to look at the property. Well, don't hold your breath till he gets there, Buzz, old dear, because there ain't no Mr. Bezzler. That was me kidding you along under an assumed name. Six thousand dollars! Shame on you, you dirty crook—your mine ain't worth six cents and you know it, too. There ain't enough gold in it to plate a collar button; in fact, there never was. Well, Buzz, slip my regards to Yukon [illegible].

* *

The League of Nations.

Mr. and Mrs. Bruno Andersen,
Chicago, Ill.

Dear Friends: Every time me and my wife gallops over to your wigwam you always drag out your ten months old son and display him in a very proud manner, and we always tell you how cute the little rascal is. We never fail to remark that we wish we had him. To be frank with you, folks, we are tickled cock-eyed that we ain't got him, because my wife is German-American and I am Scotch-American, so what would we do with a little gink which is half [illegible]ish and half Irish? You can see for yourselves that it would be darned embarrassing. Anyhow, he cries too much.

* *

Landing Lindy.

Mr. Charlie Lindbergh,
Somewhere in America.

Dear Colonel: When you first announced that you intended to fly to Paris I laughed up my sleeve, because I figured you was just making a lot of noise. However, you did it and I understand your next deposit at the bank was large enough to make the Receiving Teller fall over unconscious. Then you decided to write a book, and this caused me to go into a regular spasm of mirth, because I have had lots of experience when it comes to writing books; in fact, my stomach ain't had the pleasure of and inquired about your mine. [illegible] shaking hands with a square meal since I became an author. Later on I learned that you collected about one hundred and fifty thousand bucks in royalties off your volume. Well, Charlie, old boy, you have knocked all the laughs out of my system, so I am thinking of trading my typewriter for an airplane and making a nonstop flight to the closest poorhouse.

* *

Meet the Wife.

Mrs. Erna C. Abel,
Palatine, Ill.

Dear Mother-in-law: It was just one year ago that I married your only daughter and you told me what a meek, gentle, patient, economical child she was. Remember? Well, yesterday she breezed out and bought two new dresses, a new bathing suit, six pairs of stockings, and a couple hats, and when I howled about it she slapped me between the ears with a patter of boiled ham an' cabbage. So meek . . . so gentle . . . so economical . . . BLAH!

GENTLEMEN OF LEISURE

CHICAGOANS who know their near-west side may recognise this scene at Monroe and Desplaines streets. There are always all sorts of unemployed chaps decorating the scenery there. Some of 'em really want a job and are just outa luck; but many more are perpetual idlers. These latter fellows patronize the employment offices that ship labor hither and yon, but mostly they're hopin' there will be no jobs available that suit their particular talents.

One Good Thing Leads to Another.

At a prize package sale recently where they were selling packages guaranteed to be worth a dollar, I was one of the first ten arriving and thereby received an extra package free.

One contained an article that was worth the dollar, no more, but the other had in it a coupon which entitled me to a seven piece tea set.

The tea set was really a work of art, probably worth many times a dollar. And as I bore it home proudly, I felt inspired to write of my bargain. If it brings me an additional two dollarsI will feel highly repaid for my initial outlay of one dollar.

A Dress for 43 Cents.

My best buy was made last summer when I was hunting for dress material for a frock and I came across a piece of orchid linen, 85 cents a yard quality, marked down to 15 cents because a bottle of red marking ink had been spilled on it.

I bought 2½ yards and by cutting the goods so the largest ink spot was carved out for the arm holes and spending another 5 cents for a skein of deep purple yarn for big lazy daisy stitches to cover the few remaining spatters, I completed a charming dress of good quality for 43 cents. G. W.

POOR LADDER TO CLIMB ON.

A Study in Contrasts of New and Old

Clever and Stunning Are the Effects Achieved in These Novelties

A group of old cups and saucers which, paradoxically, are the newest thing in which to serve afternoon tea or coffee. One is of Mizen, with a scene as fine as a miniature painted on its chaste white glaze. The other is English bone China.

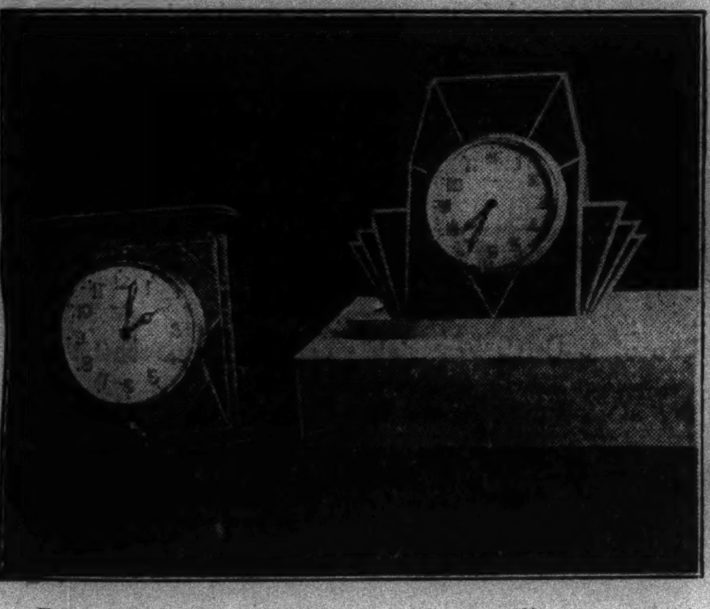
More antique cups, delightful in form and of old Staffordshire and like ancestry. They have withstood the knocks of several generations and their colors are gold and white, with pink and blue touches.

A shoe box for a modern apartment closet where space must be conserved. It holds two pairs of shoes and the matching stockings can fit nicely into the tray. It is of strong material and covered with bright paper.

Another shoe box of strong material, covered with bright paper, with a label to tell what it contains and a handle to pull it out of the rack. It is attractive enough to stand with its companions in the bedroom or can be placed on a closet shelf.

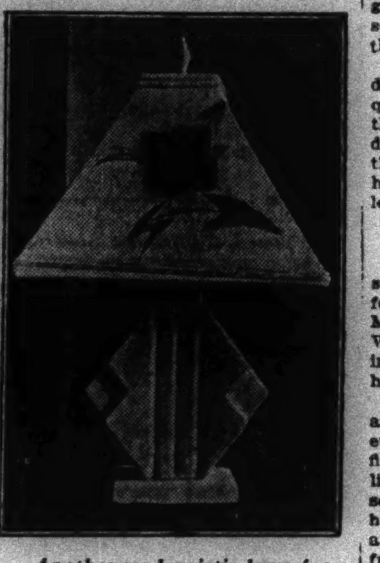
A stunning lamp for a man's modern bedroom—that place so difficult to find a suitable lamp for. It is of wood and painted. The shade is parchment and designed to accompany the base both in design and severity of form.

An antique cup of royal Vienna ware, gold lined, with a row of naturalistic flowers in purples, pinks, and mauves. An interesting contrast to the English cups.



Two modernistic clocks. The one for traveling is made of leather, tooled, and painted in a new way. The one for a mantel or desk is made of silver, enameled in jade green or black. Both have radiant dials.

A novelty in finger bowls, and practical, too. The plate and the holder are of silver plated metal and the bowl of colored glass. A charming thing for the less formal type of country house.



Another modernistic lamp for my lady's boudoir, this time delicate apple green pottery, with a silk shade so cleverly handled that it, too, looks as if it might be made of the pottery. And its transparency startles.

Working Hours of Queen Mary Have No Limit

Marble Halls Demand Her Constant Attention.

LONDON.—(AP)—Queen Mary of England dwells in marble halls, but her daily life is busier than the average typist who casts awestruck glances toward Buckingham palace as she hurries toward the timeclock every morning.

If the little typist knew it, her queen has already been up for an hour or two, attending household duties. By nine or ten o'clock in the morning Queen Mary has probably dealt with more correspondence than the typist will handle in an eight hour day. Her majesty, aged 61, is a tireless worker.

There is no trades union to limit the hours of the queen's working day. She rises at the call of a maid each day at 7 o'clock. Much of her correspondence consists of appeals for aid.

Excellent Housekeeper.

After disposing of her mail, Queen Mary turns to household matters. She is an excellent housekeeper, and no detail of the huge task of running Buckingham palace fails to reach her observant eye. Her sitting room is turned into an office for the remaining hours of the morning and there she receives her ladies in waiting, her housekeepers, her private secretaries, and even certain of her tradespeople. She gives her own orders and carefully checks the reports and expenditures.

The queen usually lunches at home. The hour is one of the few respites in a crowded day and is often brightened by the presence of the prince of Wales or Princess Mary, or of the beloved "Little Duchess" of York, who brings news of the latest cute sayings and doings of the baby Princess Elizabeth, to whom the queen is a devoted grandmother.

Dinner with King.

The afternoon is generally spent in public work. She can not enjoy the privilege of other women, of just running off for an afternoon at the movies and forgetting the petty irritations of the daily routine.

England sometimes wonders why more small dinner parties are not given at the palace and why their majesties do not accept more invitations to dine with friends. They suggest that the king and queen are unsocial in their tastes. Nothing is farther from the truth.

Dinner time is the one hour in the day that Queen Mary can spend quietly with the king, and after all, they are just a very human and very devoted couple who like to talk over the little family affairs nearest their hearts in a modicum of privacy, at least once in a while.

Loves to Go Shopping.

If queens sometimes allow themselves to "pretend," as most other folk do, no doubt at that hour Queen Mary pretends she is just Mrs. George Windsor with nothing on earth more important to do than to think of her husband.

Queen Mary shares with all womankind a love of shopping. Wherever she goes, she slips away at the first possible moment to poke about little antique shops in search of something for a particular corner of her home, or for her children, or for a friend. Any one receiving a gift from the queen knows it represents her majesty's personal thought.

Tax On Yankee Tourists Urged by Oxford Isis

OXFORD, England.—(AP)—A tax on American and other tourists is suggested by the "Isis," the Oxford university magazine, in the course of an editorial directed against overseas visitors.

The tax, the magazine suggests, should be devoted to the Oxford Preservation trust, which has been formed to prevent the encroachment of manufacturing plants into the university part of the city.

The "Isis" exclaims against "Oxford baring her beauties to the kodaks of Kansas and Khartoum, receiving nothing in return save paper bags. If tourists must come to Oxford we see absolutely no reason why they should not be obliged to pay for what they apparently consider a privilege. The manners of these tourists are apt to be boorish in the extreme."

Japan Adopts Our Jury Plan in Its Courts

TOKIO.—(AP)—The Anglo-American jury system will be adopted in Japanese courts in the fall of this year.

Courtrooms throughout the empire are being altered and renovated. In addition to the jury system, the Tokio district courts are planning an innovation probably unique in legal procedure.

An elevator will run from the cellrooms in the basement to the courtroom. When a criminal case is called the accused merely takes a seat on a chair in the elevator and a button does the rest. The elevator, forming an excellent prisoner's cage, rises and the person to be tried finds himself before judge and jury without moving.

The trial over, the judge waves his hand and the prisoner drops out of sight through the floor. The judicial authorities decided on this arrangement because the average defendant is subjected to "unreasonable strain" if forced to walk through a double row of curious spectators to reach the prisoners' dock.

Shoppers' Service Tales

Unsolicited Favor.

Last spring I bought a second hand portable typewriter at a stationery supply store, paying cash, though that was very little, as the machine was old and had no case. My husband was with me and I remarked that perhaps I'd better have paid more and gotten one with a case to make it handier in traveling.

The next day I was much surprised and gratified when the K—— delivery truck stopped at my door bringing me a brand new case which they explained was an extra they'd found in stock.

On a cash purchase I naturally wondered how they had discovered my address, but I learned that the salesman had made a note of it the previous day from my indorsement on the check, intending, if possible, to "scare me up" a case. Not being sure he could, he hadn't said a word to me about it.

I was greatly pleased at such thoughtfulness for, once the sale is made, unsolicited favors to customers are usually rather rare. G. M. S.

A Kindly Storekeeper.

Facing an eggless, butterless breakfast Saturday morning if I were turned down, I walked into a small delicatessen store one Friday night and asked for credit. The owner took my name, said he didn't need my address, and gave me what I needed without question, though I had visited his place but twice before.

Next day he could not cash my pay check, but told me not to worry about the bill and insisted that I accept a loan of five dollars to tide me over Sunday, as the banks were closed until Monday.

These two favors made me a steady cash customer at his store and I've often wondered since if I am the only one he had helped. So many people go there. Perhaps politeness does pay, after all. C. H. S.

Roumanian Jobless Sell Their Blood

CLUJ, Roumania.—(AP)—The sale of human blood here has become an active industry during the last two months. The sanitary authorities have discovered that 110 gallons of human blood have been bought and used for transfusion purposes during the two months' period. The current price of the blood is $25 for 1¾ pints. Investigation revealed that blood was brought principally from men who were out of work, about three-quarters of a pint being bought from each individual.

Doc, who happens to be president of the Illinois Golf club, thus starts the back seat driver as well as the putter argument all over again.

WELL, all the friends and neighbors joined in congratulating Mr. and Mrs. Frank P. Taubeler of 2626 South Tripp avenue, Lawndale, on the occasion of their silver wedding anniversary. They were remarried in Epiphany church and were attended by the original bridesmaids, Mrs. Annie Schorn and Mrs. Clara Martzell; also the original best men, John A. Boehler and John Washbish. And their daughter, Miss Orielda Taubeler, topped off the day by giving a surprise dinner for them in the parish church. Frank P. Boehler, brother of Mrs. Taubeler, was toastmaster. Associates of Mr. Taubeler in the county clerk's office, where he is register clerk in the marriage title department, presented him with twenty-five silver dollars. By and large, it was the happy occasion it deserved to be, and ye ed cherishes the hope there'll be many more silver wedding anniversaries like it in our village.

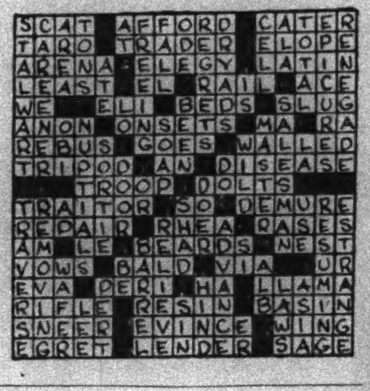
ANSWER TO LAST WEEK'S PUZZLE



Radio Waves to Tell of Icebergs in Torrid July

Washington, D. C., July 7.—(AP)—From the ice infested seas near Greenland and Labrador, radio will bring to the world in torrid July reports of scientific observations of ocean currents, weather conditions and plant life.

The coast guard patrol boat, which is to carry a crew of government oceanographers and "iceberg experts" into the perilous waters, will be equipped with the most modern radio apparatus. Communication will be maintained with amateurs and government shore stations in this country and with ships in the North Atlantic.

The expedition, under the command of Lieutenant Commander Edward H. leave Boston next week.

Arrangements have been made to maintain a regular schedule of communication with Station 1 MK of the American Radio Relay league at Hartford, Conn. Operators on the boat will work with the Hartford station on a wavelength of 41.93 meters between 10 p. m. and midnight on Monday, Wednesday and Friday nights. No definite schedule will be followed in communicating with amateurs, the boat broadcasting on 24 meters in the daytime and 36 meters at night.

Owing to the erratic quality of high frequency transmission caused by "skip distance" and other atmospheric phenomena, the coast guard vessel may be compelled to use different frequencies in various localities, Lieut. E. M. Webster, head of the radio division, says. For the transmission of shore messages on short waves, a vacuum tube set with master oscillator and power amplifier will be used.

All information received by the shore and amateur stations will be relayed to coast guard headquarters here. In addition to the high frequency transmitter, the boat will be equipped with a 200 watt set for communication on intermediate frequencies with ships.

SUNDAY, JULY 8

HENRY DIXON

HENRY DIXON'S HAWAIIAN TRIO TODAY AT ONE O'CLOCK . . . So appropriately languid music is the Hawaiian for early on Sunday afternoon—yet sharply defined and true—it pictures the cool shade of palm trees . . . or even an evening on a shadowy beach while the notes of the two guitars and the ukulele coquette with each other in a close, deft harmony. Henry Dixon plays one of the steel guitars, while his two native Hawaiian musicians play on the other guitar and ukulele. Tune in W-G-N at one o'clock.

You hear every detail of the game . . . the smack of the bat, the enthusiasm of the crowd. . . . "Ice Cold Pop" . . . each ball out of the box accounted for to you . . . follow each play of each player through W-G-N today at three.

THE WALTER PONTIUS-MARK LOVE RECITAL . . Two of W-G-N's best staff singers are in recital this afternoon at 1:25. They are Mark Love, basso, and Walter Pontius, tenor. Mr. Love is gifted with that deep, toneful bass voice so familiar to W-G-N listeners, and is able to sing those deep, toneful songs as only the best singers can. And Walter Pontius shares this program singing sweetly animated songs with dextrous ease . . . a remarkable tenor, this man Pontius.

Scotch Hero's Story on Radio Tomorrow Night

Robert the Bruce Feature of Program.

"Robert the Bruce," liberator and hero of Scotland, will feature the drama broadcast tomorrow night in the Family Party series over W-G-N, THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE station on the Drake hotel. The program will be one of Scottish songs and instrumental selections.

Famed in song and story as the founder of the new kingdom of Scotland, Robert the Bruce, from his wanderings as an outlaw in the mountains to his victory at Bannockburn and then on to his Irish and other wars, typified the Scottish love of liberty and independent nationality.

Is Crowned King.

Descended from Robert de Bruis, a Norman knight who accompanied William the Conqueror to England, this the eighth Robert the Bruce, was born July 11, 1274. After the death of "Red Comyn," whom he had stabbed in the church of the Minorite Friars at Dumfries, Bruce hastened to Lochmaben castle, assembled his vassals, and proclaimed his right to the throne. On March 27, 1306, he was crowned king at Scone, but was later forced to flee to the Highlands and thence to Ireland.

The memorable battle of Bannockburn, June 24, 1314, established him as Robert I. of Scotland. At this famous battle the Scots, to the rumble of drums and with the bagpipes playing "Hey Tutti Taiti," fought their way to freedom, defeating the English army of Edward II., more than 100,000 strong, with less than half that force.

Old Highland Bagpipe.

The bagpipes have furnished the military music of the Scots since their introduction to the British isles by the Romans. They have gladdened the weddings and all festivals. The pipes have also served to lighten labor, as on the Isle of Skye, in 1786, when the inhabitants were engaged in roadmaking and each party of laborers had its bagpiper. The oldest still in existence is a Highland bagpipe dated 1409.

The early Scottish minstrels are said to have told their stories and sung to the accompaniment of the harp, but it was the fiddle that became the popular accompaniment of song and the dance in Scotland.

British Stations to Broadcast Radio Moving Pictures

LONDON, July 7.—(AP)—British radio fans are to be given opportunity to see pictures by radio this fall.

J. L. Baird, inventor of the televisior, will make his first broadcast of moving pictures, accompanied by sound radio, in September. In the following month will take place the first broadcast of "Fultograph" pictures, the invention of Captain Otto Fulton.

The two ventures will at first be private, but as a result of experiments conducted with the British Broadcasting Corporation, it is probable that all the English broadcasting stations will be equipped with the new apparatus.

Photographs of the duchess of York and the prince of Wales have already been broadcast in London, as part of the experiments. It is planned to broadcast the photos of the various performers on the radio, pictures illustrating children's stories, fashion, plates, daily weather charts and photos giving news events of the day.

To broadcast the Baird system a television transmitting station has been completed on the roof of a building near Covent Garden. The studio will be completed within a few weeks. The initial Baird broadcast will cover a radius of fifty miles around London.

Blues Singer and Hawaiians on W-G-N

Billie Allen Hoff, "Blues" singer, and Henry Dixon's Hawaiians will headline the late evening program W-G-N, THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE station on the Drake hotel, is to present tomorrow night starting at 11:15 o'clock. The three Hawaiians will be heard in a group of Hawaiian selections, coupled with a popular number or two.

BIG RADIO PAY ROLL.

The staff of the British Broadcasting Corporation, it is said, includes about 1,000 persons, not counting artists.

OFF FOR VACATIONLAND

THIS big crowd of stockyards youngsters was found at 47th and Halsted streets waiting for the special street cars that were to take them to the North Western station where they were to embark for Camp Harlo-Alden, out at Algonquin. The United Charities sees to it that the youngsters get a bit of country life every summer. Algonquin, you know, is also the place where The Tribune maintains its summer camp where poor children and their tired mothers are given a dandy vacation every summer.

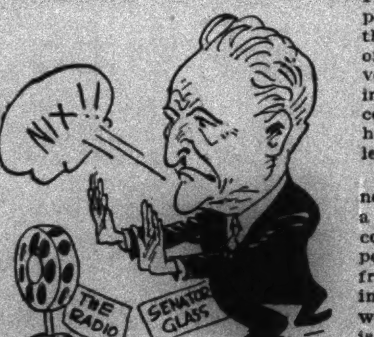
Inside the Loud Speaker

BY QUIN A. RYAN.

DID you ever think of how lost a broadcaster is when his radio station goes off the air for a few minutes? Every transmitter has its weak moments and quits transmitting for a spell, until the engineers and operators can make the necessary repairs.

When a station goes off the air the listeners, of course, can hear nothing in their tuning. Many of them believe the trouble lies in their own receivers and they tinker and tap all over the sets. They worry and fume, and there is no way for the broadcaster to inform his audience of what has happened.

One of those moments came just a half hour before the opening of the first night session of the Democratic convention at Houston. We were switched on and we greeted the audience, and we had uttered no more than a hundred words when we were informed over the telegraph wire that the transmitter back home was not functioning and that we were spilling our pearly words into space—but not on the air lanes.



We felt as though we were on a sinking ship. We could picture thousands of listeners seated at their sets, hearing our first few words and then finding that we had suddenly departed. There we were, waiting helplessly, with no way to tell them to stand by for just a few minutes and to relieve their worry about the suspected faults in their own sets.

SEN. CARTER GLASS of Virginia has peculiar notions of the radio. He strongly opposed holding evening sessions of the Democratic convention for the benefit of the radio audience. He declared that radio "is mostly static." He was refuting the plea of George T. Brennan, Chicago, Democratic leader, whose efforts brought about the night meetings for the sake of the vast listening public who could not sit before their receiving sets in the daytime.

Mr. Brennan said: "Let us give the farmers a chance to hear this speech over the radio. Let's put it into the homes of millions who will listen to the loud speakers in their homes at night. Let's put it on the radio, not during the day, when only a few are at home, but at night when the whole family is at home."

But although the Democrats did themselves some good, probably, by staging their keynote speech and platform oration at night, still it was to no advantage to put on innumerable seconding addresses to bore the listeners.

WE'D LIKE to tell you a little human interest story this morning. We suppose that there are many people in more routine and less glamorous professions who envy the lot of the radio announcer. True, there is a glamour about it, for us who taste of its theatricalism in the studios and its adventures in broadcasting the news events from distant places. But, personally we believe it is not that which fascinates us; it is the mail that comes from listeners after a feature broadcast.

Picture, if you will, only as a sidelight on another man's profession, our sitting through five hours on the Fourth of July reading letters from people seeking voluntarily to express their appreciation of the broadcasting of the Kansas City and Houston conventions. In five years of broadcasting we have received more letters for certain broadcasts, but never such human—and may we say?—moving letters.

Commentary letters to the radio announcer can assume an intimacy and a tenderness that are contained in the communications to no other public performer, we believe. They are friendly and appreciative beyond telling. They tell of how familiar and welcome a daily visitor the announcer is. All announcers receive them. They contain sincere invitations to visit homes or spend holidays or vacations with the listeners.

They are compensations enough for any effort that any man might extend. Of the thousands we have received over a period of years we have read them all and we have often wondered whether or not we should save them. As a young man we wonder whether they will bring feelings of cheer or sadness when we should read them over in our declining years.

The every day programs bring in a consistent total of listeners' letters, but a large feature broadcast, like the Kentucky Derby or the two conventions, really prompts the vast audience to note writing, and the majority of the writers, in the course of fulsome expressions, state that they have never before written to a radio station, although always intending and resolving to do so.

Consider, for instance, receiving in return for a few days' work a thousand warming letters like this—[and we print this only to illustrate the human story there is in this business, not through any sense of vanity]:

"God bless you, for we have just snapped off the radio after hearing that fine farewell from you, with the fatigue and strain showing so clearly in your friendly voice; and we feel my mother and I, after four days almost glued to our chairs before the loud speaker, that the curtain has gone down on the most colorful and entertaining and stirring drama that has yet crossed our lives.

"We want you to know from us, as you do from thousands of others, no doubt, how much pleasure you have given us. It is a wonderful thing that old people, and those who are tied at home through various circumstances, can sit down in their own living rooms and have the world brought to them by the simple turning of a switch, and a more wonderful thing that there are people like you, with the power and personal charm to make it all so graphic. We feel that we know all the actors in this great play, and that we have greeted them personally, though our eyes have not rested on them. God bless you!"

Damrosch's Lectures on Air Again This Fall

Chain Head Predicts More Features Will Follow.

An extension of the music recital lectures, broadcast during school hours last winter by Walter Damrosch and designed to assist music instruction in both public schools and colleges, is to be provided again during the next school year. The lectures will be broadcast over the system of the National Broadcasting company, which will make them available to virtually every schoolroom in the United States.

These music lectures, first tried out as an experimental venture in the use of radio in the schools, are expected to be followed by school hour courses in science, history, economics, and the languages. The results of the experimental series by Damrosch were so encouraging, according to M. H. Aylesworth, president of N. B. C., as not only to justify a continuance of the lectures next year on a more comprehensive schedule, but as actually to forecast a very definite field for radio in the field of pure education.

Applause Mail Heavy.

"The necessary arrangements for a series of recital lectures for students, to be given by Dr. Damrosch during the coming fall, winter, and spring, have been completed," Mr. Aylesworth states.

"The manner in which the radio audience responded to the experimental lectures by Dr. Damrosch last winter was little short of amazing. Thousands of letters from all section of the United States, testified to the fact that these concerts struck a responsive chord in the hearts of the people. Concrete results of Dr. Damrosch's work is evidenced by a distinct upward trend in the taste of broadcast audiences.

Radio's True Destiny.

"I believe the work of Dr. Damrosch along supplementary education lines is but the forerunner of radio education in many other fields. While broadcasting to date has developed principally along lines of entertainment, with enlightenment as a secondary feature, I look forward to its future progress largely along lines of enlightenment and education. The day is not far distant when leading scientists, historians, lecturers, and others will speak to the school children of the entire land through our broadcast networks. Not until this is done will radio have achieved its true destiny."

NEW VET ON COMMISSION.

In Louis G. Caldwell, its new chief counsel, the Federal Radio commission adds a third world war veteran to its roster. Caldwell served in a French artillery regiment. Commissioner Sam Pickard and Secretary Carl Butman were aviators, the former having had his plane shot down in action.

Lessons in Bridge

BY R. M. ROGERS.

ARTICLE XVI.

RULE OF ELEVEN.

As we have said before, the opening lead of a long suit against a suit for trump should be as follows: When holding the king-queen, the queen-jack-ten, the jack-ten-nine or ace-queen-jack at the top of the suit you should open with the top card; having ace-king at the top, open with the king; having king-jack-ten at the top, open with jack. In all other cases lead the fourth best. We are not overlooking the fact that if the long suit was headed by the ace you would seek some other opening unless the player had bid five or more, in which event you would open the suit with the ace, although the most valuable thing the ace can do is to kill a king and is generally held in reserve for that purpose.

R. M. ROGERS.

When a long suit is opened with the fourth best card that card is always a "spot" card and if you subtract the number of spots on the card from eleven, the remainder is the number of cards of the suit higher than the "spot" card led that are not in the hand of the opener. For example, one holds the king-jack-nine-six-four, from which the proper opening is the fourth best or the six spot. Subtracting six from eleven leaves five and there are just five cards higher than the six spot that are in the other three hands.

If you count the cards all together above the six spot, namely seven, eight, nine, ten, jack, queen, king, ace, a total of eight cards, and recall that the opener had three of them, this leaves five for the other three hands and subtracting six from eleven gives you that fact. If the three spot was led, three from eleven is eight, making eight cards higher than the three spot in the hands other than the leader's.

By using the rule of eleven the player of the hand, being able to see what higher cards there are in dummy and his own hand, can tell how many cards higher than the one led are in the leader's partner's hand and, by the process of elimination, in many instances, tell just what those cards are. Such knowledge is invaluable in determining whether or not to take a finesse.

The usefulness in play of the "eleven rule" has been recognized during the 35 years that it has been known.

It must not be taken for granted that when a principle is laid down its application will always win, but only that experience has shown that it will win practically 75 per cent of the time, perhaps more.

In the system of preferred leads which appeared in a recent article, a singleton was given a place although the short suit players of duplicate whist years ago in New York City after trying the system for several years found it would not win as against opening a long suit, but the short suit opening has its place.

It cannot be too often called to the attention of all players and particularly of beginners that every bid made and every play made or not made tells a story that the thinking player comprehends and enjoys. For example, there are eight quick tricks unless the king and queen of the same suit are separated, in which event there are only six quick tricks, and when the opening lead is made and the dummy displayed upon the board, the location of the aces and kings in the various hands can be calculated almost to a certainty.

The declarer should never play to the first lead until he has counted up the number of tricks that can be made from his own hand and dummy without any finessing and has assumed the location of the suits and the high cards and this can be done with a great deal of certainty from the bidding, the opening play, and the 26 cards he can see.

Another Old La Salle Theater Song Hit on W-G-N Thursday

Next Thursday night will see W-G-N, THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE station on the Drake hotel, reviving another of the old La Salle theater productions which made Will Hough, Frank Adams and Joe Howard famous. The new revival is "The Prince of Tonight," one of the lesser know works by this trio.

The same cast of players that has made this series of revivals so interesting will be at the microphone, working under the personal direction of Harry W. Spingold, whose producing genius has had much to do with the success of the series so far.

In planning his radio adaptations of these old successes, Mr. Spingold has had great success in retaining every ounce of inherent drama without sacrificing any of the best music or annoying the listener with too much dialogue. Mr. Spingold has been connected with the theater practically throughout his life, appearing at the age of six with the great Joseph Jefferson. He has spent years in stock and is well known as a producer.

President May Have Job Finding Member for Radio Commission

Washington, D. C., July 7.—What easterner will want an appointment to the radio commission whose active life may only last from September or October until February? This is the question which President Coolidge will have to face when he appoints a successor to Commissioner O. H. Caldwell of New York who has announced that he will resign in the fall.

In the entire administration of the President, no administrative organization has been as difficult to keep filled as the radio commission, Mr. Caldwell, with the exception of Judge Sykes, being the only original member of that body. Out of the five original members, two—Bullard and Dillon—have died and Bellows has resigned. Now Caldwell announces his resignation.

It is understood now that it is getting so that whenever any one mentions radio commission vacancies to President Coolidge, he throws up his hands. There is, of course, a possibility that congress may extend the active life of the commission another year, but this will not be definitely known until next February and, in the meantime, despite the uncertainty of it all, the position will have to be filled.

That being the case, although the President has all of New England to draw from, to say nothing of New York, New Jersey, Delaware, and Maryland, he may have his usual trouble in finding the right man. The salary is $10,000 a year during the actual life of the commission and thereafter $30 each day the commission is in session.

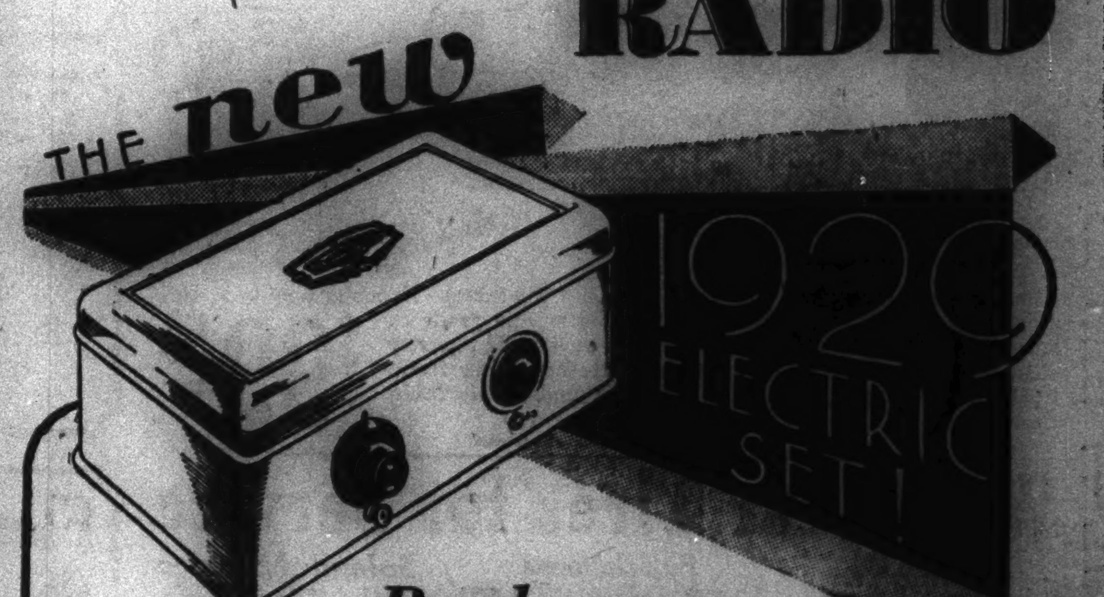
ATWATER KENT RADIO



Ready now—
Get it before the rush starts
OF COURSE you're going to have a self-contained electric set. Why not get it in time for the Tunney-Heeney fight, the baseball games, and all kinds of news and musical programs which are being broadcast through the summer?
All we have learned in twenty-six years of manufacturing, including six years of radio, is summed up in this new 1929 lamp-socket receiver. Everything that has made Atwater Kent Radio the choice of 1,600,000 families in the past is here, with improvements only recently made possible by laboratory research.
Now you have greater power, greater sensitivity. This new set hears programs that used to be too faint, too far away—and passes them on exactly as it hears them. Its reach is wide, its tone pure, its selectivity unusual, its compactness and beauty adapted to convenient placing in your home, its reliability assured by 222 factory tests or inspections before shipment.
In every respect this new Model 40 is a worthy successor of the Atwater Kent 37 (which went into 200,000 homes in four months, setting a new record of sales and satisfaction). Yet—because of ever-increasing demand the price is lower—only $77!
When you ask an Atwater Kent dealer for a home demonstration, remember that high quality and low price do go hand in hand—when your radio is an Atwater Kent.
$77 (without tubes)
Model 40 A. C. set. Satin-finished in brown and gold or deep golden bronze and gold. For 110-120 volt, 50-60 cycle alternating current. Requires six A. C. tubes and one rectifying tube, $77.
Also Model 42 A. C. set with automatic line voltage regulator, $86, and Model 44, an extra-powerful, extra-sensitive seven-tube A. C. set, $106.
Battery sets, $49 and $68 (less tubes and batteries).

More Plutocrats than Aristocrats Here, a Butler Says!

Rule No. 1 for Saleswomen: "No Flirting"

One Who Runs a Factory Offers Advice.

By Helen Dare

DON'TS for traveling saleswomen:

Don't try to make sales by flirtations.

Don't date your customers.

Don't become masculine.

"The thing to do," said Miss Anna Doetsch as she conducted me through her furniture factory at 1534 Altgeld street, "is to think like a man and act like a woman."

She speaks from an experience of more than ten years. Since her father's death she has carried on in the establishment he founded in a triple capacity—as secretary, treasurer, and active director of the selling organization.

* *

Like a Family Reunion.

But now she was showing me through the big plant—the mill, she calls it—and our tour was a sort of continuous family reunion.

The workmen looked up from their benches and machines and smiled their responses to her greetings. The smiles came from the heart. Many of the older employés had watched Anna grow up from childhood.

"Have you had your tonsils out yet?" she asked one.

"No," he replied, sheepishly.

"Well, you better do it next week. Get it over with while the weather's warm. It isn't so terrible, you know," and she smiled reassuringly as we passed on.

They come to her when they are sick, or in trouble, or in love.

"Yes," she said, "I even play Doris Blake to them."

* *

On Through the Factory.

We paused before a carving machine. Twenty-four needle-like knives whirring in the air to provide solid comfort for the tired business man or the weary housewife. Twenty-four squat little legs, some of them for that new parlor sofa you are going to buy next year, being carved in intricate designs. The operator guides his blunted tool in and out over the pattern and the myriad knives whirr in synchronization to his movements.

Then on to the gluing room, where each part is glued and then clamped together, and the stockroom, where the frames for hundreds of chairs and sofas are piled, looking like so many skeletons.

There were specimens of the Louis Quatorze and Louis Quinze periods, high backed Spanish and plain tuxedo styles, all meant to be overstuffed in the future, but looking quite starved at present.

One chair with arms carved into a lion's head, Miss Doetsch had nicknamed Bernard Shaw, because it looked far more like the lion of English letters than the king of the jungle.

Miss Doetsch is proud of her mill, of its cleanliness, its order, and most of all, of its brisk and busy atmosphere.

"It hurts me to see a factory or mill idle," she said. "During the fuelless days of the war, when we could

A FREAK OF BIRDLAND

A WHITE bluejay sounds all wrong, but that's what Mrs. Ben E. Buttles of 9515 South Robey street has perched on her finger. Whitey is so much a freak that the Lincoln park aviary would like to have him, and the famed Field museum has asked the privilege of stuffing him should he die suddenly. Whitey is a pale and pink-eyed specimen, but he has the crested topknot and saucy manners of his family and the bluejay call. Mrs. Buttles found him in a tree nest in her back yard with a cluster of regular bluejays.

Chicago's Rich Aren't So Good on the Tipping

They Think a Handshake Serves for Cash!

Tradition tells us that butlers never talk of their work, but Miss McLaughlin found some butlers in Chicago who were more than willing to shatter that tradition; and here is the third story of her series, "The Butler Broadcasts."

BY KATHLEEN M'LAUGHLIN.

NEXT time you spend the week end at a multi-millionaire's home, give the butler a handshake if you will, on leaving—but don't imagine you're getting away with anything if that is all you give him. [Nay, nay, the sentiment is not mine, but the butler's!]

For the ancient custom of crossing the palm with silver may have fallen upon evil day in these modern times, wherein what the social code outlines as proper is the least of the worries of those who are "in;" but remembrance of the largesse that once was theirs rankles in the bosoms of the serving craft, and tips their tongues with scorn of the ungenerous.

What Butlers Think of Tips.

To tip or not to tip is an individual problem—or privilege, as you will—and concerns me not at all except as it reflects the attitude of the butlers who talked with me about butlering, its assets and its liabilities, and about themselves and their employers.

It remained one of the most amusing episodes of the three interviews, that two of the trio embraced the opportunity to decry the newer type of house guest, who has given up tipping and taken up handshaking insofar as the butler is concerned.

One of the two who mourned has worked only in America. The other has had years of experience in the British Isles and on the continent.

"Why," advised the latter, "of all the people who have stayed at this house while I've been here the last few years, there are only three or four who have given me a tip. There's Mr. M——, who stayed over the week end several times and always gives

BRIGHTENS THE CORNER

FOR twenty years Mrs. Morton James, 4915 Ravenswood avenue, has planted and tended a flower garden across the street from her home on property adjoining the North Western railway tracks. Here she is, knee deep among the plants that this year have responded so splendidly to her labor.

[TRIBUNE Photo.]

JIM THE SMITHY

THERE aren't many blacksmiths left in Chicago, but just to prove they're not all gone we present Jim Giblin at work before his studio at 6137 South Ashland avenue. Jim was a sporting celebrity a few years back, when he served as a sparring partner for Ad Wolgast while Ad was world's champion of the little boxers.

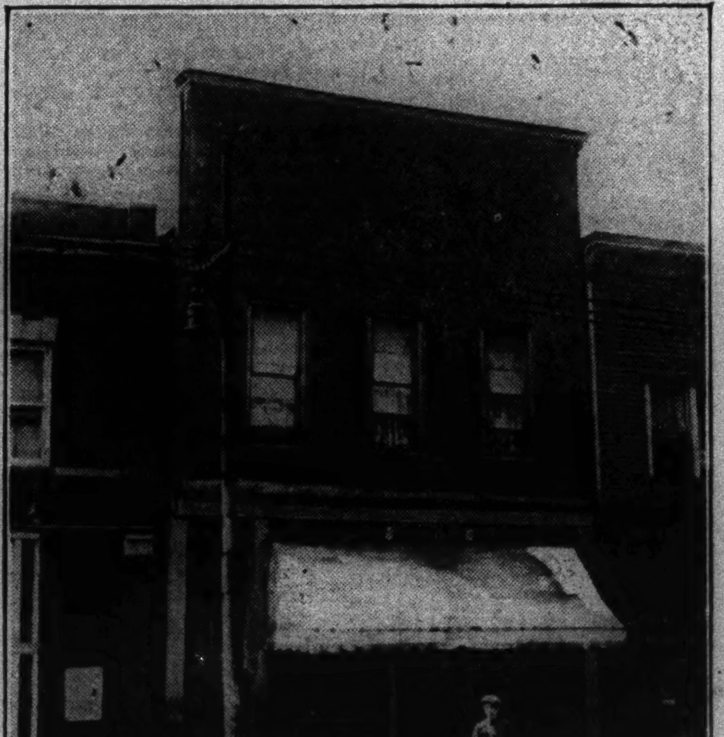
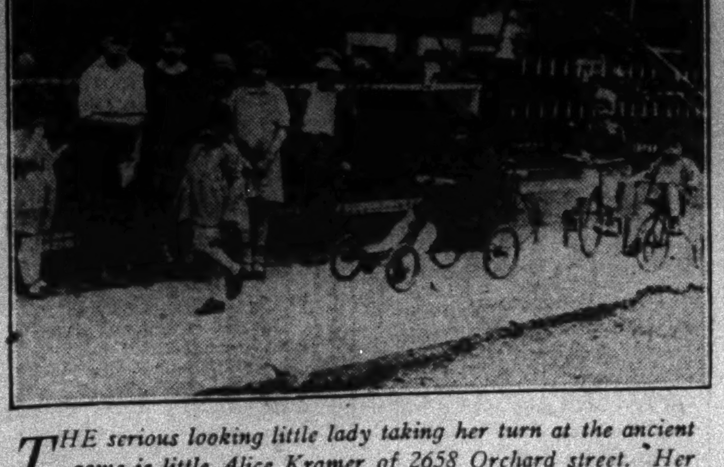
THE MARCH OF PROGRESS



ONCE the Cook county hospital at 14th and Canal streets, this wooden building was used for cholera patients in the epidemic of 1866. Forty years ago it was moved on river tugs to Archer and Bonfield, where it became the Bridgeport morgue. And now from within its ancient walls are dispensed soft drinks and other things.

[TRIBUNE Photo.]

HOP, SKIP, AND JUMP



THE serious looking little lady taking her turn at the ancient game is little Alice Kramer of 2658 Orchard street. Her little pals seem a bit awed in the presence of the magic camera that clicked to picture their vacation days.

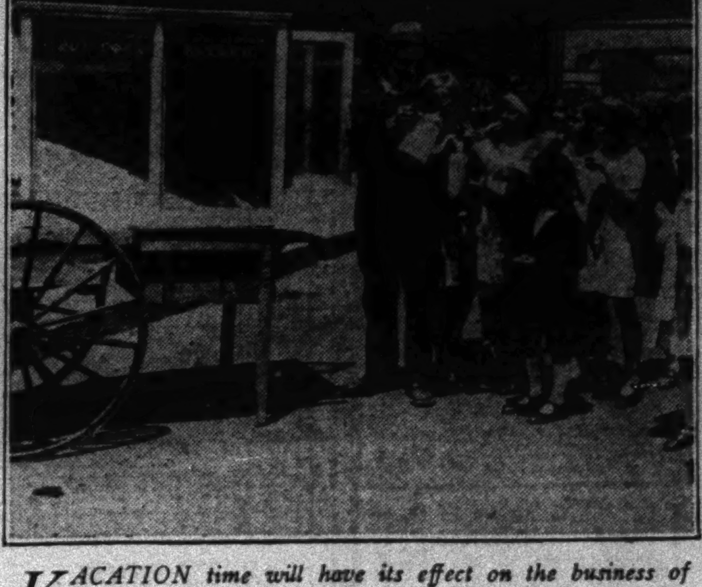
[TRIBUNE Photo.]

THE B. B. M. AT WORK

B. B. M. stands for Big Business Man, in this case Peter Bird of 320 South Aberdeen street. Peter, a traveling salesman, as it were, had pitched his business at 22d street and Wabash avenue when the Metropolitan camera happened along. He was specializing in those trick can openers that serve a hundred odd other purposes also, the photographer says. Not much crowding among the customers here.

[TRIBUNE Photo.]

THE POPCORN MAN



VACATION time will have its effect on the business of Kostas Antanalas because the youngsters attending the Graeme Stewart school, Sunnyside and Kenmore avenues, have been among his best popcorn customers. Kostas is shown pouring more butter on the confection, the suggestion for so doing having just come from one of his regular recess patrons.

GENTLEMEN OF LEISURE

CHICAGOANS who know their near-west side may recognize this scene at Monroe and Desplaines streets. There are always all sorts of unemployed chaps decorating the scenery there. Some of 'em really want a job and are just outa luck; but many more are perpetual idlers. These latter fellows patronize the employment offices that ship labor hither and yon, but mostly they're hopin' there will be no jobs available that suit their particular talents.

[TRIBUNE Photo.]

OLDEST MASCOT

NELLIE has been the pet of fire department squad No. 5, at 7533 Dobson avenue, for fourteen years. That qualifies her as the oldest mascot in the department. Five times in those fourteen years Nellie has been overcome by smoke and flames. Just a couple of Sundays back she was knocked out at a fire. With the champion here are Lieut. James Dwyer and Joseph Schott.

JOHN T. PIRIE, our well known merchant, who with his sons, John and Robert, is avoiding north shore mosquitoes this summer by bearding the lion in his den in darkest Africa, plans to return home, we learn, in August by way of gay Paree.

Arthur C. Hammond, indiscriminately known both in and out of the locker rooms as Doc, was talking golf—yes—again the other evening on the 5:18. "It is my contention," contended he, "that husbands should never play with their own wives in mixed foursomes. The best results are had, we find, when they are separated." Doc, who happens to be president of the Illinois Golf club, thus starts the back seat driver as well as the putter argument all over again.

OUR good citizens continue to sprout wings, particularly and naturally in Hyde Park. There is Miss Leda Richberg, the first woman to win a pilot's license in Illinois; there is Burt D. Burley, the flying druggist; there is the Ullem family at 5442 Ellis avenue, all four members being aviators, and there is Earl A. Sanborn of 809 East 40th street, secretary of the Southtown Aviation club, which is only three months old and numbers fifty amateur flyers. The old gray mare ain't what she used to be.

Miss Margaret Crane, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert G. Crane of 5537 West 64th place, and Charles Hill, son of Mr. and Mrs. George Hill of 6314 South Central avenue, who were married last Saturday in the administration building at Clearing, are enjoying their honeymoon at Mammoth Cave, Ky., and Niagara Falls.

WELL, all the friends and neighbors joined in congratulating Mr. and Mrs. Frank P. Taubeler of 2626 South Tripp avenue, Lawndale, on the occasion of their silver wedding anniversary. They were remarried in Epiphany church and were attended by the original bridesmaids, Mrs. Annie Schorn and Mrs. Clara Martzell; also the original best men, John A. Boehler and John Washbish. And their daughter, Miss Orielda Taubeler, topped off the day by giving a surprise dinner for them in the parish church. Frank P. Boehler, brother of Mrs. Taubeler, was toastmaster. Associates of Mr. Taubeler in the county clerk's office, where he is register clerk in the marriage title department, presented him with twenty-five silver dollars. By and large, it was the happy occasion it deserved to be, and ye ed cherishes the hope there'll be many more silver wedding anniversaries like it in our village.

BENJAMIN F. AFFLECK, w. k. manufacturer, was pleasantly surprised t'other evening when fifty of his employés, coming by specially chartered train, stealthily descended upon his Lake Forest home and burst into song all over his front lawn. Mr. Affleck, a gentleman if ever there was one, restrained himself for a polite interval to listen to the serenade, and then invited the guilty parties inside for refreshments, than which there is no better way of quelling a serenade.

Dr. G. G. Dowdall, chief surgeon of the Illinois Central railroad, has been elected president of the Midway Athletic club, 5844 Stony Island avenue. Other officers are Carl P. A jolly time was had by all except the fish at the annual unlimited perch dinner of the 55th Street Business Men's association, of which Arthur Bourgeau of 1218 East 55th street, is president. Some 200 members and their friends attended. The place was Phil Schmitt's, across the line in Indiana. The inimitable Jay Hays was responsible for the toastmastering.

The village passed a mild Fourth, thanks to the stern warnings and repressive measures by our vigilant police chief, Michael Hughes. The carnage was slight and there were no good shootings. Our chief deserves congratulations. In fact, compared with the course of machine gun events at an ordinary primary election, the day was a complete flop.

River Park district is feeling right smart these days, what with a $385,000 building program, to include three edifices to be completed by fall. One will be a pavilion, the other a field house, and the third an administration building. They were designed by Clarence Hatzfeld.

AN ORPHAN

Some cold hearted mother squirrel left this tiny baby on the window ledge at the home of Mrs. W. H. Brown, 6348 Stewart avenue. Mrs. Brown is trying to raise the orphan, using a diet of orange juice and milk fed through a medicine dropper. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

Academy Attracts Literati of France

PARIS.—(AP)—Increasing hostility in French literary circles toward the academy has seemed only to increase the number of persons seeking membership in that robed body. Twenty-seven candidates have entered their names for the seat vacated by the recent death of the dramatist, Francois de Curel.

Chicago's Rich Aren't So Good on the Tipping

They Think a Handshake Serves for Cash!

me $5 when he leaves; and that young Mr. B——, who doesn't forget me. But the others—

"Well, they just look at me sheepishly and shake hands and say, 'Goodbye, Bush, glad to have seen you again.' They seem to think it's such an honor to shake hands with them you'll forget all about the tip. Really, I don't like to criticize, but it does seem, as long as you've given them service and they've accepted hospitality, they'd at least remember you with whatever they could spare.

They Do Tip in England!

"It wasn't like that in England. Of course, there's no comparison in other things—I mean it's much easier to work here and things are far better and more convenient to work with—but there, a guest seldom if ever left a house without tipping the servants.

"That's the difference between an aristocrat and a plutocrat. If the aristocrat has only a little, he'll give you a little. If he hasn't any, he'll tell you he hasn't, and you know he would give it if he had it. But a plutocrat will put his hands in his pockets and jingle his money, and think you are presuming even to expect any."

As Bush put it, it did seem rather an imposition on the butlers and a reflection on American generosity.

"Are you implying," I asked him suspiciously, "that there are more plutocrats than aristocrats in Chicago?"

"Rather," acknowledged Bush, but with a twinkle in his brown eyes that purged the remark of anything caustic, "even if this is a democracy."

"Now, if only they would give a little, it would be appreciated. I remember one young chap who used to stay with a family in England where I was working. He hadn't much money, but he was fine to have around. He used to give me half a crown, and always treated me wonderfully. He's what I call a toff."

For the benefit of those who are not familiar with British slang, it might be explained that the comment was complimentary. A toff indicates a gentleman.

"There was one time," recalled Bush, "when he was broke. He felt terribly about it, and when he was leaving he said to me, 'Bush, this is really too bad, but I can't spare a thing this time.' And I had to cheer him up, he felt so badly about it. People like that you'd serve gladly. But here they bluff it through by shaking hands and not mentioning it, though I suppose some of them really don't have it to give."

Bush and I were seated in garden chairs on the lawn back of one of the most pretentious mansions in Lake Forest, as he discoursed on the relative merits of the Yanks and the British as tippers. By training and experience he is probably as efficient a servitor as could be found in metropolitan Chicago, and his employers, by virtue of wealth, culture, and long residence here, are counted among the creme de la creme of local society.

Sporting Set Best—and Worst!

A mutual acquaintance who knew something of his background had suggested that I might find it profitable to talk with him about his profession, since one of his colleagues had found my earlier series on maids not to his liking, and had ventured to set me right by talking, so to speak, from the butler's pantry. Bush, like Barkis, was willin', I found when he was approached on the topic. And here we were.

"I have worked," he told me impressively, "for all kinds of people. There's the sporting set, and the business set, and the social set—I've worked for them all. And the sporting set is the best—and the worst."

"Begin at the beginning," I requested. "I'd like to know all about how you have trained for your work, and what experiences you've had, for I've been told they are rather unusual."

Bush—which, by the way, isn't his name, his real identity being sacrificed to the wish of his employer—had two hours to spare. It was midafternoon of a glorious day, and to have time after my visit, he had togged himself out in his tuxedo before my arrival, that he might hurry through his own dinner and be prepared to serve the family later.

He is a slender man of middle age, slightly more than medium height, with black hair, the aforementioned twinkling brown eyes, and the scrupulously groomed appearance of the first class butler.

"Well," he recollected, "the beginning is when I was 9 years old, over in Munich, Germany. I was a page to an old, old lady whose nephew was a courtier at the court of Bavaria. She was 106 years old, and just how old she was when she died I couldn't say. I know I' stayed there three years, and she was still alive when I left.

"Being so old, she naturally was rather childish, and didn't go many places, but when she did I went with her. I have to laugh now when I remember how I was dressed. The outstanding thing about the costume was a huge bow tie that stuck out on either side of my chin. I had satin knee trousers, too, I remember, and a velvet hat with a feather.

Apprenticed to Hotel.

"Three years there, and then my father apprenticed me to one of the big hotels in Munich. I got fifteen marks a year, my clothes and board—and plenty of thrashings.

"There I was to learn to be a waiter, though of course it took quite a while to learn that. I was at first what you call in this country a bus boy. And never shall I forget the first big dinner at which I was allowed to serve in the dining room, as a real waiter. It was a tremendous thrill—the people, the great chandeliers, everything bustle and flurry!

"Then an English gentleman who had been staying at the hotel wanted to take a boy back with him to his home near London, to keep up his German. Eventually, after a long argument, I was allowed to go with him.

"Not long after we arrived at his home he took me with him to London, and somehow I got lost. I met another boy, stranded like myself, and after the manner of boys of fifteen, we swore eternal friendship. But both of us were broke, and when it came to starving together, the pact didn't hold. Neither of us could find work at any hotel in London, so finally, in desperation, I set out to walk the 126 miles back to my employer's home.

"It is evidence of a pretty good memory, I think, that I finally arrived at my destination, only getting off the road once. They were delighted to have me back, not knowing what had happened to me. And there I remained for several more years, learning from their butler and serving as a footman, and valeting the young man. There were just the two of them—himself and his mother.

Employer Like a Brother.

"From there I was hired by another young Englishman who had a luxurious private yacht, on which he spent about six months a year cruising the east coast of England and the rest of the time at his country place. But even that life, which I loved at first, grew monotonous, and I looked about again, though that man was always more like a big brother than an employer to me.

"Then came an offer from an English lady who was ambitious to break into politics. Her husband was immensely wealthy. He had gone over to Africa and established an importing shoe business, and had built her a magnificent home there. All the marble was imported from Aberdeen, Scotland, and the doorknobs were gold plated—I never saw it, but I've heard a great deal about it.

"She went out to Africa, but she stayed only two years, then came back to England and began her campaigns. I didn't want to work for her, so I named a price I didn't think she'd pay, but she hired me. I thought I'd try it out, but I'd been there only a short time when I went to her and said I was quitting.

"Well," she asked me, "what do you want to stay?" I told her I wanted her to employ another maid for the parlor work, that I'd take her houseboy into the butler's pantry and train him to serve, and that she should get another maid to assist the cook. She put everything in my hands and I reorganized that house and had it running like a top in no time.

He Bossed the House.

Soon we were entertaining large parties of her political friends, and I managed everything from start to finish. I bought all the wines and liquors, all the cigars and cigarets—a butler has to be a connoisseur on both. I carried the keys to all the linen and liquor closets, and when the family went to Scotland or France, as they did several times, I went ahead and rented a house and got everything in readiness. I took the silver with me, and what other supplies we needed to help out. There's no denying I was the majordomo of that house.

This woman had been nobody much—only the daughter of a Presbyterian minister—but she was quite successful in politics. I think she counted me an asset, for she said to me once when I had been there quite a while.

"Bush, I waited a long time for you, because you were the very man I wanted—that's why I paid what you asked when you came. I knew you could handle this place just the way you're doing it."

From which it may be inferred that Bush has all the pride of expert in his own accomplishments. It was apparent that nothing could please him more than a favorable comment on his butlering. And he relished acquainting me with the fact that Lady So-and-so, next door neighbor to the aspiring politician, never gave a garden party or other entertainment without borrowing him to help out, although she had not only a butler but also four footmen.

"And after that?" I wanted to know.

"After that came the sporting element," Bush resumed, "I became butler to the master of hounds of Herefordshire—a very responsible position. He was a very wealthy man [a master of hounds generally is, because of the work and expense involved, and it's an honorary job, with no salary], and I found I had much to learn.

"They kept on the butler they had for two weeks extra, just to teach me the things I didn't know—reds and whites, for instance. I'd never done reds and whites, and there's quite a trick to it."

"Reds and whites?" I puzzled, "what are they?"

"Red coats and white trousers," returned Bush, in a tone that indicated unmistakably that not to know that was to have achieved the depth of abysmal ignorance.

"O—reds and whites," I echoed lamely.

[The next installment curtails Bush's recital and brings him back to Chicago and his jobs here.]

LEAVE HOPE BEHIND.

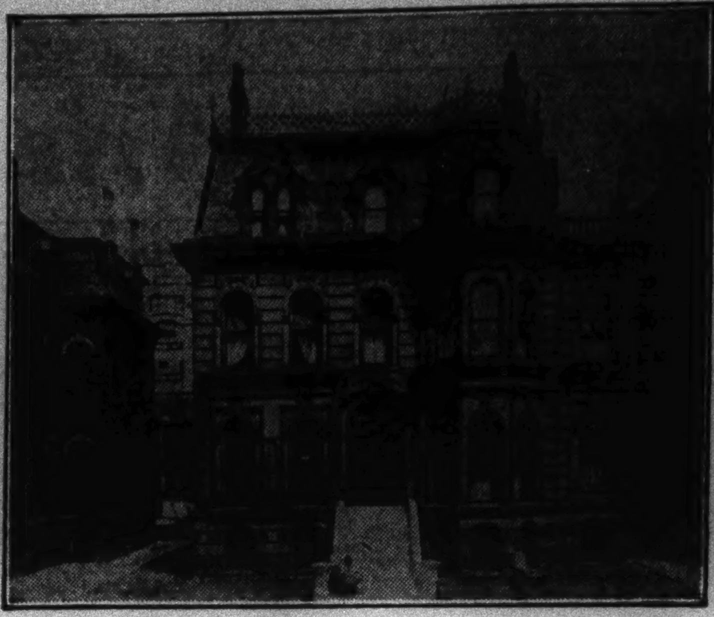
FAMOUS HOMES



THE old 19-room stone residence of Philip D. Armour, founder of the packing firm of Armour & Co., was a show place in its day. Now used as a rooming house, it still stands at 2115 Prairie avenue. The stables in the rear, where the Armour horses were kept, are elaborate, the woodwork being partly of mahogany and walnut. The historic property was recently purchased by a syndicate.

One-third the Price.

I am a reporter on a newspaper in my home town and call daily at the various stores to ask my friends for news items, thereby becoming well acquainted with the employés.

One day I stepped into one of the most up to date stores. They were unpacking some pretty rubber aprons of various hues. I had no idea of buying one, for I believed they were rather expensive. However, I asked the clerk what they were worth. She told me 50 cents. Thinking she was joking, I said, "Wrap up this one," selecting the most elaborate one in the lot. She then spoke to another clerk, the manager being absent from the store, and asked if he had received the bill for the aprons. He said he had; they were 50 cents. I accepted the package, paid for it, and walked out.

The next morning I again went into the store and was met by the smiling clerk who had sold me the apron and who said, "The apron you bought of me yesterday was a sure enough bargain, as the price was $1.50 instead of fifty cents."

I wanted to pay the difference, or return the apron, but the manager insisted that as it was their mistake I should keep the apron at the price they sold it. Now this is what I call a "real" bargain.

One Good Thing Leads to Another.

At a prize package sale recently where they were selling packages guaranteed to be worth a dollar, I was one of the first ten arriving and thereby received an extra package free.

One contained an article that was worth the dollar, no more, but the other had in it a coupon which entitled me to a seven piece tea set.

The tea set was really a work of art, probably worth many times a dollar. And as I bore it home proudly, I felt inspired to write of my bargain. If it brings me an additional two dollars I will feel highly repaid for my initial outlay of one dollar.

A Dress for 43 Cents.

My best buy was made last summer when I was hunting for dress material for a frock and I came across a piece of orchid linen, 85 cents a yard quality, marked down to 15 cents because a bottle of red marking ink had been spilled on it.

I bought 2½ yards and by cutting the goods so the largest ink spot was carved out for the arm holes and spending another 5 cents for a skein of deep purple yarn for big lazy daisy stitches to cover the few remaining spatters, I completed a charming dress of good quality for 43 cents. G. W.

Roumanian Jobless Sell Their Blood

CLUJ, Roumania.—(AP)—The sale of human blood here has become an active industry during the last two months. The military authorities have discovered that 110 gallons of human blood have been bought and used for transfusion purposes during the two months' period. The current price of the blood is $25 for 1¾ pints. Investigation revealed that blood was brought principally from men who were out of work, about three-quarters of a pint being bought from each individual.

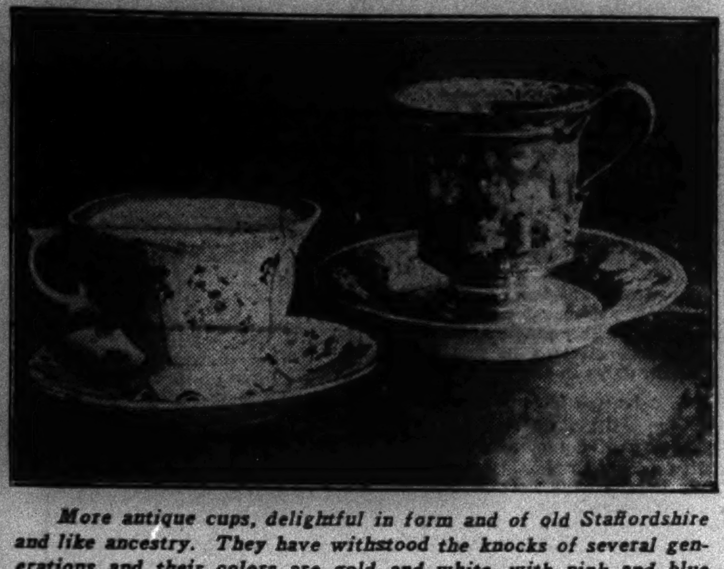
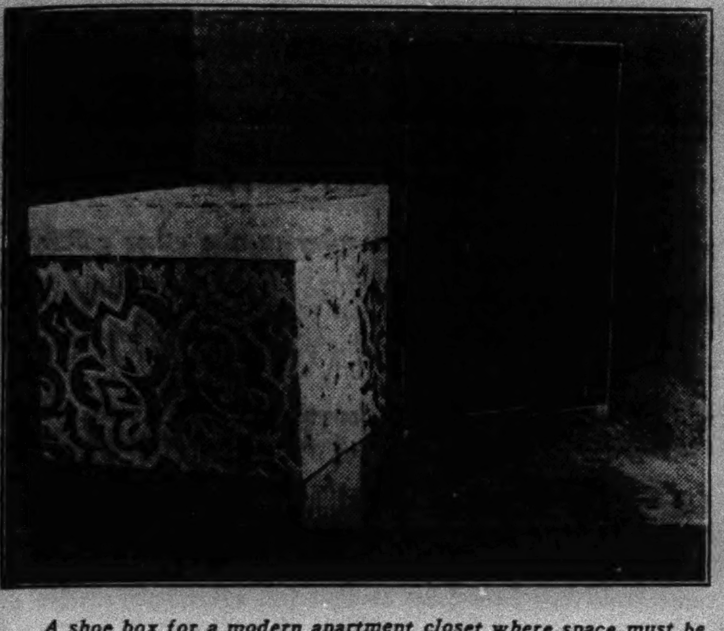
A Study in Contrasts of New and Old

Clever and Stunning Are the Effects Achieved in These Novelties

A group of old cups and saucers which, paradoxically, are the newest thing in which to serve afternoon tea or coffee. One is of Mizen, with a scene as fine as a miniature painted on its chaste white glaze. The other is English bone China.



More antique cups, delightful in form and of old Staffordshire and like ancestry. They have withstood the knocks of several generations and their colors are gold and white, with pink and blue touches.

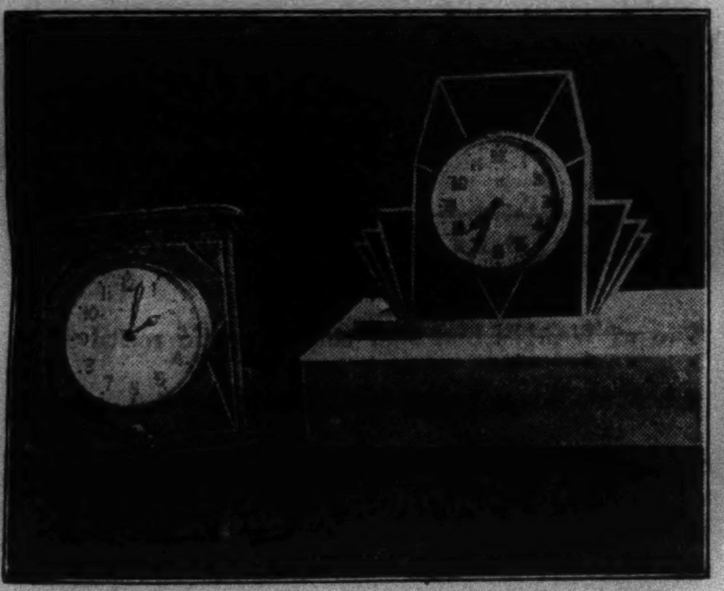


A shoe box for a modern apartment closet where space must be conserved. It holds two pairs of shoes and the matching stockings can fit nicely into the tray. It is of strong material and covered with bright paper.

Another shoe box of strong material, covered with bright paper, with a label to tell what it contains and a handle to pull it out of the rack. It is attractive enough to stand with its companions in the bedroom or can be placed on a closet shelf.

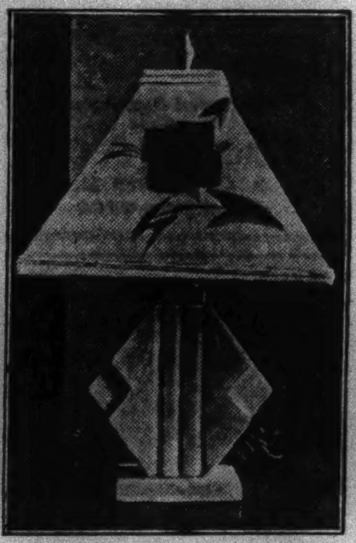
A stunning lamp for a man's modern bedroom—that place so difficult to find a suitable lamp for. It is of wood and painted. The shade is parchment and designed to accompany the base both in design and severity of form.

An antique cup of royal Vienna ware, gold lined, with a row of naturalistic flowers in purples, pinks, and mauves. An interesting contrast to the English cups.



Two modernistic clocks. The one for traveling is made of leather, tooled, and painted in a new way. The one for a mantel or desk is made of silver, enameled in jade green or black. Both have radiant dials.

A novelty in finger bowls, and practical, too. The plate and the holder are of silver plated metal and the bowl of colored glass. A charming thing for the less formal type of country house.



Another modernistic lamp for my lady's boudoir, this time delicate apple green pottery, with a silk shade so cleverly handled that it, too, looks as if it might be made of the pottery. And its transparency startles.

Venus de Milo of California Seeks Charity

Beauty Weds Not Wisely But Too Well.

MRS. MILO AMERCROMBIE-VON BRINCKEN-SWENSON, San Francisco society beauty, the center of several marital and countless legal sensations, is broke. She recently made this announcement in appealing to the Associated charities for aid for herself and two small children, Cecelia, five, and Laurence, three. These are Swenson's children. Mrs. Swenson has two other children by her first marriage to Baron Wilhelm von Brincken.

At the time Mrs. Swenson appealed to the charities for aid, she declared that while she has made her home with her stepfather and her mother, Mr. and Mrs. George A. MacGowan, at their fashionable San Mateo estate, this arrangement is no longer conductive to happiness.

Mrs. Swenson first attracted nationwide attention when, at the age of eighteen years, she was adjudged one of America's fifteen most beautiful women. Her fame and notoriety advanced by leaps and bounds, until today newspaper headline writers need only place the name "Milo" over a story and the entire populace knows at once who is meant.

Flees to Oregon.

The announcement by Mrs. Swenson that she is destitute follows close upon her latest escapade, when, after obtaining a divorce from Lieut Lyman K. Swenson of the United States navy, stationed at Washington, she was ordered to relinquish custody of the two children to him on the grounds that she was unfit as a mother.

Rather than obey this order Milo fled from the home of her mother with a governess and the children to Portland, Ore., there to await the time when Swenson's leave of absence should expire, and he would be forced to return to his command of a submarine stationed at San Pedro. She then contemplated journeying to Washington to make her home with wealthy relatives. Incidentally, the society gossips had it that the migration to the national capital was to be made also in order that she might be near Lieut. Commander Hugo Koehler, U. S. N., said to be the wealthiest officer in the navy, and to whom Mrs. Swenson announced her engagement or, rather, her mother, Mrs. MacGowan, announced it—in October, 1925.

First Marriage a Failure.

Milo Abercrombie's first marital venture was a decided failure. She was wooed ardently and passionately by Baron Wilhelm von Brincken, the dashing, dandified son of a wealthy farmer.

In 1918 the Baron was convicted of complicity in a German conspiracy to violate the neutrality of the United States in attempting to foment a revolution in India. He was sentenced to two years in the federal prison on McNeill's island. While he was doing his "jolt," the baroness, unable to withstand the taunts of friends, and being given the glacial shoulder in society, obtained a divorce.

Her maiden name was resumed and she gradually regained the social position which she had lost.

Two years later the society elite of San Francisco assembled at St. Mary's cathedral to witness the marriage of the baroness and Lieut. Swenson.

Hitch In Ceremony.

But there was a hitch. No priest appeared to tie the nuptial knot and, after waiting an hour, the wedding party dispersed to the tune only of Milo's sobs and the reproachful utterances of Mamma MacGowan.

It was learned that the interruption had been caused by an investigation conducted by a Catholic church court into certain phases of the status of von Brincken and his first wife.

The matter was cleared up, however, by the decision that the church would not recognize Von Brincken's divorce from the first wife; that in the eyes of the church the baron was still married to his first wife when he married Milo Abercrombie; therefore, the latter marriage was without clerical sanction, and so void; that Miss Abercrombie had never been married to the baron, so far as the church was concerned, albeit, there were two children from the union, and that she was now free to marry Swenson within the Catholic church.

The ceremony was performed Aug. 12, 1920, in the presence of a handful of guests who had been hastily summoned by telephone. The couple, from all reports, spent a joyous honeymoon.

Society Again Shocked.

Under orders of the government, Lieut. Swenson moved to various stations, and his wife followed him. However, just prior to the departure of the United States fleet from San Francisco for Australia in May, 1925, San Francisco society was shocked to learn that Mrs. Swenson had filed suit secretly for a divorce from Swenson.

With her second divorce, Mrs. Swenson faded into oblivion, and although Mrs. MacGowan tried many times to crash back into the fold with her daughter, society circles were polite but firm in striking the pair from their lists.

At one time, shortly after the divorce from Swenson, Mamma MacGowan and Milo appeared at a fashionable naval function given in honor of officers of the Pacific fleet. Presenting their invitations at the door, the two women attempted to sweep into the ballroom in a grand display of finery—for which later they were sued by a modiste.

The hostess pronounced the invitations forgeries, and Mrs. MacGowan and Mrs. Swenson were ejected, after making a scene.

The once radiant Milo Abercrombie-von Brincken-Swenson, having lost out in society, and barely missing a jail sentence for contempt of court in refusing to deliver the two children to Swenson, as awarded by court order, is now living in complete obscurity.

Following her appeal to the Associated charities, that organization communicated with naval officials in the east, but the navy department replied that the appeal did not call for official notice.

Working Hours of Queen Mary Have No Limit

Marble Halls Demand Her Constant Attention.

LONDON.—(AP)—Queen Mary of England dwells in marble halls, but her daily life is busier than the average typist who casts awestruck glances toward Buckingham palace as she hurries toward the timeclock every morning.

If the little typist knew it, her queen has already been up for an hour or two, attending household duties. By nine or ten o'clock in the morning Queen Mary has probably dealt with more correspondence than the typist will handle in an eight hour day. Her majesty, aged 61, is a tireless worker.

There is no trades union to limit the hours of the queen's working day. She rises at the call of a maid each day at 7 o'clock. Much of her correspondence consists of appeals for aid.

Excellent Housekeeper.

After disposing of her mail, Queen Mary turns to household matters. She is an excellent housekeeper, and no detail of the huge task of running Buckingham palace fails to reach her observant eye. Her sitting room is turned into an office for the remaining hours of the morning and there she receives her ladies in waiting, her housekeepers, her private secretaries, and even certain of her tradespeople. She gives her own orders and carefully checks the reports and expenditures.

The queen usually lunches at home. The hour is one of the few respites in a crowded day and is often brightened by the presence of the prince of Wales or Princess Mary, or of the beloved "Little Duchess" of York, who brings news of the latest cute sayings and doings of the baby Princess Elizabeth, to whom the queen is a devoted grandmother.

Dinner with King.

The afternoon is generally spent in public work. She can not enjoy the privilege of other women, of just running off for an afternoon at the movies and forgetting the petty irritations of the daily routine.

England sometimes wonders why more small dinner parties are not given at the palace and why their majesties do not accept more invitations to dine with friends. They suggest that the king and queen are unsocial in their tastes. Nothing is farther from the truth.

Dinner time is the one hour in the day that Queen Mary can spend quietly with the king, and after all, they are just a very human and very devoted couple who like to talk over the little family affairs nearest their hearts in a modicum of privacy, at least once in a while.

Loves to Go Shopping.

If queens sometimes allow themselves to "pretend," as most other folk do, no doubt at that hour Queen Mary pretends she is just Mrs. George Windsor with nothing on earth more important to do than to think of her husband.

Queen Mary shares with all womankind a love of shopping. Wherever she goes, she slips away at the first possible moment to poke about little antique shops in search of something for a particular corner of her home, or for her children, or for a friend. Any one receiving a gift from the queen knows it represents her majesty's personal thought.

INHERENT RECOMMENDATION.

A Chinese newspaper contained this letter from an applicant for work:

"Sir: I am Wang. I can drive a typewriter with good noise and my English is great. My last job has left itself from me, for the good reason that the large man has dead. It was on account of no fault of mind. So, honorable sirs, what about it? If I can be of big use to you, I will arrive on same date that you should guess."—Tid Bits.

Japan Adopts Our Jury Plan in Its Courts

TOKIO.—(AP)—The Anglo-American jury system will be adopted in Japanese courts in the fall of this year.

Courtrooms throughout the empire are being altered and renovated. In addition to the jury system, the Tokio district courts are planning an innovation probably unique in legal procedure.

An elevator will run from the cellrooms in the basement to the courtroom. When a criminal case is called the accused merely takes a seat on a chair in the elevator and a button does the rest. The elevator, forming an excellent prisoner's cage, rises and the person to be tried finds himself before judge and jury without moving.

The trial over, the judge waves his hand and the prisoner drops out of sight through the floor. The judicial authorities decided on this arrangement because the average defendant is subjected to "unreasonable strain" if forced to walk through a double row of curious spectators to reach the prisoners' dock.

Unsolicited Favor.

Last spring I bought a second hand portable typewriter at a stationery supply store, paying cash, though that was very little, as the machine was old and had no case. My husband was with me and I remarked that perhaps I'd better have paid more and gotten one with a case to make it handier in traveling.

The next day I was much surprised and gratified when the K—— delivery truck stopped at my door bringing me a brand new case which they explained was an extra they'd found in stock.

On a cash purchase I naturally wondered how they had discovered my address, but I learned that the salesman had made a note of it the previous day from my indorsement on the check, intending, if possible, to "scare me up" a case. Not being sure he could, he hadn't said a word to me about it.

I was greatly pleased at such thoughtfulness for, once the sale is made, unsolicited favors to customers are usually rather rare. G. M. S.

A Kindly Storekeeper.

Facing an eggless, butterless breakfast Saturday morning if I were turned down, I walked into a small delicatessen store one Friday night and asked for credit. The owner took my name, said he didn't need my address, and gave me what I needed without question, though I had visited his place but twice before.

Next day he could not cash my pay check, but told me not to worry about the bill and insisted that I accept a loan of five dollars to tide me over Sunday, as the banks were closed until Monday.

These two favors made me a steady cash customer at his store and I've often wondered since if I am the only one he had helped. So many people go there. Perhaps politeness does pay, after all. C. H. S.

Cuban Instructors to Tour the States

HAVANA, Cuba.—(AP)—Three parties of Cuban public school teachers will depart next month for the United States on an instructional tour of eastern schools. One group will go to Niagara Falls and the New England states. The second group, members of the school of pedagogy, will go to Washington, and the third, formed by 300 teachers, will visit Key West, Palm Beach, Miami, Daytonna, Tampa, and Ybor City.

WE GROW HAIR, NOT FUZZ

Why Am I Bald on the Top of My Head?

If there is hair on one part of your head there is no reason why there cannot be hair on the entire head. You often see men with an ugly bald spot on top and with a thick crop of hair on the sides and back. If your hair is in a similar condition see Dr. Weigert. He will show you how to grow a luxurious crop of hair on the entire head. If your case is accepted he will give you a written guarantee which provides that he is to refund your money if you're not satisfied. Dr. Weigert's scalp treatment is superior to any scalp treatment known to science. We grow hair, not fuzz. If you want to grow new hair you must first know the cause of baldness. We correct all scalp disorders. Both men and women treated.

AL UNLOADS HIS CONSCIENCE

And Indites a Sizzling Series of Crude Confessions

By Snowshoe Al.

I HAVE just finished reading the contents of six different "confession" magazines in which working girls bare their innermost secrets, truck drivers tell why they ain't millionaires, millionaires tell why they ain't truck drivers, etc., and I wish to say that these stories have left me in a very confessional mood, so I believe I shall now write a flock of confessions and henceforth have a clear conscience. Here goes:

Mr. Charles Bidwell, Druggist,
Chicago, Ill.

Dear Mr. Bidwell: You may remember that several days ago you ran a sale on alarm clocks; in fact, you put about two hundred of these sleep disturbers on display in one of your windows. You probably also remember that some villainous vagabond wound all the clocks when you wasn't looking and set the whole bunch to ring at nine o'clock p. m., daylight savings time. If you say you don't remember it you are most certainly a terrible liar, because I know for a fact that you spent an entire half hour galloping around in that window shutting the damn things off. Well, Charlie, old kid, my conscience is annoying me, and I have decided to inform you that Pat Hanley is not the gink which did it. I am the baby what created all the orchestral din. You're welcome.

* *

He Tells Her All.

To My Wife,
Same Address as Me.

Dear Madam: One day last week you came home from town much earlier than I expected, and therefore I wasn't home. I stuck my mug in the door an hour later and you asked me if I had went to the ball game. Remember?

I told you I had went to the public library to do some research work [whatever that means], and you says to me, "Aw, apple-grease, I bet you was at the game." Then I says to you, "Well, this is a helluva a world when a guy can't make anybody believe the truth, and now I wish I had went to the game because I am accused of it anyhow." And then you says to me, "Aw, don't get sore—I won't doubt your word any more." Remember? Well, I was at the ball game.

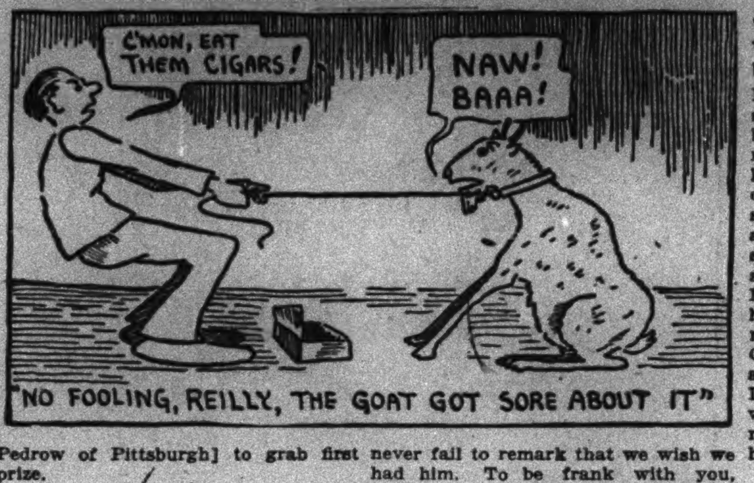
Furthermore, when our six goldfish died about a month ago I immediately convinced you that it was on account of the chlorine which the city shovels into our drinking water, although I knew right away that the reason the little brats croaked was because I had forgotten to feed them for almost two weeks. I'm sorry.

* *

Santa's Little Helper.

Bill Reilly, care Reilly's Café,
Burlington, Ia.

Dear Reilly: Every Christmas for the last six years I have sent you a beautiful necktie and you have sent me a large box of cigars. I always write to you and tell you how much I enjoyed the smokes, don't I? Well, the truth of the matter is, every time I lit one of them terrible hunks of dried spinach I always got cramps in my stomach and purple spots in front of my eyes. Last Christmas I gave a handful to our janitor and he retaliated by not giving us any heat for the next twelve weeks. I hate to say it, Reilly, but they are positively the only thing which I have ever saw a billy goat refuse to eat and, believe me, I have saw billy goats eat some awful junk. So hereafter, Reilly, I wish you would send me a pipe.



C'MON, EAT THEM CIGARS!
NAW! BAAA!

* *

The Dance of the Demons.

Mr. Harry Caplan, Promoter,
Somewhere in America.

Dear Mr. Caplan: A few weeks ago you promoted a Champion Dance Marathon in Chicago, and every day of the contest I would send a telegram in, reading as follows: "Tell Couple Number —— that they are sure to win. Good luck." Remember? Well, I considered that pair of dancers to be very dangerous, and I sent those telegrams in hopes that said couple would become so encouraged that they would work fast and break their legs, because I was really betting on Couple Number 100 [Lois Henry and James Pedrow of Pittsburgh] to grab first prize.

* *

Just a Memory.

To a Certain Chinese Restaurant Near Times Square,
New York, N. Y.

Dear Bunch of Slant Eyes: One evening five years ago a certain young man breezed into your food-factory and ordered a bowl of Chink Goulash, or Mongolian Hash, or Hongkong Garbage, or Chop Suey or whatever you choose to call it. You charged him entirely too much, you robbers, so when the young man walked out he took several things with him besides his opinion of your establishment. The things included the sugar bowl, salt and pepper shakers, the knife and fork, the napkin, the teacup, the ash tray, etc.; in fact, just as he was going through the door you discovered that he had forgotten to take the table along, so you all ran after him, evidently desiring to call this oversight to his attention. You gave up the pursuit somewhere in the vicinity of the Brooklyn Bridge. All right, you flock of Yellow Peril, send me the bill.

* *

A Gold Brick.

Mr. Buzzard Bill,
Fairbanks, Alaska.

Dear Buzz: When I left Alaska you had a phony gold mine which you hoped to sell some day to some rich sucker. Lately you have been doing a lot of corresponding with a Mr. M. Bezzler of this city, who wrote to you offered him your valuable workings for a measly six thousand dollars, and he recently wrote you and stated that he was coming right away to look at the property. Well, don't hold your breath till he gets there, Buzz, old dear, because there ain't no Mr. M. Bezzler. That was me kidding you along under an assumed name. Six thousand dollars! Shame on you, you dirty crook—your mine ain't worth six cents and you know it, too. There ain't enough gold in it to plate a cuff button; in fact, there never was. Well, Buzz, slip my regards to Yukon Pete.

* *

The League of Nations.

Mr. and Mrs. Bruno Andersen,
Chicago, Ill.

Dear Friends; Every time me and my wife gallops over to your wigwam you always drag out your ten months old son and display him in a very proud manner, and we always tell you how cute the little rascal is. We never fail to remark that we wish we had him. To be frank with you, folks, we are tickled cock-eyed that we ain't got him, because my wife is German-American and I am Scotch-American, so what would we want with a little gink which is half Danish and half Irish? You can see for yourselves that it would be damned embarrassing. Anyhow, he cries too much.

* *

Lauding Lindy.

Mr. Charlie Lindbergh,
Somewhere in America.

Dear Colonel: When you first announced that you intended to fly to Paris I laughed up my sleeve, because I figured you was just making a lot of noise. However, you did it and I understand your next deposit at the bank was large enough to make the Receiving Teller fall over unconscious. Then you decided to write a book, and this caused me to go into a regular spasm of mirth, because I have had lots of experience when it comes to writing books; in fact, my stomach ain't had the pleasure of shaking hands with a square meal since I became an author. Later on I learned that you collected about one hundred and fifty thousand bucks in royalties off your volume. Well, Charlie, old boy, you have knocked all the laughs out of my system, so I am thinking of trading my typewriter for an airplane and making a nonstop flight to the closest poorhouse.

* *

Meet the Wife.

Mrs. Erna C. Abel,
Palatine, Ill.

Dear Mother-in-law: It was just one year ago that I married your only daughter and you told me what a meek, gentle, patient, economical child she was. Remember? Well, yesterday she breezed out and bought two new dresses, a new bathing suit, six pairs of stockings, and a couple hats, and when I howled about it she slapped me between the ears with a patter of boiled ham an' cabbage. So meek . . . so gentle . . . so economical . . . BLAH!

Radio Waves to Tell of Icebergs in Torrid July

Washington, D. C., July 7.—(AP)—From the ice infested seas near Greenland and Labrador, radio will bring to the world in torrid July reports of scientific observations of ocean currents, weather conditions and plant life.

The coast guard patrol boat, which is to carry a crew of government oceanographers and "iceberg experts" into the perilous waters, will be equipped with the most modern radio apparatus. Communication will be maintained with amateurs and government shore stations in this country and with ships in the North Atlantic.

Leaves This Week.

The expedition, under the command of Lieutenant Commander Edward H. Smith, oceanographer, is scheduled to leave Boston next week.

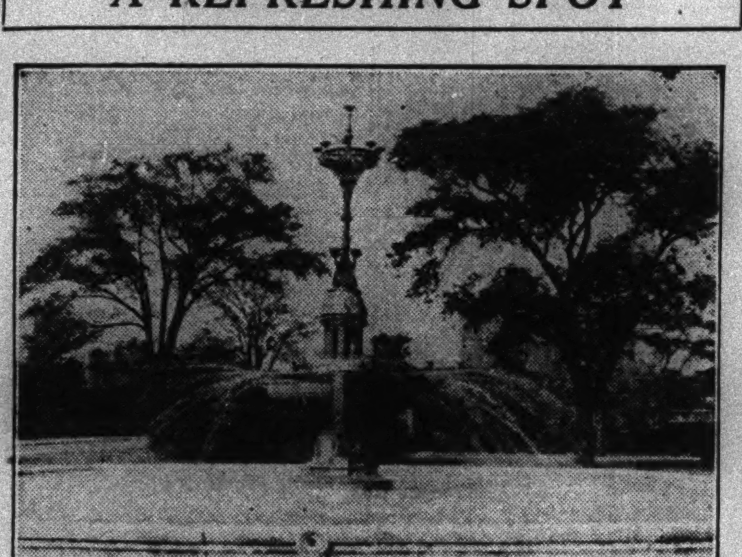
Arrangements have been made to maintain a regular schedule of communication with Station 1 MK of the American Radio Relay league at Hartford, Conn. Operators on the boat will work with the Hartford station on a wavelength of 41.93 meters between 10 p. m. and midnight on Monday, Wednesday and Friday nights. No definite schedule will be followed in communicating with amateurs, the boat broadcasting on 24 meters in the daytime and 36 meters at night.

Communicate with Ships.

Owing to the erratic quality of high frequency transmission caused by "skip distance" and other atmospheric phenomena, the coast guard vessel may be compelled to use different frequencies in various localities, Lieut. E. M. Webster, head of the radio division, says. For the transmission of shore messages on short waves, a vacuum tube set with master oscillator and power amplifier will be used.

All information received by the shore and amateur stations will be relayed to coast guard headquarters here. In addition to the high frequency transmitter, the boat will be equipped with a 200 watt set for communication on intermediate frequencies with ships. While the primary purpose of using radio will be communication, observations will be made of the effect of atmospheric conditions on transmission.

A REFRESHING SPOT



CHICAGO has prouder fountains today, but this scene in the northeast corner of Washington park still holds the affection of many oldtime residents. There was a day when visitors to the city considered it one of the "sights."

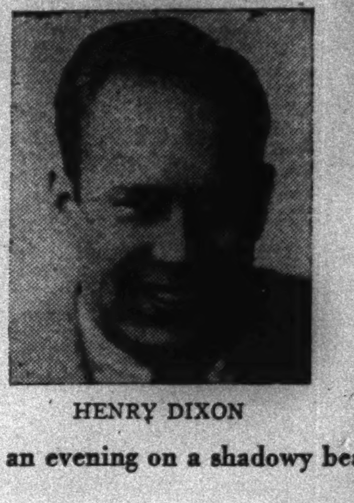
(416.4 Meters—720 Kilocycles)

SUNDAY, JULY 8



HENRY DIXON

HENRY DIXON'S HAWAIIAN TRIO TODAY AT ONE O'CLOCK . . .

So appropriately languid music is the Hawaiian for early on Sunday afternoon—yet sharply defined and true—it pictures the cool shade of palm trees . . . or even an evening on a shadowy beach while the notes of the two guitars and the ukulele coquette with each other, in a close, deft harmony. Henry Dixon plays one of the steel guitars, while his two native Hawaiian musicians play on the other guitar and ukulele. Tune in W-G-N at one o'clock.

THE THIRD GAME OF THE CUBS-BROOKLYN SERIES . . .

Quin Ryan is back! Today's game is the first Sunday game Quin has broadcast to you for a long time. Be there in your front room. You hear every detail of the game . . . the smack of the bat, the enthusiasm of the crowd. . . . "Ice Cold Pop" . . . each ball out of the box accounted for to you . . . follow each play of each player through W-G-N today at three.

THE WALTER PONTIUS-MARK LOVE RECITAL . .

Two of W-G-N's best staff singers are in recital this afternoon at 1:25. They are Mark Love, basso, and Walter Pontius, tenor. Mr. Love is gifted with that deep, toneful bass voice so familiar to W-G-N listeners, and is able to sing those deep, toneful songs as only the best singers can. And Walter Pontius shares this program singing sweetly animated songs with dextrous ease . . . a remarkable tenor, this man Pontius.

MIDNIGHT MARDI-GRAS

Whoops! ! ! A tuneful tangle of tearing tunes is ready to spout at 11 o'clock tonight at the Midnight Mardi-Gras! The dance band is throwing a party for you tonight . . . just listen . . . it's more than a good time.

100 CLUB . . .

You should belong! Hear W-G-N for 100 hours without another station being tuned in, and you are eligible for membership in W-G-N's 100 Club. Send us your name.

HAVE YOU TRIED A BAG OF CARAMELS?

Sterling, Ill., June 27.
Chicago Tribune:

Is there anything on earth that would induce Quin Ryan to shut his mouth for just a few minutes when the band is playing, or some one is singing, or there are other proceedings at the convention? We can hear him any time. Would like to hear a little of what goes on at the convention hall.

AN EXASPERATED LISTENER.

ANOTHER BOW, QUIN

Rock Falls, Ill., June 28.
Mr. Quin Ryan:

Just a word of appreciation for the fine way you gave us the big convention, and to the Tribune for making it possible. The talks you gave about the persons, buildings, etc., were the things that transported the convention to us. Keep up the good work!

Scotch Hero's Story on Radio Tomorrow Night

Robert the Bruce Feature of Program.

"Robert the Bruce," liberator and hero of Scotland, will feature the drama broadcast tomorrow night in the Family Party series over W-G-N, THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE station on the Drake hotel. The program will be one of Scottish songs and instrumental selections.

Famed in song and story as the founder of the new kingdom of Scotland, Robert the Bruce, from his wanderings as an outlaw in the mountains to his victory at Bannockburn and then on to his Irish and other wars, typified the Scottish love of liberty and independent nationality.

Is Crowned King.

Descended from Robert de Bruis, a Norman knight who accompanied William the Conqueror to England, this the eighth Robert the Bruce, was born July 11, 1274. After the death of "Red Comyn," whom he had stabbed in the church of the Minorite Friars at Dumfries, Bruce hastened to Lochmaben castle, assembled his vassals, and proclaimed his right to the throne. On March 27, 1306, he was crowned king at Scone, but was later forced to flee to the Highlands and thence to Ireland.

The memorable battle of Bannockburn, June 24, 1314, established him as Robert I. of Scotland. At this famous battle the Scots, to the rumble of drums and with the bagpipes playing "Hey Tutti Taiti," fought their way to freedom, defeating the English army of Edward II., more than 100,000 strong, with less than half that force.

Old Highland Bagpipe.

The bagpipes have furnished the military music of the Scots since their introduction to the British isles by the Romans. They have gladdened the weddings and all festivals. The pipes have also served to lighten labor, as on the Isle of Skye, in 1786, when the inhabitants were engaged in roadmaking and each party of laborers had its bagpiper. The oldest still in existence is a Highland bagpipe dated 1409.

The early Scottish minstrels are said to have told their stories and sung to the accompaniment of the harp, but it was the fiddle that became the popular accompaniment of song and the dance in Scotland.

British Stations to Broadcast Radio Moving Pictures

LONDON, July 7.—(AP)—British radio fans are to be given opportunity to see pictures by radio this fall.

J. L. Baird, inventor of the televisior, will make his first broadcast of moving pictures, accompanied by sound radio, in September. In the following month will take place the first broadcast of "Fultograph" pictures, the invention of Captain Otto Fulton.

The two ventures will at first be private, but as a result of experiments conducted with the British Broadcasting Corporation, it is probable that all the English broadcasting stations will be equipped with the new apparatus.

Photographs of the duchess of York and the prince of Wales have already been broadcast in London, as part of the experiments. It is planned to broadcast the photos of the various performers on the radio, pictures illustrating children's stories, fashion, plates, daily weather charts and photos giving news events of the day.

To broadcast the Baird system a television transmitting station has been completed on the roof of a building near Covent Garden. The studio will be completed within a few weeks. The initial Baird broadcast will cover a radius of fifty miles around London.

Radio Fans Will Hear Herb and Al Get the Good News

The official notification of the presidential candidates will serve as the opening guns of the 1928 campaign insofar as the radio campaigns are concerned. Already plans are under way for country-wide hookups to carry these events to the homes of voters throughout the land and then the most interesting campaign of many of our lifetimes will be really underway.

Mr. Hoover will be notified the first week in August at Stanford university and in addition to this being a great event for the Pacific coast fans doubtless the network will be extended from coast-to-coast and from border-to-border.

It is a foregone conclusion that Gov. Al Smith will be notified at Albany, although at this writing the time and place have not been designated. Senator Charles Curtis will be notified at his home in Topeka and very likely Senator Joe Robinson at Little Rock, Ark.

OFF FOR VACATIONLAND

THIS big crowd of stockyards youngsters was found at 47th and Halsted streets waiting for the special street cars that were to take them to the North Western station where they were to embark for Camp Harlo-Alden, out at Algonquin. The United Charities sees to it that the youngsters get a bit of country life every summer. Algonquin, you know, is also the place where The Tribune maintains its summer camp where poor children and their tired mothers are given a dandy vacation every summer.

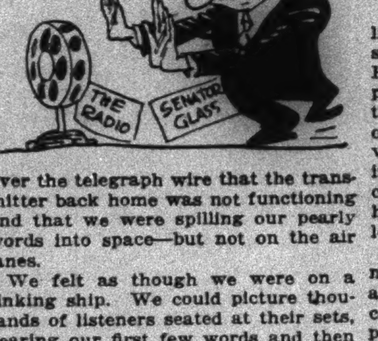
Inside the Loud Speaker

BY QUIN A. RYAN.

DID you ever think of how lost a broadcaster is when his radio station goes off the air for a few minutes? Every transmitter has its weak moments and quits transmitting for a spell, until the engineers and operators can make the necessary repairs.

When a station goes off the air the listeners, of course, can hear nothing in their tuning. Many of them believe the trouble lies in their own receivers and they tinker and tap all over the sets. They worry and fume, and there is no way for the broadcaster to inform his audience of what has happened.

One of those moments came just a half hour before the opening of the first night session of the Democratic convention at Houston. We were switched on and we greeted the audience, and we had uttered no more than a hundred words when we were informed over the telegraph wire that the transmitter back home was not functioning and that we were spilling our pearly words into space—but not on the air lanes.



We felt as though we were on a sinking ship. We could picture thousands of listeners seated at their sets, hearing our first few words and then finding that we had suddenly departed. There we were, waiting helplessly, with no way to tell them to stand by for just a few minutes and to relieve their worry about the suspected faults in their own sets.

SEN. CARTER GLASS of Virginia has peculiar notions of the radio. He strongly opposed holding evening sessions of the Democratic convention for the benefit of the radio audience. He declared that radio "is mostly static." He was refuting the plea of George T. Brennan, Chicago, Democratic leader, whose efforts brought about the night meetings for the sake of the vast listening public who could not sit before their receiving sets in the daytime.

Mr. Brennan said: "Let us give the farmers a chance to hear this speech over the radio. Let's put it into the homes of millions who will listen to the loud speakers in their homes at night. Let's put it on the radio, not during the day, when only a few are at home, but at night when the whole family is at home."

But although the Democrats did themselves some good, probably, by staging their keynote speech and platform oration at night, still it was to no advantage to put on innumerable seconding addresses to bore the listeners.

WE'D LIKE to tell you a little human interest story this morning. We suppose that there are many people in more routine and less glamorous professions who envy the lot of the radio announcer. True, there is a glamour about it, for us who taste of its theatricalism in the studios and its adventures in broadcasting the news events from distant places. But, personally, we believe it is not that which fascinates us; it is the mail that comes from listeners after a feature broadcast.

Picture, if you will, only as a sidelight on another man's profession, our sitting through five hours on the Fourth of July reading letters from people seeking voluntarily to express their appreciation of the broadcasting of the Kansas City and Houston conventions. In five years of broadcasting we have received more letters for certain broadcasts, but never such human—and may we say?—moving letters.

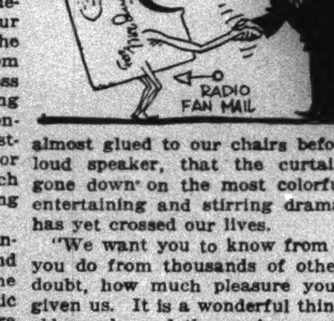
Commentary letters to the radio announcer can assume an intimacy and a tenderness that are contained in the communications to no other public performer, we believe. They are friendly and appreciative beyond telling. They tell of how familiar and welcome a daily visitor the announcer is. All announcers receive them. They contain sincere invitations to visit homes or spend holidays or vacations with the listeners.

They are compensations enough for any effort that any man might extend. Of the thousands we have received over a period of years we have read them all and we have often wondered whether or not we should save them. As a young man we wonder whether they will bring feelings of cheer or sadness when we should read them over in our declining years.

The every day programs bring in a consistent total of listeners' letters, but a large feature broadcast, like the Kentucky Derby or the two conventions, really prompts the vast audience to note writing, and the majority of the writers, in the course of fulsome expressions, state that they have never before written to a radio station, although always intending and resolving to do so.

Consider, for instance, receiving in return for a few days' work a thousand warming letters like this—[and we print this only to illustrate the human story there is in this business, not through any sense of vanity]:

"God bless you, for we have just snapped off the radio after hearing that fine farewell from you, with the fatigue and strain showing so clearly in your friendly voice; and we feel my mother and I, after four days almost glued to our chairs before the loud speaker, that the curtain has gone down on the most colorful and entertaining and stirring drama that has yet crossed our lives.



WHEN YOU'RE OUT OUR WAY DROP IN FOR DINNER
W-G-N
RADIO FAN MAIL

"We want you to know from us, as you do from thousands of others, no doubt, how much pleasure you have given us. It is a wonderful thing that old people, and those who are tied at home through various circumstances, can sit down in their own living rooms and have the world brought to them by the simple turning of a switch, and a more wonderful thing that there are people like you, with the power and personal charm to make it all so graphic. We feel that we know all the actors in this great play, and that we have greeted them personally, though our eyes have not rested on them. God bless you!"

That, ladies and gentlemen, is why we stay in radio.

Christy Mathewson's Son Is Now Heard Over Station WGY

Schenectady, N. Y., July 7.—Christy Mathewson, son of the late "Big Six," pitcher of the New York Giants, is the leading juvenile in WGY's weekly aviation playlets broadcast from the Schenectady airport. Mathewson is a student engineer of the General Electric company since his graduation a year ago from Bucknell. He made his first solo flight a few days ago and hopes within a short time to complete his flying lessons and win a commercial license.

Members of the Schenectady airport staff and Mathewson have been engaged by WGY to broadcast this series of flying lessons in dialogue form every Wednesday night at 8 o'clock. The flying instructor of the playlets is actually the flying instructor of the airport, Phil Lucas, with a long record of war-time and commercial flying. Victor Rickard, manager of the airport, has his part, as has William Luke, superintendent of the flying school.

Soprano, Orchestra and Quartet Will Give W-G-N Program

Madame Belle Forbes Cutter, lyric soprano, will be heard again over W-G-N, THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE station on the Drake hotel, next Tuesday night between 9 and 10 o'clock. In addition to solo selections she will sing with the W-G-N Male Quartet, whose membership consists of Walter Pontius and Gilbert Ford, tenors; Bryce Talbot, baritone, and Mark Love, basso.

The program will also be occupied with orchestral selections by the W-G-N concert orchestra under the direction of Gaston du Moulin. Both Mme. Cutter and the male quartet will sing a number of their selections to orchestral accompaniment.

Damrosch's Lectures on Air Again This Fall

Chain Head Predicts More Features Will Follow.

An extension of the music recital lectures, broadcast during school hours last winter by Walter Damrosch and designed to assist music instruction in both public schools and colleges, is to be provided again during the next school year. The lectures will be broadcast over the system of the National Broadcasting company, which will make them available to virtually every schoolroom in the United States.

These music lectures, first tried out as an experimental venture in the use of radio in the schools, are expected to be followed by school hour courses in science, history, economics, and the languages. The results of the experimental series by Damrosch were so encouraging, according to M. H. Aylesworth, president of N. B. C., as not only to justify a continuance of the lectures next year on a more comprehensive schedule, but as actually to forecast a very definite field for radio in the field of pure education.

Applause Mail Heavy.

"The necessary arrangements for a series of recital lectures for students, to be given by Dr. Damrosch during the coming fall, winter, and spring, have been completed," Mr. Aylesworth states.

"The manner in which the radio audience responded to the experimental lectures by Dr. Damrosch last winter was little short of amazing. Thousands of letters from all section of the United States, testified to the fact that these concerts struck a responsive chord in the hearts of the people. Concrete results of Dr. Damrosch's work is evidenced by a distinct upward trend in the taste of broadcast audiences.

Radio's True Destiny.

"I believe the work of Dr. Damrosch along supplementary education lines is but the forerunner of radio education in many other fields. While broadcasting to date has developed principally along lines of entertainment, with enlightenment as a secondary feature, I look forward to its future progress largely along lines of enlightenment and education. The day is not far distant when leading scientists, historians, lecturers, and others will speak to the school children of the entire land through our broadcast networks. Not until this is done will radio have achieved its true destiny."

Stations Listed for Removal Have Hearing Tomorrow

Washington, D. C., July 7.—(AP)—Political and other extraneous influences will be ignored by the federal radio commission in considering appeals of broadcasting stations slated for elimination Aug. 1, Judge Ira E. Robinson, chairman of the commission, has indicated.

The cases of individual stations will be judged solely on their merits as shown by operation in the public interest, Judge Robinson says. While charges of favoritism have been made and members of congress, politicians and others have interceded with the commission in behalf of affected broadcasters, Judge Robinson declares he has told them that station owners will have an equal opportunity to present their pleas at the hearings on Monday.

The commission believes it has the support of the listening public in its determination to reduce substantially the number of stations in order to improve radio reception. A large majority of the letters received from fans express approval of the elimination procedure. Followers of some of the stations listed for removal have protested.

Blues Singer and Hawaiians on W-G-N

Billie Allen Hoff, "Blues" singer, and Henry Dixon's Hawaiians will headline the late evening program W-G-N, THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE station on the Drake hotel, is to present tomorrow night starting at 11:15 o'clock. The three Hawaiians will be heard in a group of Hawaiian selections, coupled with a popular number or two.

BIG RADIO PAY ROLL.

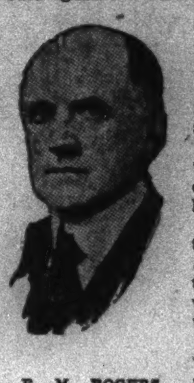
The staff of the British Broadcasting corporation, it is said, includes about 1,000 persons, not counting artists.

Lessons in Bridge

BY R. M. ROGERS.

ARTICLE XVI.

RULE OF ELEVEN.



R. M. ROGERS.

As we have said before, the opening lead of a long suit against a suit for trump should be as follows: When holding the king-queen, the queen-jack-ten, the jack-ten-nine or ace-queen-jack at the top of the suit you should open with the top card; having ace-king at the top, open with the king; having king-jack-ten at the top, open with jack. In all other cases lead the fourth best. We are not overlooking the fact that if the long suit was headed by the ace you would seek some other opening unless the player had bid five or more, in which event you would open the suit with the ace, although the most valuable thing the ace can do is to kill a king and is generally held in reserve for that purpose.

When a long suit is opened with the fourth best card that card is always a "spot" card and if you subtract the number of spots on the card from eleven, the remainder is the number of cards of the suit higher than the "spot" card led that are not in the hand of the opener. For example, one holds the king-jack-nine-six-four, from which the proper opening is the fourth best or the six spot. Subtracting six from eleven leaves five and there are just five cards higher than the six spot that are in the other three hands.

If you count the cards all together above the six spot, namely seven, eight, nine, ten, jack, queen, king, ace, a total of eight cards, and recall that the opener had three of them, this leaves five for the other three hands and subtracting six from eleven gives you that fact. If the three spot was led, three from eleven is eight, making eight cards higher than the three spot in the hands other than the leader's.

By using the rule of eleven the player of the hand, being able to see what higher cards there are in dummy and his own hand, can tell how many cards higher than the one led are in the leader's partner's hand and, by the process of elimination, in many instances, tell just what those cards are. Such knowledge is invaluable in determining whether or not to take a finesse.

The usefulness in play of the "eleven rule" has been recognized during the 35 years that it has been known.

It must not be taken for granted that when a principle is laid down its application will always win, but only that experience has shown that it will win practically 75 per cent of the time, perhaps more.

In the system of preferred leads which appeared in a recent article, a singleton was given a place although the short suit players of duplicate whist years ago in New York City after trying the system for several years found it would not win as against opening a long suit, but the short suit opening has its place.

It cannot be too often called to the attention of all players and particularly of beginners that every bid made and every play made or not made tells a story that the thinking player comprehends and enjoys. For example, there are eight quick tricks unless the king and queen of the same suit are separated, in which event there are only six quick tricks, and when the opening lead is made and the dummy displayed upon the board, the location of the aces and kings in the various hands can be calculated almost to a certainty.

The declarer should never play to the first lead until he has counted up the number of tricks that can be made from his own hand and dummy without any finessing and has assumed the location of the suits and the high cards and this can be done with a great deal of certainty from the bidding, the opening play, and the 26 cards he can see.

Another Old La Salle Theater Song Hit on W-G-N Thursday

Next Thursday night will see W-G-N, THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE station on the Drake hotel, reviving another of the old La Salle theater productions which made Will Hough, Frank Adams and Joe Howard famous. The new revival is "The Prince of Tonight," one of the lesser know works by this trio.

The same cast of players that has made this series of revivals so interesting will be at the microphone, working under the personal direction of Harry W. Spingold, whose producing genius has had much to do with the success of the series so far.

In planning his radio adaptations of these old successes, Mr. Spingold has had great success in retaining every ounce of inherent drama without sacrificing any of the best music or annoying the listener with too much dialogue. Mr. Spingold has been connected with the theater practically throughout his life, appearing at the age of six with the great Joseph Jefferson. He has spent years in stock and is well known as a producer.

ATWATER KENT RADIO

THE new 1929 ELECTRIC SET!

Ready now—

Get it before the rush starts

OF COURSE you're going to have a self-contained electric set. Why not get it in time for the Tunney-Heeney fight, the baseball games, and all kinds of news and musical programs which are being broadcast through the summer?

All we have learned in twenty-six years of manufacturing, including six years of radio, is summed up in this new 1929 lamp-socket receiver. Everything that has made Atwater Kent Radio the choice of 1,600,000 families in the past is here, with improvements only recently made possible by laboratory research.

Now you have greater power, greater sensitivity. This new set hears programs that used to be too faint, too far away—and passes them on exactly as it hears them. Its reach is wide, its tone pure, its selectivity unusual, its compactness and beauty adapted to convenient placing in your home, its reliability assured by 222 factory tests or inspections before shipment.

In every respect this new Model 40 is a worthy successor of the Atwater Kent 37 (which went into 200,000 homes in four months, setting a new record of sales and satisfaction). Yet—because of ever-increasing demand the price is lower—only $77!

(without tubes)

Model 40 A. C. set. Satin-finished in brown and gold or deep golden bronze and gold. For 110-120 volt, 50-60 cycle alternating current. Requires six A. C. tubes and one rectifying tube, $77.

Also Model 42 A. C. set with automatic line voltage regulator, $86, and Model 44, an extra-powerful, extra-sensitive seven-tube A. C. set, $106.

Battery sets, $49 and $68 (less tubes and batteries).

When you ask an Atwater Kent dealer for a home demonstration, remember that high quality and low price do go hand in hand—when your radio is an Atwater Kent.

Part of her job is to estimate the cost of each step in production, so that selling prices may be fairly gauged. She sells the unfinished frames almost entirely to wholesale upholsterers and interior decorators.

Born on North Side.

Miss Doetsch was born and raised on the north side of Chicago and has never left it. She lives now with her mother at 424 Melrose street. After graduating from Lake View High school, she took a business course, which her father had suggested as a matter of insurance.

"And it was," she said. "Father hadn't intended me to go to work, but I got a job at once when he was on the road. So when he died suddenly and my brother was too young to take his place, I did."

Her first task was to cover his territory on the road, selling. There were many consultations in the Doetsch household before she was allowed to go.

"I had never traveled unchaperoned before and mother was upset over the idea. But she gave her consent finally and I left, a bit nervous myself."

She made good. She kept her father's old customers and even added new ones. They may have been surprised to find a shy but level-eyed young girl waiting to see them about selling furniture rather than buying it. But she sold, and they bought.

"They were all very kind to me on that first trip," she said. "They went out of their way to give me advice, something they wouldn't do to a man. He might resent it."

* *

"Vamps Don't Keep Customers."

From the start she made it a rule never to go out with her prospective buyers. She does not consider that this put her at a disadvantage with her male competitors, who could and did show their prospects a gay time.

"A night owl may be up when the early bird comes along," is her thought on the subject, "but he's too sleepy to be a match for him or her.

"And women who try to make a sale by vamping may make that particular sale, but will not keep a steady customer."

Not content with the necessary traveling on her spring and fall trips, she spends most of her vacations searching out the parts of the country she cannot reach on business, particularly the mountains.

Last year Europe was her goal, and although she didn't forget to note down new ideas in furniture, the wardrobe she picked up in Paris thrilled her far more. For Miss Doetsch may have a man's job and be all business in business hours, yet she doesn't miss the latest in feminine fads and fashions. When beige is in you may be sure she wears beige, and when they are attaching fur around the cuffs, she is not wearing it about her neck.

Think Like Man, Act Like Woman.

Femininity, she thinks, is something women should not cast aside merely because they are in business. And if clothes are important to the business man, they are just as important to the business woman.

"It is foolish," she said, "for a woman to acquire a gruff voice and a forbidding masculine manner—the less admirable qualities of a man. By that I don't mean she should capitalize on her sex, but on the good qualities that go with it. What I try to do is think like a man and act like a woman."

If women are interested in manufacturing, Miss Doetsch thinks they have an equal chance with men.

"It is not a question of man against woman," she said, "but of brains against brains."

* *

"Art Moderne."

As I was leaving a New York buyer dropped in. She showed him her samples of modern art. But they call it "art moderne," and the last is pronounced mow-dairn. Miss Doetsch thought it ought to go over big in a modified form but admitted she didn't car for these new chairs that looked "like coffins standing on end."

But the buyer wasn't so sure.

"They might go crazy over it," he said, "and then again they might prefer looking at it to buying it. You never can tell," this with a sly grin at Miss Doetsch, "what these women are going to do."

SHE KNEW SOMETHING.

There's no use to try to joke with a woman. The other day Jones heard a pretty good conundrum and decided to try it on his wife.

"Do you know why I am like a mule?" he asked her when he went home.

"No," she replied, promptly. "I know you are, but I don't know why."—Open Road.

ONE VICTIM, TWO SATISFIED.

"A fellow just told me I look like you."

"Where is he? I'll punch his head!"

"I've punched his head."—Answers.

INSTRUCTION.

FOR YOU . . . . A FREE DEMONSTRATION LESSON IN FRENCH, SPANISH, GERMAN, ITALIAN, OR ENGLISH.

Write, call, or phone Harrison 0392 and we'll arrange a demonstration lesson for you at any time to suit your convenience. To prove to you that you can master any modern language easily and rapidly without tedious poring over books and intricate rules of grammar, we invite you to accept this free offer. We want to show you that language mastery can be made fascinating and interesting . . . that the Berlitz Method has made it that. And we'll show you how much faster you progress when you study with expert NATIVE instructors. You'll be interested, too, in the way we rotate instructors so that you never depend on any one person's mannerisms, accent, and voice inflections. If you accept this offer, we'll promise you the most interesting hour you've spent in many a day. And it won't cost you a penny. We're counting on you to accept . . . the telephone number is Harrison 0392.

Salesmen, Solicitors, Etc.

A BIG MAN MENTALLY.

A prominent Illinois corporation whose operations are international in their scope have grown so rapidly for the last 2 years that it has become necessary for us to promote a large number of star salesmen to executive positions. We have interviewed hundreds of men to pick the highest class selling organization we believe has even been assembled. We are not so much interested in salesmen as we are in men of an executive caliber. Our growth has been so phenomenal that our executive staff has not developed in keeping with our sales staff, and we have a number of openings for exceptional men to spend a short period of time learning our business and then step into a bigger position. We have approximately 400 men operating on our stales staff. Many of these men earn as high as $300 to $500 per week. Many of our territories are worth $2,500 to $10,000 per year on repeat business alone. This enables us to select our men very carefully before we give them gratis this amount of commission on previously worked up business. We are not interested unless you have previously earned $6,000 per year or better, unless you can make contact with big men and talk to them on a basis of equality, unless you have a record of honesty and integrity, unless you are between the ages of 30 and 45. Please do not waste our time or yours unless you have the above qualifications. You may phone the undersigned for an appointment and should you be able to interest us over the phone we will give you a personal interview. Superior 0836. Ask for Mr. R. H. Hill, or address Y O 345, Tribune.

A $35 WEEK STRAIGHT SALARY.

If you want a straight salary with a real opportunity for advancement, if you want outdoor city work during the summer, instead of being cooped up in some office or factory, if you want a permanent connection with a financially responsible loop concern where your earnings should constantly increase, if you believe in Chicago, are acquainted and live on the South Side and want to better yourself financially, call personally Monday, between 9 a. m. and 8 p. m.

Room 300, 10 S. La Salle.

A SECURITY SALESMAN.

LIBERAL DRAWING ACCOUNT AGAINST COMMISSION.

Will call only on answers to Tribune advertising. We sell an 8% security, interest payable monthly. Work all year round, all in the city. Must be a real closer, as leads are expensive. Must have a car.

AAA
SALES MANAGER.

If you have the qualifications of a real sales manager and would like to connect with one of the largest and best known firms in this field, our proposition will certainly interest you. We prefer actual organizing ability and knack of training and handling men to selling experience in our line. You will find congenial surroundings and will receive the kind of support from your co-workers and in advertising that produces results. The right man shall easily earn from $15,000 to $20,000 a year. Write in full details and state phone number. Address T. G. 420, Tribune.

ADVERTISING REPRESENTATIVE— A reorganization of sales force of high standing New York business paper, circulating nationally to large trade, makes exceptional opening in western territory with Chicago headquarters for the real business getter; progressive organization that values results; state experience, qualifications, minimum drawing account required against commissions. [illegible] ELECTRIC NEWS FOR R. E. MEN. THE BIGGEST SINCE THE ARMISTICE. Advance notice of pre-opening of the most beautiful $3,000,000 development in CHICAGO [at 6800 North] and due west of the famed DEVON-WESTERN DISTRICT.

YOUR SHIP COMES IN.

Here is the rainbow of hope for real estate men—the means of ending all your troubles and FINANCIAL WORRIES. Here is the kind of a deal you have hoped for—waited for—yes, even prayed for, during the past two years. If you want money—need money—will work for money—THEN READ ON.

BACK TO CHICAGO MOVEMENT.

My development represents a brand new field of operation in the choicest boom spot in America—C-H-I-C-A-G-O—backed up with millions of dollars and overripe for quick and very easy selling.

YOU NEED A BOOM SPOT.

You need a boom spot now for subdivision selling and CHICAGO is that boom spot. I have money, and I am known as a man who spends big money to do big things. I have one of the largest and best equipped real estate offices in the Loop. I am going to take in some good men with me and make them rich, as I have made others who associated with me during the past ten years. FIRST COME, FIRST SERVED—with the best I have to offer.

YOUR SUCCESS.

I will take on several hundred ambitious ladies and gentlemen to join a new sales force I am organizing, to sell out during the next six months my new 175 acre $3,000,000 CHICAGO—development, right in the heart of 41ST WARD. My new gigantic development incorporates approximately four miles of wide parkways fronting on 80 ft. and 100 ft. boulevards; one mile of business frontage on paved full section line.

PERMANENT BEAUTY.

Over 1,000 BEAUTIFUL TREES and 10,000 SHRUBS to be planted immediately, and every square foot of the entire 175 acre development to be landscaped and seeded with LAWN GRASS [no unsightly weeds]. Property to be maintained and cared for for FIVE YEARS. I don't forget my salesmen's customers. Large built up CHICAGO developments encircle the borders of my property. Homes and apartments of highest character, stores, banks, theaters, schools, churches. Three lines of transportation serve the property. A 930 acre PUBLIC PARK [about the size of Lincoln Park] and PUBLIC GOLF COURSES surround my new development. For my salesmen's convenience I have built a $5,000 administration building, with private closing rooms, electric lights, and telephones. MOTION PICTURES of this distinguished development is just another aid for my salesmen to close deals.

$250,000 PRE-OPENING SALES.

The first unit of this gigantic development opens July 15, but already OVER $250,000 IN RESERVATIONS have been made. Sounds like old times, eh? Well, a fortunate purchase for cash enables me to sell this property at LOW PRICES and terms that assure a quick sell-out. Imagine apartment lots at $995, in a highly restricted development that overlooks a 930 ACRE PUBLIC PARK AND 18 HOLE GOLF COURSE. No objectionable developments to kill your sales. EVERY SALE MULTIPLIES ITSELF. Listen! Practically all of my salesmen will be closing deals tonight and EVERY NIGHT.

10% DOWN—COMMISSION PAID.

Apartment Lots, $995.00—$99 cash. Business Lots $1,995—$199 cash. Don't stand in the way of your own success. Only cowards say, "I had no opportunity." Break loose from the tough, hard selling, FAR OUT, too high priced subdivisions, at half cash and 15c to 25c fare to Loop, as hard as nails to sell—and you know it.

HERE THE SALESMAN IS KING.

This message is from one of you, who has a record of FIGHTING IN THE INTEREST OF SALESMEN. For ten years I gave my organization only the best to sell. I never allowed my people to get caught on a SLOW ONE. I know and understand men and women and I know and understand what CO-OPERATION men and women need to succeed. That's why the men and women who work with me succeed big. The greatest co-operation, low prices [$995.00], easy terms, plenty of leads, automobiles, FREE LUNCH FOR YOURSELF AND CLIENTS are yours. In fact, I stand back of you with every form of co-operation.

I AM READY FOR YOU.

Come and see me next Monday evening, July 9, at 8:00 p. m. Be on time. Come with the expectation of hearing THE BIGGEST NEWS SINCE THE ARMISTICE. The men and women who will join with me at once will make BIG MONEY IMMEDIATELY. They will represent the highest paid sales people in CHICAGO. Monday I will show you how to earn a year's salary within the next 90 days. Now don't be afraid to come, fearing the "boss" might see you. Remember, cowards do not succeed. You will not take $1,000 FOR MY PLAN OF QUICK AND EASY SELLING.

MEN WHO WANT TO BETTER THEMSELVES. THIS IS FOR YOU. WE WILL PAY $75.00 TO $150.00 PER WEEK.

We put you in business without asking you to invest. We teach you the business and you earn while you learn. We supply the merchandise and you pay for it when you sell it. You work the same number of hours you do in the store, office or shop, and you earn twice as much money. We offer you a chance at permanency, with a continually increasing clientele and consequently increased earnings.

Hundreds of men have been pushed into prosperity by accepting our proposition. They've bought homes, automobiles, stocks, etc., with profits they have made with us.

Scores of men now occupying responsible executive positions got their first start right in this office. We are part of an international organization with branches everywhere, and every executive in this vast organization was promoted from the ranks. If you have executive ability, we can use you right away.

This Branch is over five years old. Many of our biggest earners have been here since the start. For these men, this will be the best year of all. Our business has doubled each year of the last five. We are now a three and a half million dollar company. Our Board of Directors individually are worth seventy-five million or more. The entire proposition breathes and breeds prosperity.

We need immediately fifteen men who can duplicate the following earnings:

On July 3rd Mr. M. made $69. It provided for a fine holiday for his whole family.

On July 2nd Mr. W., with us only a month, made $92. He formerly sold Real Estate.

On July 6th Mr. H made $92. Mr. H. has averaged over $75 per week with us for the last four years.

On July 5th twelve men out of this office earned between $40 and $70 each.

For the week ending July 7th fifty-two men earned in excess of $75 each, the largest amounts earned by most of them in any job ever held before joining us.

We need five men who can qualify for managerial positions. They must have the ability to organize territory, hire and train men, plan sales campaigns and just generally make themselves worth ten thousand dollars per year.

This is a working proposition. It's no place for a lazy man. It will pay more money to the man who forgets to watch the clock than any other occupation involving an equal amount of effort.

The work is dignified—our selling methods are unique, our product is advertised in such publications as the Ladies' Home Journal, Good Housekeeping, and Saturday Evening Post. The demand already is tremendous—is increasing by leaps and bounds. There never was a better time than right now to get in on this demand, to share in this prosperity.

Call Monday Morning.
Ask for Mr. Gallagher.

YOUNG MARRIED AND SINGLE MEN,
With or Without Selling Experience.
A REAL OPPORTUNITY.

If you were given a chance to get the privilege to sell a new idea, European Type Electrical Machine, the working unit of which weighs less than 2 pounds; that will dry clean everything from rugs to draperies, all upholstered furniture, over and under all furniture, without moving a thing, a device that at the same time it is cleaning and sanitizing, purifies the very air you breathe; that destroys moths, germs and bacteria; that dry cleans motor cars, clothing, furs and fine fabrics; that, in short, cleanses and purifies every room thoroughly and that effectually gets all dirt, dust and litter and hermetically seals it—you would gladly embrace such an opportunity, wouldn't you?

Well, we have precisely an electrical device that does all of this and more for you.

This device was developed by German scientists and engineers and has been sold abroad for 3 years. Thirty thousand were sold in England, France, and Germany in 1927; 30,000 so far this year.

One of America's best known, highly rated electrical concerns now owns the patents and is manufacturing it in U. S. A.

We want men who are earnestly seeking a chance to permanently make money, to better their present earnings and to gain prompt promotion.

You can earn while learning this business from $45 to $75 a week on commission basis, with daily settlements.

This is a new business here; an entirely new organization with big men and plenty of capital behind it and our men who show industry and ability can step right into good positions as Branch and Sub-Branch Managers paying $75 to $150 weekly.

You owe it to your future financial independence, to yourself and to your family to investigate this today.

Ask for MR. BAKER,
220 S. State-st., Suite 1030.

MEN AND WOMEN—
Residents of Chicago Only.
MEN—WOMEN
From Every Walk of Life.
21 to 50.

All your life you have waited for an opportunity to better yourself—an opportunity to give yourself and family the finer things of life—vacations, beautiful clothes, education, etc.

I have pointed the way to Success for thousands of ambitious men and women. Let me talk to you. Possibly I can show you the way to finer things, possibly I can tell you things you never dreamed of.

I can give many persons spare time work—in your own home. No selling, no canvassing, and plenty of money. Possibly you can take advantage of my offer.

Anyway, write me a letter, tell me about yourself, your education, your desires, your present position, anything that might guide me in helping you.

Your letters will be held in strictest confidence and returned to you when I finish studying them.

I need you if your ambition makes you restless with the humdrum of life and if you have an inborn craving for more money than you now seem able to earn [you may need me for the same reason] drop me a letter right away and let's arrange for a personal interview.

A REAL CHANCE TO MAKE REAL MONEY.

We have received so many requests from those who are earning extra money by doing part time work to continue the special meetings which we have been holding on Tuesday evenings that we have decided to accede to the request.

We have had large, interesting, and enthusiastic meetings, which are proving of very great help to those who attend in increasing their earning power. Our new plan has met with a very hearty response on the part of everybody. In brief, it is as follows:

1. You get $5 in cash for every qualified buyer you bring out to our property at Westchester, whether they buy or not. Many of our part time salespeople are earning from $10 to $20 per week extra by this method alone.

2. In case your prospect should buy, you receive a commission in addition to the $5.

3. In case two or more of your clients buy and the deals are closed before Aug. 1 you receive a four day free vacation trip to Mackinac Island and return, all expenses paid.

Be sure to be at our next meeting, Tuesday, July 10, at 8 p. m. sharp.

1320 N. State
CHICAGO'S FINEST CO-OPERATIVE BUILDING.

There will be available for early fall occupancy one of the choicest 6 room apartments in this building. The arrangement of rooms is unusual and should interest the discriminating purchaser for an apartment of this size. The present owner is taking a larger apartment in the building—which makes it possible to offer this charming apartment for sale. The equity price is very reasonable and the monthly assessments are considerably less than you would expect to pay for an apartment of this type.

There are also ready for immediate occupancy a number of 7 and 8 room apartments—some with two-story living rooms and the duplex arrangement.

Apartments can be purchased on the Rental-Purchase Plan—which is probably no higher than you would pay for rent for an equally desirable apartment in this location.

1320 NORTH STATE-ST. is in successful operation and houses many of Chicago's prominent families.

Apartments always open for inspection.

999 LAKE SHORE-DR.
100% CO-OPERATIVE.
There is no location equal to it in all Chicago. There is no location which will be appreciated more by its owners in years to come. You can become part owner now of this property by purchasing one of the two available 11 rm. apts. at a lower price than will ever be quoted again for a similiar apt. on Lake Shore-drive. A library with wood burning fire place, living room 15x28, both paneled in mahogany to the ceiling, dining room 14x20, sun room 12x14, 4 chambers 13x18.6 each with bath; 2 servants' rooms with bath, balcony breakfast room for servants, spacious butler's pantry and kitchen with electrical refrigeration, individual laundries and extra maid's room on 10th floor. This property is financed with a 15 year loan at 5½% interest, with no prepayment. A real opportunity for those who know values.

WRIGLEY BUILDING.

CO-OPERATIVE APTS.
If you want a moderately priced co-operative apt. this is the last chance to get it. We have a few apts. left in the 3 story walk-up buildings, and when these are sold there will be no more east of Broadway and south of Grace-st. There are no other apts. for sale today except in the tall bldgs., and priced accordingly. Our locations are just as good, our prices are less than half. Take the same advantage the earlier buyers have. A LOW PRICED APT. IN A HIGH PRICED LOCALITY. Walk up to your apartment and SAVE ONE-HALF IN PRICE and upkeep. Just use common sense in buying a co-operative home.

OTHER BUSINESS.

Famous architect designed my wonderful apartment hotel, located in Gold Coast. Opened two years ago. A friend of mine had me invest with him in another business, now it is necessary for me to take over the other business or lose my investment, hence I have no time to look after my apartment hotel. I must sell or lease it. If I could sell the other business, would be glad to do so, but it seems impossible. If you want a real apartment hotel which has paid me $1,000 a month cash after making all mortgage payments, expenses, etc., see me at once, will accept clear vacant property, good stocks, bonds or mortgages secured by real estate or reasonable cash payment. Will make attractive terms. I hate to sell this place, it's a case of sell it or neglect it. If you are a broker tell me, or I will pay no commission. Rare opportunity for some one. Give phone number. Address Y 497, Tribune.

REAL ESTATE LOANS.

SECOND MORTGAGE LOANS

Sometimes an opportunity, sometimes a convenience, sometimes a necessity prompt a Chicago home owner to place a second mortgage on his home.

The cost of money borrowed for a necessity should be no greater than the cost of money borrowed for convenience sake nor for an opportunity.

We would never encourage a home owner to obtain funds on his home for use in a speculative venture, but where it is convenient or necessary or where there is an opportunity to use funds for a constructive purpose it is sometimes advisable to borrow money on a second mortgage.

Where there is need and when the time comes the average home owner does not know where to go.

Whatever the need The Chicago Morris Plan Bank, acting as agent for a substantial loan fund, has money to loan and facilities to offer to home owners whereby they can arrange for a second mortgage at a reasonable cost and upon convenient terms.

We make loans for a period of one to three years, with interest at 6% per annum and a commission of 3½% for one year, 6½% for two years, and 9% for three years, and the monthly payments may be as low as 2% plus accrued interest each month.

The entire plan developed by The Chicago Morris Plan Bank as agent for the handling of second mortgages is geared down to meet the requirements of the home owner of this vicinity. We will be glad to have you come in and find out all about the proposition which we are offering in this direction.

$10,000 YEARLY
and Upward Opportunity

Owing to the advent of our new noncompetitive product, our business has been revolutionized. All sales activities are being discontinued from the home factory. We are establishing successful distributing and sales agencies throughout the entire country to take care of the tremendous volume of business that is assured. This is one of those rare opportunities that come only once in a decade for morally and financially responsible men desiring to get somewhere in the business world. Sales experience not necessary. $1,000 to $1,500 cash deposit against merchandise necessary. Distributing centers will be established in the following cities and surrounding territories, viz.: Milwaukee, Madison, and Oshkosh, Wisconsin; Rockford, Peoria, and Springfield, Illinois; northern Indiana and southern Michigan. We also have a few other virgin distributing centers. Cook County excluded. Applications must be by letter. Tell us something of your past and in which district you would be interested. Give telephone number. Interview arranged later. All correspondence treated confidentially. Address D M 1, Tribune.

A REAL SNAP—A WONDERFUL INDUStrial poster business—52 posters and all other material for increasing man power. Complete and ready to go and earn enormous profits. Created by 10 big employers for their own association. Cost $40,000 and eighteen months' hard work. Employes prefer these posters. Nothing else like them. Brand new—as yet sold in only one city. Can sell at popular price and Ford-ize posters. Drawings, plates, sales plan, etc., can be bought at low price. Should rapidly outsell all others. Millions have been made on plant posters, yet the market is barely scratched. If you mean business address D M 14, Tribune.

A REAL OPPORTUNITY.

$10,000 in cash and the service of a man to take ½ interest in an established business, doing $25,000 yearly and will double the amount in next year; $100 weekly as salary and about $5,000 at the end of the yr as profit. The bus. will stand the fullest investigation. In answer give full particulars regarding age, etc. Address Y S 556, Tribune.

Studebaker Offers
RECORD BREAKING VALUES

1. Rock bottom prices that will net buyers savings of $150 to $300 on any car purchased.

2. An unusually liberal time payment plan.

3. The protection of the famous Studebaker Used Car Pledge that guarantees 5 days' free driving trial on any car purchased.

STUDEBAKER COACH. A special six that was given very good attention by the original owner; oiled and greased every 500 miles; result is today it looks and runs as though it were direct from the factory. It's the last word in fine appearance and spirited performance. Has a wealth of equipment; will be sold at once for $645.

CHRYSLER SEDAN. Here is a beautiful six with unusually snappy performance. The finish, upholstery, general coach work, etc., are in wonderful shape; equipped with 4 wheel brakes, spare tire, bumpers, etc. Like new in every respect but price. $585.

HAYNES SEDAN. A big, powerful car that's in dandy all round condition. In good running order; has spotlight, snubbers, bumpers, heater, trunk, etc. Clearance price, $395.

OLDSMOBILE COACH, 1925. Very clean throughout. The motor is efficient, and the tires have little mileage; extras are bumpers, spare tire, spotlight, etc. Today, $285.

NASH ROADSTER, Adv. 6. Snappy appearance and spirited performance; equipped with 4 wheel brakes, snubbers, bumpers, spare tire, spotlight, etc. Just reduced, so it will be sold immediately at $585.

OAKLAND COACH. Was owned by a retired business man who gave it unusual attention. Today it looks and runs like new; equipped with 4 wheel brakes, snubbers, bumpers, spare tire, spotlight, etc. Will not remain long at $485.

FLINT COUPE, 4 pass. Victoria, that's an ideal car for the business man or small family. It's in dandy condition and the motor is excellent; equipped with 4 wheel brakes, snubbers, heater, spare tire, driving light, bumpers, etc. A rare buy for $450.

STUDEBAKER SEDAN. We recommend this as one of our outstanding bargains. It's a special six with expensive mohair upholstery. The finish does not show a mar. Equipped with heater, shutter front, bumpers, spare tire, etc. A remarkable value for $325.

PAIGE BROUGHAM. One of our best values; equipped with 4 wheel brakes, driving light, heater, spare tire, trunk, etc. Here is an attractive car with spirited performance; only $495.

CHANDLER BROUGHAM. You can make a substantial saving at our special reduced price. This car was only driven Sundays and evenings for pleasure purposes, so today it's in new car condition. Equipped with 4 wheel brakes, spare tire, trunk, etc.

PACKARD SEDAN. Very late model that looks as though direct from the factory. Every detail is in wonderful condition; equipped with 4 wheel brakes, snubbers, driving light, bumpers, spare tire, foot rests, etc. You can make a big saving at our price of $1,650.

STUDEBAKER SEDAN. Big Six 7 pass. The finish glistens and the upholstery looks new; has 2 spare tires mounted along the sides, driving light, snubbers, trunk, bumpers, etc. Today, $445.

BUICK SEDAN, Master Six, that looks and runs better than many new cars selling for over $1,500. Equipped with 4 wheel brakes, snubbers, spare tire, bumpers, etc. Reduced to $1,050.

PIERCE-ARROW LIMOUSINE. Was given exceptionally good care, so it's in tip-top shape today. Equipped with heater, spare tire, snubbers, bumpers, etc.; runs fine. Reduced to $345.

HUDSON COACH. Will satisfy you in every detail. Looks and runs like new; equipped with driving light, bumper, spare tire, shutter front, etc. Special for $685.

CADILLAC SEDAN. A big, comfortable 5 pass. that's in exceptionally good running condition; equipped with heater, trunk, shutter front, driving light, spare tire, spotlight, etc. It's unusually clean throughout. Will not remain long at $685.

STUDEBAKER VICTORIA, Dictator 4 pass. coupe. Actually driven only 3 months. It's absolutely brand new in every respect. The tires show no mileage and the expensive mohair upholstery looks new. There's not a mar on the finish. Equipment includes 4 wheel brakes, bumpers, spare tire, etc. You can make a big saving at our special price of $885.

WILLYS-KNIGHT BROUGHAM. A quiet, smooth running car that's the last word in appearance. Finished in a beautiful blue; extras are snubbers, spotlight, trunk, spare tire, etc. Will not remain long at $595.

OFFERS

Extra REDUCTION
During This Sale.

TWO GOOD FORD BUYS. A 2 door sedan, with excellent tires, shock absorbers, good motor and paint at $125. And a Coupe in excellent mechanical condition, with fair paint, way below value at $200.

CHEVROLET COACH. Appears to have never been neglected mechanically. Paint and upholstery excellent. Good tires, and equipped to drive; $275.

JEWETT BROUGHAM 5 PASS. Here's a car undoubtedly the best buy in the city. We are sure it received good care. Original baked enamel finish looks new; motor O. K. Trunk; good tires, etc.; $275.

DODGE SEDAN. One that'll give you very satisfactory service. It's in extra good shape; tires good, and "clean" from front to rear. Dodge buyers would do very well to see it; $275.

MOON SEDAN, 5 PASS. A good standard 4 door car, with good paint; almost new tires, and so good mechanically that it should please the most exacting buyer. Fully equipped; $325.

JEWETT COACH, 6-55 MODEL. Recent type, made a special for today's sale. Price is lowest ever; its general condition is better than excellent; has 4 wheel brakes; orig. fin.; good tires; $425.

BUICK SEDAN, 5 PASS. Our expert stamp this one 100% mechanically. Paint, upholstery and tires are extra good; equipment complete. By far the finest Buick buy we have ever handled; $550.

PEERLESS SEDAN, 5 PASS. A value the equal of which we believe never reaches these columns. Has new paint, 6 good tires, motor smooth and quiet. Would cost you at least $200 more elsewhere; $475.

HUDSON 4 DOOR BROUGHAM. Because of its new finish, splendid coach and mechanical condition, and complete equipment, we believe this is an extraordinary value. Compare it with the car you have been considering, then decide; $575.

NASH ADVANCED 6 ROADSTER 1926. Here's a peppy performer in dandy shape that comes to us with less than half the mileage cars of this age and type generally have had; equipped; $525.

PAIGE 6-72 BROUGHAM, 5 PASS. Has the appearance that stamps it as new. Space does not permit detailing mechanical refinements, but we are very sure it will exceed your expectations. Equipment first class and complete. Get set for years and years of good service; $625.

ESSEX 1928 SEDAN. Traded after receiving little mileage, consequently in top notch order. At a money saving price; $650.

AUBURN STRAIGHT 8 SEDAN. With custom style slanting windshield, trunk, and in elegant coach and mechanical condition. Equipped; $1,050.

CADILLAC 1928, 341, CONVERTIBLE COUPE. Received with 10 scant weeks' service, the paper is still on the foot rails and lacks nothing in the way of equipment. This is a current model, with rumble seat. We will quote an attractive figure for quick disposal.

PAIGE DEMONSTRATOR. This "6-75" Sedan has never been out of our possession, handled by an expert at all times, and thoroughly cleaned every day. Its mileage is low. From a practical standpoint, its even better today that it was when new. Equipped; $1,175.

LINCOLN
Quality and Service
at Average Car Cost

Contrary to the belief of many automobile enthusiasts, it is not necessary to possess wealth in order to own and drive that supreme motor car—a Lincoln. The splendid reconditioned Lincolns, offered exclusively by AUTHORIZED DEALERS, put Lincoln luxury within the reach of the man who would otherwise purchase a new car of ordinary quality. His Lincoln will give him more miles of motoring, with greater comfort and satisfaction, than he could get anywhere else on a similar investment.

The reconditioned models sold by AUTHORIZED LINCOLN DEALERS are, almost without exception, as serviceable as the day they left the factory. Each is put in perfect mechanical condition by specially trained Lincoln mechanics before being offered to a new owner. Each has the appearance of pristine newness, every mark of use having been erased in the reconditioning process. You will probably have to be told which cars are new and which reconditioned when you visit the showrooms of your nearest AUTHORIZED DEALER.

Be sure to see him before you buy your next car. He'll give you the history of every reconditioned Lincoln on his floors, explain the unqualified guarantee that goes with each, and arrange terms to suit your convenience. Your present car may be applied as part payment.

NORTH SIDE
PACKARD
6310 BROADWAY
SEMI-ANNUAL SALE
Featuring 50 Special Values
HERE ARE A FEW:

PACKARD 6, 5-33 CURRENT SERIES COUPE. Used so little, still has that new look; in fact, we defy any one to distinguish it from new. It is completely equipped and compared with new car prices nets you a handsome saving. This ought to be gone in 48 hours. $1,950.

PACKARD 6, 4-33 CLUB SEDAN. About a year old, yet given mileage so low it is in almost new condition. Equipment is good, and of course complete. It will pay you to investigate this, even if you have to come 75 miles to see it. $1,750.

PACKARD 8, 3-43 CLUB SEDAN. $5,200 was paid for this particular car. Was used carefully at all times, in service about a year, and is in splendid condition through and through. Do not pass up the opportunity of making a big saving, especially at this figure of $2,750.

PACKARD 6, 3-33 7 PASS. SEDAN. We have rebuilt this car, including bringing motor up to latest type, repainted the body, and it presents practically the same appearance as the present car. Has cowl band and lights and full equipment. You may wonder how we can offer this at the price, but that's how big a bargain it is. $1,200.

1927 BUICK COUPE. Driven 9,000 miles. First class condition. $1,075.

1928 CHRYSLER 72 SEDAN. Try to tell this from a new one. Will stand comparison with any you can find. $1,200.

Also, Cars $25 up.

2-43 TOURING CAR.

This car has been privately owned and driven and is one that any man would be proud to own. It is smart looking, high powered, and offered with new car guarantee because of the thorough rebuilding it has received in our shops. The finish is new. If you are looking for a high grade car that is distinctively individual and different from anything else on the streets this will more than please you. This particular one is an exceptional offering and will be sold at a price that represents a tremendous saving over what it would cost to duplicate. Do not put off seeing and riding in it, if interested, as there will be many after it at $1,650.

Broader outside demand, coupled with the smallest receipts since the week ended May 12, sent hog prices to new high levels for the year during last week. General average price figured $10.70, the highest since week ended Oct. 22, against $10.25 a week ago and $8.80 a year ago. Late sales were 50@60c above the close the previous week and $3.00@3.50 above the low spot of the year. Outside buyers took 26 per cent of arrivals, against only 22 per cent a week ago and [illegible] per cent two weeks ago.

Trading on the week-end session in the hog market was on a catch as catch can basis, closing at the low point of the day. Declines of mostly 10c were largely due to poorer quality. General average was forced down 5c at [illegible], with extreme top off 10c at $11.50. About 4,000 were left at the close.

Cattle Highest Since 1920.

Cattle prices last week averaged highest since 1920 on the smallest receipts of the year. There were only two smaller weekly receipts recorded since 1921. The general average price at $14.85 compares with $11.65 a year ago and with $9.70 two years ago. Six head reached the $16.00 line, with $15.95 the peak for load lots.

Prices were above any corresponding week since 1920. About 5,000 cattle were listed at $15.00 and above and 950 at $15.75 and above. The previous week only 531 sold at $15.00 and above and during week ending Jan. 21, when a top of $18.75 was paid, less than 2,000 were listed at $15.00 and above.

Lamb Supply Below Normal.

Producers withheld supplies as lamb prices swung downwards during the first two days of last week and part of the loss was recovered on surprisingly small receipts after the holiday. The week's total at 48,000 is within [illegible] head of the smallest since April, [illegible], when railroad strikes curtailed the supply. Receipts last week totaled [illegible]. Following a break Monday and Tuesday, prices swung back to a top of $17.[illegible] Friday, against $16.40 at the start of the week and $16.25 late the previous week. Prices are above any corresponding period since 1920.

Receipts for Monday are estimated at 18,000 cattle, 47,000 hogs, and [illegible] sheep, against 15,974 cattle, 47,132 hogs and 14,907 sheep a week ago, and [illegible] cattle, 53,293 hogs, and 16,160 sheep the corresponding day a year ago. Next week's receipts are estimated at [illegible] cattle, 140,000 hogs, and 53,000 sheep, against 59,306 cattle, 147,392 hogs, and 56,715 sheep a year ago.
